by MARY REIFSCHNEIDER

"The Sports World," a recreation complex including a domed stadium with a seating capacity for 110,000, is being proposed for Schaumburg on 97 acres across from the WGN towers on Rte. 53.

The enclosed arena, with underground parking, could be home to major Chicago sports clubs now seeking new quarters, but it would also be available for local and amateur teams, its developer Lee Romano told the Herald Wednesday.

The 97 acres, fronting on Rte. 53 near the Interstate-90 breakoff, are not annexed to Schaumburg now. Romano has options on adjacent parcels that would make the land contiguous to the village. Mayor Robert O. Atcher told the Herald the land could be annexed by referendum.

Romano said he expects to bring the proposal before the Zoning Board of Appeals in the next several weeks.

"I HAVE BEEN approached by major sports groups seeking new locations that could occupy The Sports World," Romano said.

Park Dist. To Meet

The Elk Grove Village Park District will hold its annual meeting today at 3 p.m. in the district office, 499 Biesterfeld Road. The agenda includes adoption of the appropriation ordinance and citizen awards of merit.

mano said. He did not specify which teams are interested.

Atcher said a domed stadium is feasible for the Northwest area, especially since several of the major league Chicago teams are looking for new homes. The professional baseball and football leagues are encouraging Chicago teams to find larger quarters that will increase attendance and revenues.

A domed sports stadium was once discussed for Arlington Park, but plans never got off the ground and apparently were scuttled when the race track was purchased by Gulf-Western.

The Sports World, with a dome that opens and closes, would have twice the seating capacity as the Houston Astro-dome, now the only completed enclosed stadium, which holds 41,500 spectators.

In addition to Sports World, the complex would include "The Adventure," a center with restaurants, lounges, a roller skating and ice skating rinks, caves and other activities, Romano said.

ROMANO, WHO IS THE developer of the Planet Project in Schaumburg, noted for the proposed 113-story building, has other parcels to be developed in Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights.

The developer noted that the sports complex, which would cost upwards of $100 million, would not disturb any community or its residents. It is surrounded on three sides by the Cook County Forest Preserve.

Romano said that Sports World will centrally serve any area of Northwest Cook and North DuPage Counties that already has a population of over one million and will grow to many times that in the next 10 years.

He has not announced a timetable for building the stadium complex yet.

Romano expects to run into trouble from the Cook County Forest Preserve over the site. He has heard rumors that the forest preserve wants to add the 97 acres to its 3,500 acre holdings in the Schaumburg-Elk Grove vicinity.

"THE FOREST PRESERVE has ample land without this 97 acres. I intend to fight with everything I have for this," he said.

The site is now a tree nursery.

Immunization Day

It was incorrectly printed in the Herald yesterday that it was immunization day for Dist. 59 school children.

Dist. 59 children in kindergarten through third grade will be immunized next Wednesday at each of the schools. This includes Queen of the Rosary School and St. Zachary School.

This is a Rubella virus vaccine for German measles, provided free by Cook County.

ELK GROVE HIGH School students rest outside the school near a drainage ditch on Elk Grove Boulevard during their lunch hour. Homeowners from around the corner on Tower Lane, after petitioning the police chief, received passage of a no parking ordinance on Tower and Middlebury Lanes to curb students from loitering on their property.

They complained about littering and parked cars. One resident commented, "This is just too much for us to take."

Hamilton: Halt O'Hare Expansion

Tom Hamilton, chairman of the Elk Grove Village Aviation Committee, has called for a halt to expansion of O'Hare International Airport.

"We think it's time to call a halt to the expansion of O'Hare Field," said Hamilton, speaking before the Elk Grove Village Board Tuesday.

"THERE ARE SOME pretty serious problems confronting Elk Grove Village," he said. "Things are quickly coming to a head between the City of Chicago and surrounding villages."

A third airport is already under construction "right here," he said, pointing to a map of Elk Grove's neighbor to the east.

He said plans for expansion of O'Hare made in 1964 are coming true.

Hamilton said the city plans to put in a triple runway system in three directions for a total of nine runways.

CONSTRUCTION of a sixth major runway (northeast-southwest) began several months ago and plans are now being prepared for three more.

Neighbors At Work

Group Meets Today

Neighbors at Work (NAW) organization will meet today in open session at 8 p.m. in the Grove Junior High School, 777 Elk Grove Blvd., Elk Grove Village.

John Sheehan, who is expected to replace Mrs. Rita Gara as president, said the bill which would bring migrant housing standards in Illinois in line with federal regulations will be reviewed.

The bill is sponsored by Stated Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights.

Boy, 2, In Need of Blood

Blood donors for a 2-year-old boy with hemophilia are being sought by the Lutheran Church of the Holy Spirit, 666 Elk Grove Blvd., Elk Grove Village.

The church is holding a blood drive for the boy next Tuesday from 5 to 6:30 p.m. A Michael Reese Hospital blood unit will be available on the church grounds to draw the blood, according to Mrs. Jeanne Hoppe from the church.

"We need at least 25 more donors," Mrs. Hoppe said. She explained that the Hamilton and Warren Edwards, a committee member, urged village support of the O'Hare Area Noise Abatement Council, a group of about 18 municipalities formed last year by George Franks of Wood Dale.

Edwards said legislators must become concerned because the municipalities represent 400,000 voters.

Chicago Man Held

On Bond Charges

A Chicago man, wanted by Chicago police for allegedly forfeiting $20,000 bond on a theft charge, was apprehended Tuesday by Elk Grove Village patrolman Kenneth Deters.

James A. Tanksley, 26, was stopped in his car by Deters for driving with expired Indiana license plates.

Tanksley, also wanted on five traffic warrants, was held for Chicago police.

"We've been shoved under the table long enough," he said.

Edwards told of plans by Chicago to obtain 300 acres at the northeast corner of the airport, presently a military reservation, for a $1 donation to the Department of Defense. The land is valued at $1,480,000, he claimed. "If you know the structure of Chicago politics this is going to go through."

Edwards said residents can oppose the land transfer and future expansion of O'Hare by attending a meeting May 27 at Penton High School in Bensenville. "If

Wisconsin Youths

Visit Elk Grove

Thirty youngsters from the Appleton, Wis., YMCA Tri-Y Club visited Elk Grove Village last weekend as part of a Chicago area sightseeing tour.

The children, seventh and eighth graders, wanted to see a planned community, said Mrs. Stan Hicks, of 902 Creighton Ave.

The tour also provided Mrs. Hicks and Mrs. Norma Toler, of 1300 Carlisle Ave., a visit with their sister, Mrs. Maxine Van- evenhoven, YMCA program director.

"They were impressed with our neat, clean village and suburban living and amazed how the village had grown so rapidly from a cornfield to 20,000," Mrs. Hicks said.

Population Group To Visit Crane

Congressman Philip Crane, R-13th Dist., Con-Con delegates and senators will be hearing from members of the Northwest Zero Population Growth chapter, (ZPG) it was decided at the second organizational meeting Tuesday in Elk Grove Village.

Crane will be visited by four members of the group, "to let him know we're concerned," Mrs. Jean Beal, of Elk Grove Village, said.

Crane recently voted against Pres. Nixon's plans for a commission to study population.

Mrs. Beal explained, "We're hoping to fill him in a little bit on the population and ow we feel about it."

problem. We want him to know we exist. Those visiting Crane with Mrs. Beal will be John Peters of Roselle, Mrs. Lyla Haddow of Mount Prospect and Peter Huebner of Des Plaines.

CON-CON DELEGATES will also be contacted by the group. "Their due process, equal protection section could preclude any abortion law," Mrs. Beal explained.

Students from Elk Grove, Arlington, Forest View and Wheeling high schools were present at the meeting, branching off into their own group to discuss student plans to aid ZPG goals.

According to one of the students, they will be distributing ZPG literature in the shopping centers this summer.

A letter from the national office presented the official ZPG stand on U.S. military aid in Cambodia, stating "ZPG cannot condone escalation."

Mrs. Beal made a plea for interested persons to volunteer their time as speakers to present the ZPG philosophy and information.

ZPG is an organization working in coordination with anti-pollution groups, which advocates each family to have only two children.

Persons interested in joining the local chapter may contact Mrs. Beal at 439-0055.

According to chairman Paul J. Zubak, the program is free and each child who comes with his bike to Lions Park between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. will receive reflective tape.

Zubak and co-chairman Ed Madden will also apply the reflective tapes to bikes May 23 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Grove and Park and Shop centers in Elk Grove Village.

I'm going to tag the kids even if they don't have a bike, Zubak said, explaining he had lots of tape for the safety program.

AFTER A stroke 16 months ago, which paralyzed her left side, Rosemary Bornhofen of Prospect Heights is now able to assist her 16-month old daughter Gina, in flower arranging, drive a car and play golf. She was recently named "Handicapped Mother of the Year" by the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago, where she received physical therapy for seven months.

She Battled Tragedy, Won Walking Away

by BETSY BROOKER

Sixteen months ago in a hospital bed, Rosemary Bornhofen was lying in a hospital bed, completely paralyzed on her left side.

This Mother's Day, Rosemary was awarded a medallion and named "Handicapped Mother of the Year" by the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago.

The 28-year-old Prospect Heights resident walked up to the stand, completely unaided to receive her award. A slight limp was the only trace left of the stroke she suffered a year and a half ago, after a blood clot blocked a main artery in her brain.

The tragedy was threefold for Rosemary because she had just returned from the hospital the day before after the birth of her first child, Gina Marie. And her father had died of cancer while she was in the hospital delivering Gina.

TODAY ROSEMARY can sit in her kitchen and casually joke about her misfortune over a cup of coffee. Her sense of humor has carried her through the past year.

She is an attractive young woman with a windswept pixie hair cut and an open smile. While she is dark, her young daughter is very fair with soft blond hair.

Gina has probably fared the best since her mother's stroke because she has benefited from the love of at least four mother figures. Rosemary, two grandmothers and an aunt.

The stroke was a severe blow for the whole family, but they all pitched in and lent support, said Rosemary.

"I was asleep when it happened. It was early Sunday morning, a day after I got home from the hospital. My husband thought I was having a nightmare and woke me up. I had a terrible headache. He tried to help me walk to the bathroom so I could take an aspirin but I kept falling down. I couldn't stand up."

"HE CALLED MY brother and sister-in-law then, and they came over and watched my baby while my husband drove me to the hospital."

Rosemary stayed in the hospital until February, when she was transferred to the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago. "While I was in the hospital, everything was done for me, including bed baths. As soon as I got to the institute they put me into a plastic wheel chair and took me into the shower room. I never realized what a luxury a shower is before."

Everything was different at the institute, said Rosemary. They encouraged you to help yourself. I didn't get breakfast in bed anymore but had to wheel myself down to the cafeteria.

When Rosemary first arrived at the institute, she couldn't move any part of the left side of her body. It was a trying time because there was no way for the doctors to know if the brain cells had been permanently damaged.

"They put me on an extensive therapy program so my muscles would be limber in case my damaged brain cells revived. Some people never recover from a stroke."

ROSEMARY WAS also taught how to work with one arm. They brought my baby down and the head nurse in the pediatrics department at Wesley Memorial Hospital came over to teach me how to hold feed and diaper Gina with only my right arm.

"I had a special curved knife so I could cut my meat with one hand by rocking it. I've still got it but don't use it anymore."

"I also had a board with all sorts of hooks, locks and gadgets to practice on. One day I was having trouble with one of the hooks, and a man next to me with an artificial arm offered to help me."

"There are so many people worse off than you at the institute, you can't feel sorry for yourself."

ROSEMARY'S MOTHER agreed saying, "I thought I would be depressed by the patients when I visited Rosemary, but they are so friendly and cheerful they make you feel good."

"The first day I arrived at the institute my roommate asked me if I wanted to go to the movies with her. I didn't know what she was talking about but later learned that the patients are taken on a trip once a week."

"And there was a Negro patient there we called 'the general.' He had been shot five times during a hold up. I asked him one day if they had caught the robbers and he said he knew who they were. So I told him he was lucky they were friends or he would have gotten it worse."

No one ever cries at the institute, added Rosemary.

In March, Rosemary was able to go home and visit the institute on an out-patient basis. By this time the muscles in her left leg had begun to move and she could walk with the aid of a brace and a cane.

BY THE MIDDLE OF the summer, she was able to move her left arm and throw away her sling. Two months later she could walk without the brace.

Rosemary's mother stayed with her during her first few months at home but now Rosemary is doing most of the housework herself and even driving.

I feel more appreciative of simple things now, said Rosemary, "like just moving around."

"You never realize how lucky you are until something like this happens to you."

ALBERTS HAD also said earlier that a phone call to Centex informing them of the meeting would be made this week.

As of Wednesday noon according to Winkle, no one at Centex was yet informed by the association of the meeting.

He also stated that to his knowledge any complaints from that area had been investigated at the time of complaint.

A Fire Call Too Late?

by JUDY BRANDES

"My first thought was 'They didn't call us soon enough.'"

The speaker was Bruce Winter, a full-time fireman in the Rolling Meadows fire department.

He and 14 other full-time and volunteers who led the battle to stop the fire in a Three Fountains apartment building 10 days ago were discussing what happened from the moment they got the call to their return to the fire station several hours later.

"When we pulled out of the station on Meadow Drive, I could see the smoke already and knew we were in trouble," Charlie Sellards, the first officer to arrive at the fire said. Sellards radioed Arlington Heights for mutual assistance while en route to Three Fountains.

"Flames were already coming out the patio doors and that first floor apartment was burned out when we got there," Sellards said.

HE AND THE MEN on the first engine to arrive went after the apartment where the fire began. "We thought we had it out until we went around the south end and saw it going up the stairwell. We couldn't get in. The heat was too much."

On the way into Three Fountains, the firemen's hearts were pumping madly, they agree. "I had Thumper with me all the way," Bill Schmidt, engineer on the first engine to arrive, said.

The men knew 5201 Carriage Way Drive was a building built before the life safety code was adopted by the city. They were expecting the fire to be bad, but didn't realize until later what type of fire it was.

"It was a hidden fire," Fire Chief Thomas Fogerty explained. Fogerty and four firemen were attending class at Harper Junior College when they heard about Three Fountains. "No matter what wall we took off, we always found fire. Once the fire got into the hallway, I knew it would move to other areas."

BEFORE FOGERTY arrived, Sellards was the officer in charge. "You call for all this equipment and it comes in. They're asking where you want them to go. I had to make a lot of decisions in a few seconds."

The first three engines to arrive, Rolling Meadows two and the aerial ladder from Arlington Heights, didn't get slowed down with traffic. The others, including the Mount Prospect snorkel, had trouble getting through the traffic which materialized as more people came to watch the fire.

Engineer Schmidt was responsible for laying the lines and hooking up to the fire hydrant. "I went past the first hydrant because people were standing there and I didn't see it," Schmidt said.

With a large fire, the department hooks up "hard sections" of hose to get enough water. "I was afraid we weren't going to get the hard section on the hydrant."

SCHMIDT AND FIREMAN Jack Fahn found the hydrant caps too low to the ground and when they finally got the top cap off, they had to clean the mud off before the hoses could be attached.

People trapped on the balconies were helped off by Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights men who arrived early on the scene.

"We got the police chief and two others off the back balcony and then went on up to the roof," Assistant Fire Chief Don Marshall, a volunteer, said. From the front, fire watchers couldn't see the men on the roof, who were working in the trough on the "M-shaped" roof.

"We stayed up there knocking holes in the roof to ventilate the fire until the tar started to bubble and the chief ordered us off," Marshall continued.

Red hot railings, intense black smoke and searing heat prevented teams of men from penetrating into the hallways. "We crawled in on our bellies from the balcony on the second floor with fire above and around us," Ed Retzer, a volunteer, explained. "It's a scary feeling when you turn to crawl back out in a dark room and run into a wall every way you turn."

RESCUE AND SEARCH teams couldn't get into the building.

"We couldn't get in, the smoke was so black and thick," Sellards said.

The places the fire burned into were scattered. "You have to remember, a fireman is only in one place. We couldn't see all the places the fire was breaking out," Bruce Winter said.

"The men got mad at me when I ordered them out of the building," Chief Fogerty chuckled. "They couldn't see what was going on, of course, but I could see it was dangerous."

No fireman can recall what he did when. "The only reason I knew it was 2:30 in the morning was that I had scratched myself when I climbed into the attic and realized later it hurt. The watch was on my arm when I looked at the scratch," Marshall said.

"IT WAS A TERRIFIC stop on the fire," Fogerty said. "fire chiefs from other areas complimented us on how much we were able to save."

Dick Blane, who singed his ears working on the second and third floors, told how the only empty apartment in the building wasn't damaged too much. "If those tenants had only used common sense in closing doors, the fire probably wouldn't have gone as far as it did. When we went back the next day, there were some places, like closets, which had smoke damage, but no water and things weren't burned. We pulled three mini coats unharmed out of one closet."

Chief Fogerty attributes the spread of the fire to the fact that the door to the apartment where it started was left open.

"We didn't realize how fast it was going and didn't know it had gotten to the other end when we arrived," Winter said. "When I saw those flames, though I knew that fire had a good start before we got there. My first thought was 'They didn't call us soon enough.'"

"SIDEWALK CHIEFS don't realize that as they are running out of a fire, the poor firemen have to be running

Woods Doesn't Mind 'Pig' Call

by CYNTHIA TIVERS

Sheriff Joe Woods is a law and order man who says he practices justice.

He thinks the use of Mace is humane and he dislikes Mayor Daley's politics. He also says he would have walked along with those construction workers last week in New York. Those construction workers marched along Wall Street abusing students and demanding that flags lowered in memory of the four slain Kent students, he raised.

The tall gray-haired Woods spoke to the Palatine Kiwanis Club about Law Enforcement in Cook County. He told his audience he doesn't mind it when he or his riot-control trained men are called "pigs" by protestors. "Pig to me" he said, "stands for pride, integrity and guts. It's abuse of my men that takes control. This abuse comes in the form of rock-throwing and being spit at in the face."

WOODS CONTINUED to get nods or grunts of approval from his audience as he spoke. They enjoyed his frequent attacks on student demonstrators and the media. He seemed to be voicing their thoughts. But he was appealing to their fight about the conditions in society. He seemed to be telling them, "Don't worry. Sheriff Joe won't let those kids destroy your property. But we'll only spray them with Mace. It won't hurt them. They'll just want to go home."

He also told them, "Sure some student violators are Communist inspired," and, "I do not like some TV people. They are instigators of some of our problems in Cook County and in the rest of the country."

He thinks they (television) agitated demonstrators at the Democratic Convention but that the press wouldn't normally instigate a riot. "Newspapers hardly create problems," he remarked. "It's when people see themselves on the 'boob tube' they start to misbehave."

About the Contract Buyers League evictions, Woods said he knows he was put in the middle by Mayor Daley to arouse public sentiment against him (Woods). But he said he's been put in the middle for a long time and that he's used to it.

About 1,100 students from ten area high schools toured the Harper College campus in Palatine Tuesday to get a better look at how a community college education could serve them.

The students, all juniors and seniors, were taking part in "Career Day," a program designed to allow students from the area to look at specific aspects of Harper's program and educational equipment.

For example, on the second floor of Building D, Kent Williams of Barrington, who is majoring in electronics, showed 20 students from Forest View in Arlington Heights how an analog computer could plot the theoretical path of an object fired into the sky.

At another table, students from the college's radio club described how their amateur radio equipment had monitored Red Cross rescue operations in tornado-stricken Lubbock, Tex.

SIXTEEN TOUR guides, including Mimi Hickman of Palatine, shuttled the groups of students through the Harper buildings. The groups were scheduled to see about 16 exhibits.

"It took my group three hours in the morning to make the tour," Mimi said. The average tour was supposed to take about 90 minutes, she said.

Students like Pam Siewenie of Rolling Meadows, a Forest View senior, examined Harper attentively. She plans to take liberal arts courses, especially English, at Harper and then teach.

The tour, one of many activities planned at Harper during a month-long celebration of the college's dedication, was originated by Fred Vaisvil, director of placement and student aids, and John Birkholtz, dean of transfer programs and acting dean of career programs (the post is presently open).

HIGH SCHOOLS represented included Forest View, Arlington, John Hersey, Wheeling, Elk Grove, Prospect, Conant, Fremd, Palatine and Barrington.

An early morning rain did not deter the students from touring most of the campus, although a lengthy walk to the college's field house bothered several of the tour guides.

And most of the high school students seemed to enjoy the tour, as each looked for his specific interests. As one boy put it: "I looked almost four hours for the pool tables. Where are they?"

Holographic Horse Rides Harper Wall

About 50 persons watched as Dr. Tung H. Jeong moved the slide towards the bare light bulb in the darkened lecture room at Harper College.

The slide looked like an ordinary framed piece of clear glass. However, as Jeong held the slide to the light, it projected a reddish, three-dimensional picture of a horse against the wall.

And, as Jeong twisted the slide in his hand, it appeared as though the horse inside was slowly rotating.

Dr. Jeong, a professor of physics at Lake Forest College in Lake Forest, a suburb north of Chicago, was describing and demonstrating the science of holography, or the use of Laser beams to project images of light.

BUT, AS JEONG describes, holography, a new science which sprang up when the Laser principle was discovered, has many applications. Holograms can store material, can be used to identify fingerprints and computers can make use of holography.

The science grew on the basis of the unusual properties of Laser beams, which, when projected through a lens, create unusual lighting effects.

For example, if two projected Laser beams meet head-on, layers of light are built up. And this effect, like others, can create a three-dimensional picture.

Jeong demonstrated many effects of the principle on a machine which projects the Laser beam through a lens. He said he carries the machine with him as he demonstrates the programs.

HIS PROGRAM attracted students throughout the afternoon and evening, and although the principles he was explaining were sophisticated and intricate, his audience seemed to enjoy the presentation.

As one student observed, "Let's go to Lake Forest College next year." He seemed to be interested in studying the emerging science of holography much further.

Board May Discuss Flag

The flag-lowering incident at Harper College, Palatine, could be one of several topics discussed at tonight's 8 p.m. meeting of the college's board.

Public concern on the matter is increasing, as the Herald and college officials received calls of protest on the incidents last week, which saw students lower an American flag to half-staff.

The flag today remains at half-staff, after the college's board, which met in special session Saturday, agreed to meet the flag to remain in such a position until this evening.

IN OTHER ACTION, the board may discuss a possible tuition increase. Such an increase has been considered as a means of gaining revenue to aid the college's operation.

Unconfirmed reports state that faculty members have petitioned the board to speak on the tenure contract, which was suggested at the last board meeting.

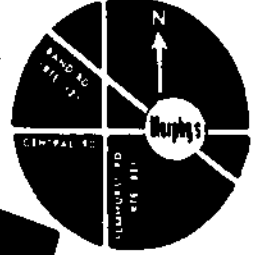

The board meeting will be held in the College Center building, located on the college campus at the corner of Algon and Roselle roads.

Mint Is Nature's Insect Repellent

More than 100 suburban residents "attuned their ears to nature" and glued their eyes to the movie screen Tuesday night.

It was PEP's (Pollution and Environmental Problems) Eco-Catastrophe Film Festival which ironically was hit by a weather "catastrophe" as the fog rolled in and sirens sounded outside Forest View High School's Little Theater in Arlington Heights.

In the beginning the audience heard what individuals can do to fight pollution by using low phosphate detergents, eliminating dangerous pesticides from household use and gardening the organic way.

"There are several small plants which can be used in place of insecticides," explained Mrs. R. C. Good, PEP program chairman.

"For example, mint can be planted near cabbage or garlic plants near rose bushes to assist in bug control," she said.

MRS. GOOD ALSO explained how phosphates in detergents should stay below 25 units per washload. Enzyme presoaks are especially high ranging from 30 to 55 units of phosphate, she said.

A list of phosphate content of detergents prepared by Northwestern Students for a Better Environment was distributed to the group. Only 12 detergent products of 43 are above the hazardous phosphate level.

When the lights dimmed, it was time for visual proof of what pollution is doing to the environment.

An award-winner, "Urbanissimo," showed nature's destruction from city planning and aimless construction.

"Nature's Half Acre," the longer movie, dwelled on the struggle for survival among the non-human population and the children in the audience with quiet screams showed they were getting the point of the film as a duckling fled from the overbearing shovel of a bulldozer.

CHARLES YAGER, author and conservationist from Prospect Heights put his thoughts into poetry at Tuesday night's film festival.

"What is man? It's the only thing on earth which kills its own kind."

"What you kill or destroy is gone beyond your ever bringing it back."

"You are destroying yourself."

Then, Gunnar Peterson, executive director of the Open Lands Project in Chicago, warned, "This is only the beginning."

Student protests and violence will increase and they'll be demonstrating against pollution, according to Peterson.

PEP was commended by several members of the audience for the "stimulating and informative" session.

Current projects of the suburban anti-pollution group including a beautification project in Palatine, an environmental hotline, an aluminum drive and testifying at public hearings against pollution were listed and more volunteers recruited.

'Extra Mile' Set By Girl Scouts

A group of Girl Scouts is going to go the "extra mile" Saturday in Wheeling.

The Scouts are bringing their "Project Extra Mile" to the village in an effort to interest Spanish speaking girls in joining Girl Scouting.

Similar projects have been held recently in Chicago and Des Plaines. The four-hour program consists of the Scouts playing with neighborhood children and at the same time showing them what scouting offers.

Girls and boys too, from throughout Wheeling are invited to participate in the "street playing" from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday on a corner lot at First Street and Strong Avenue in northern Wheeling, said Terry Cutts, a field adviser for the Girl Scouts of Northwest Cook County Inc.

Miss Cutts explained that while the program is designed to help the scouts reach Spanish-speaking children and interest them in scouting, the "street play" is for all local children.

"We'll break the ice by letting the kids paint my car, — that's right, paint my car, and we'll also be making ice cream, doing arts and crafts and a conservation project," Miss Cutts explained.

Wheeling Girl Scouts will be on hand to help at the area as will local scout leaders who will answer parents' questions about the scouting program. Leaflets on scouting activities will also be available and parents can sign up their daughters for a scout troop at the project, she said.

The activities themselves will be conducted by a small group of senior scouts from the area council, Miss Cutts said.

The scout field adviser explained that the program has been held the last two weekends in various parts of Chicago and in south Des Plaines near the airport. During the summer it will tour Chicago for a month she said.

The local scout organization decided to bring "Project Extra Mile" to Des Plaines and Wheeling, "because we realized there were girls in our own council that we haven't been reaching," Miss Cutts said.

She explained that some Spanish speaking girls are sometimes shy because they are uncertain of their English. "Project Extra Mile" is an attempt to encourage these children to join Brownie, Cadette or Girl Scout troops.

The Girl Scouts would also like to attract those girls who live in the Wheeling area only part of the year, moving to other parts of the country, mostly the southwestern United States, for the remainder of the year. Miss Cutts pointed out those girls can join troops in other parts of the country and transfer to local troops when they move here.

Miss Cutts asked that those children who "will be walking some distance" to Saturday's event bring their lunches. Beverages and ice cream will be provided free to the children.

RECENT CHILLY weather may have area residents temporarily wondering about the month of May, but to a child this is one of the best times of the year. At last you can go outside without your mother telling you to put on a jacket, and after all, there's less than a month of school left. Then it'll be time to play all summer long — while mothers hope that most of it will be outside instead of underfoot.

Garbagemen Mad About Weight Law

The Chicago and Suburban Refuse Disposal Association may go to court to file for an injunction preventing police from enforcing a section of the Illinois weight law.

William Buiten, executive director, said yesterday the association may challenge a section of the law that restricts the rear axle weights on most refuse trucks.

BUTEN SAID IN recent weeks state and local police, especially in the northwest and western suburbs, have increased their enforcement of what he called an unfair law.

Joe Stob, vice president of the 200-member association, said police have been ticketing private scavenger firms but not municipalities that operate their own scavenger services.

Area communities that have their own refuse service are Chicago, Des Plaines and Rolling Meadows.

The problem lies in the type of truck used by most refuse firms in which a load is distributed unevenly, causing an underload on the front axle and an overload on the rear axle.

OVERWEIGHT TRUCKS have resulted in fines averaging $700.

Stob contends the refuse companies are the victims of circumstances. He said that while a truck's rear axle may be overweight, the gross weight of the truck is not.

Buiten said: "They're just trying to get rid of a bad law by enforcing it."

"We just want to get some type of consideration," said Stob, operator of Monarch Disposal Co., Elk Grove Township. "We're not expecting the state to say, 'Break the law.' But we need some relief."

Enforcement at the present level has caused drastic increases in the operating costs which must be borne by the customer, said Buiten.

Stob, whose trucks have been ticketed three times this year (twice in Arlington Heights and once in Des Plaines) with fines totaling $1,600, said the association will ask for a change in the law or immunity on the rear axle weight limitation.

"We cannot continue to operate this way," he said, explaining that even if trucks operate at less than one-half of capacity they still do not meet the weight limitation because of their design.

Stob and the association contend that though the law has always been in effect, it has only recently been enforced so stringently.

End Rubella Treachery

German measles is one of the mildest — and yet one of the most treacherous — of the common diseases.

More properly known as rubella, it often appears as little more than a rash in children and runs its course in three days.

Its danger is in the unseen, insidious effect it has on the unborn. The virus, contracted by an expectant mother in the early months of pregnancy, poses an enormously high risk of causing birth defects.

Worse, rubella circulates in epidemics, so when an outbreak occurs, the danger is widespread.

After the last rubella epidemic, in 1964 and 1965, an estimated 20,000 to 30,000 infants were born with severe birth defects, including deafness, cataracts, liver damage, heart ailments, bone malformation and physical and mental retardation. Another 30,000 pregnancies ended in miscarriage or stillbirth.

And now — from this spring until sometime in 1972 — another rubella epidemic is expected.

It need not bring with it wholesale tragedy, for now a vaccine — more than 95 per cent effective — is available to combat rubella.

The goal is to immunize 40 million children nationwide, including 300,000 in Cook County's suburbs.

Next week, from Monday through Saturday, is the time for the families of these suburbs to take part in this critically important program.

It's hoped that at least 80 per cent of children from one year through the third grade will be immunized. Most of it will be done in the schools, with immunization

Between the Lines

An Orphaned Subdivision

by MARY REIFSCHNEIDER

The grass is looking greener these days in Palatine than in Hoffman Estates to Winston Knolls subdivision residents.

The new subdivision, located northwest of Algonquin and Ela roads, is technically in Hoffman Estates, but due to past oversights or bungling on the part of the developers, and former Hoffman Estates officials including park and fire districts, Winston Knolls is in the Palatine rural park district, Palatine Township Library District and Palatine Rural Fire District.

WINSTON KNOLLS residents understandably feel orphaned. The subdivision is the only occupied portion of Hoffman Estates north of the Northwest Tollway at the present time. Winston Knolls children attend Palatine Township Elementary Dist. 15 schools, and housewives are more likely to buy weekly staples in Palatine than near Golf and Roselle roads, the heart of Hoffman Estates.

The subdivision homeowners association wants park sites developed in Winston Knolls and recreation programs started. Ideally, the homeowners have decided that annexation to the Palatine Park District would be best.

But since the subdivision is in Hoffman Estates, annexation to that community's park district is more realistic. This the Winston Knolls homeowners don't want. In fact they don't want it so much, they're thinking of forming a separate park district.

That wouldn't be very wise. It would delay the growth of park facilities in the long run.

JUST HOW MUCH of a recreation program, not to mention park facilities, will ever develop from a 350 acre subdivision with only about 800 families? It isn't much of a tax base or a population base.

Hoffman Estates park district has an excellent recreation program and is slowly building up its facilities. It will offer Winston Knolls residents more than the subdivision could provide for itself. More open communication lines are needed between the park district and the homeowners now.

The City Beat

City of Flags

by JUDY BRANDES

Los Angeles is the City of the Angels, San Francisco the City by the Bay, Chicago the Windy City, Philadelphia the City of Brotherly Love, and Portland the City of Roses.

Rolling Meadows is trying to become the City of Flags.

BUSINESSMEN in the city have been nity support for their flag beautification project. If they are successful, every industrial and commercial center in the city will have flag poles waving Old Glory, and residents will be able to get similar poles for their own yards.

The campaign to bring flags to the City of Rolling Meadows has two purposes. City officials and leading citizens are interested in applying for the All American City contest, and a flag-waving town would have a good chance to qualify.

Businessmen are concerned about the coming of Woodfield Mall in Schaumburg. Attracting and keeping local shoppers is important. A street of flags on Kirchoff Road would not only contribute to the esthetic appearance of the city, it would give the business district a more unified look.

The idea of a city of flags is appropriate for a community like Rolling Meadows. It's a town where police and firemen proudly wear an American flag emblem on their uniforms and city officials and aldermen sport a flag pin on their lapels.

THE AMERICAN Legion Post No. 1251 provides American flags for the schools and classrooms in the community and a Memorial Day parade in a city which is too young to have lost sons in a declared war.

In the council chambers, the aldermen are the only group of city officials in the northwest area which stands and repeats the Pledge of Allegiance to the flag at the opening of a city council meeting.

Driving through the residential areas, a flag pole occasionally appears in a front lawn. It would not be difficult to launch a "City of Flags" campaign, except for the all-important factors of money, and interest.

The Chamber of Commerce has approached various merchant and civic groups seeking financial aid in beginning the program on Kirchoff Road, but either people are too busy or they can't find the money to help out.

CREATING A City of Flags could well become a community project, with both the civic and financial sectors, adults and youth working together to launch the program. undertake the project is needed, but after that, everyone, including scouts, merchants, jaycees, junior women, legionnaires and city officials could provide the manpower to make Rolling Meadows a City of Flags.

It can only help make Rolling Meadows a more unified and better place to live.

Discourtesy Won't Solve Problems of Campus

A remarkable display of bad temper was provided last week by several members of the legislature when they were asked to provide minor funding for a university scholarship program.

A bill introduced by State Rep. Eugenia Chapman (D-Arlington Heights) would have provided $75,000 in matching funds for scholarships. The other half would have come from University of Illinois students pledging $2 each per semester for a scholarship to aid the needy.

Though the future of education in Illinois hardly rises or falls with this modest proposal, several legislators reacted bitterly.

Said one, "If they want scholarships, let them join the Army. When they get out they can get one (under the GI Bill) and in the meantime they can learn to love their country."

Another offered sarcastically, "We ought to throw in an extra dollar for the pill for the girls."

A third suggested poor students should work their way through college rather than being subsidized for conducting rock throwing disturbances on campus.

Neither the bill nor its sponsor deserved this discourteous response.

Only weak minds could automatically link financial need with radicalism, promiscuity and disrespect for America. Legislators who have weak minds, however, should have strong jaws to keep their mouths firmly shut.

Spotlight:

Graduating Class for 'Drop-outs'

by SUE CARSON

A big day is coming up for about 30 area young people.

On May 28, graduating seniors in the Young Adult Education program at Wheeling High School will receive High School Dist. 214 diplomas in ceremonies at Chevy Chase Country Club north of Wheeling.

The ceremonies will be all the more significant because these students are returning high school drop-outs—persons who, for a variety of reasons, left school and then decided to try again for that diploma.

IN THE THREE years the young adult program has been operating, the number of area young people to enroll and graduate has grown steadily.

In June, 1968, 16 were graduated. Last year, the number rose to 26, and this year it will be over 30.

This year, the program will enter a new phase. It was originally started by elementary School Dist. 21 in Wheeling and Buffalo Grove with the help of a federal grant under Title III of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act.

This year the three-year grant runs out, and the task of administering the program will be taken over by Dist. 214. The cost of running the program will be borne almost entirely by the state, although Dist. 214 must provide the classrooms and educational equipment.

Sue Carson

MONDAY EVENING the Dist. 214 school board members voted to take over the program. They also added another provision. The board requested high school administrators to begin planning for the eventual establishment of similar programs at other high schools in the district.

It is encouraging to see the school board express this confidence and interest in continuing a program which has proven to be extremely worthwhile.

Under the capable and experienced leadership of director Don Day, the program has provided young people the opportunity to gain even more than a high school diploma, which in itself is becoming increasingly necessary today.

Yet the teachers and counselors connected with the young adult program are attempting to provide another important function to the returning drop-outs. Helping them to develop a worthwhile set of goals and the ability to make responsible decisions is the purpose of the counseling and seminar sessions which make up a significant part of the program.

Students who are working receive half credit and job coordination from their seminar instructor.

THOSE RETURNING to high school for the second time face a different set of problems from those enrolled for the first time. They are older, for one thing. Some have families. Many are holding down full-time jobs while they are completing their education.

Because of this, they need a program designed especially for them.

And this is why the young adult program can be particularly beneficial — because it is geared to the particular needs and problems of these young people.

Naturally no program is perfect. The directors are acutely aware that improvements can be made in it, as they can in nearly every program, educational or otherwise. Nor does enrolling guarantee instant success for the participants.

YET THE NEED and benefits for this type of project have been demonstrated by its steadily increasing enrollment, and the growing number of graduates each year.

With the continued support of the high school district as demonstrated Monday, next year the line of graduates waiting to receive their diplomas next year will probably be longer still.

Career Program Is Benefit

It was with great interest that I read of the MacArthur Junior High "career" program. My eighth grade son enjoyed the program — his choices being the mechanic and pilot. I've also been pleased with the extra courses in sex education and drugs.

I do have a moment of hesitation regarding the military-type speech, given by Capt. Lorentson. I do not object to ROTC classes, or courses, being given (Unlike the John Birchers, I don't raise the school roof-tops over ideas or viewpoints that differ from mine. I think a balance is needed. It seems to me, an eighth grader, who is being versed on warfare, is also old enough to handle such thoughts as peace and the alternatives to war.

AS EXAMPLE, courses have been given on various drugs and their dangers. The pilot and mechanic stress proper usage of mechanical motors, and their dangers. Sex education course teach proper moral behavior, patterns of living and Grandstanding?

I refer to the incident of the flag-lowering at Harper College last Wednesday. This was supposedly done by the socially and politically conscious students at Harper. I felt as much sorrow at the deaths of four Kent University students as they did. However, I saw nothing to be gained by lowering the flag. I am not wallowing in apathy as I am sending letters of sympathy to the parents of the four students. Innocent people die every day, but that doesn't make it any easier to accept. But are those students at Harper, along with many other people, so eager to express their "solidarity" that they are unable to think of the individuals involved?

MY QUESTION IS: Did that thought ever cross the minds of the flag-lowerers or does their "social consciousness" only extend to the grandstand play of lowering the flag outside of Harper College?

also the dangers of improper attitudes. The model from Wards, also listed the various drawbacks to modeling as a career (Sore feet, early hours, giving up social activities and the like).

The least Capt. Lorentson could have stressed to his "young recruits" was sore feet and early hours. He did say one thing I find correct, the military gives them a chance to travel. (Yep — Vietnam, Cambodia, Laos, et al.) Can't say if they'll have a lot of fun, but they'll sure die trying.

Excellent Service

Because I appreciate my newspaper boy always putting my paper inside the storm door, as I am an elderly person, and lame and it is difficult for me to go out into the yard to get my paper, as was the case last year, I wrote the "boy" a note and asked him to please put my paper inside the door.

Since then I get my paper about 7 a.m., regularly. I want you to know this I do not know the boy's name.

'Y' Gets Surprise Gift

Monday morning's mail held a pleasant surprise for Herman Hertog, executive director of the Countryside YMCA. Hertog, who received a check for $1,000 Monday from the Junior Woman's Club of Palatine, said, "This is a wonderful demonstration of confidence in what we are doing."

The check was received under the stipulation that the money will be put toward the building fund, which will hopefully be used to construct a Y-facility by 1972 in Palatine, Hertog said.

Mrs. Charles Skilman, allocations chairman for the Woman's Club, said, "We appreciate the opportunity to be of some help in Countryside's continuing service to the youth and adults of our community."

HERTOG SAID THE money has been placed in the building fund and its use will be restricted to constructional purposes. A building fund campaign will not begin until the "Y" has a total membership of 2,000, he added.

May 9 the second annual membership drive ended, falling short of the 2,000 membership goal. Hertog said more members may be recruited by the May 27 board of directors' meeting, but that work on the building phase of the Y-development program will not begin until this goal is met.

Vending Machines Started in 215 B.C.

Little did they suspect in 215 B.C. that a coin actuated device for dispensing sacrificial water in Egyptian temples would mark the beginning of an industry which will ring up more than $3.5 billion in sales and merchandise this year.

No one knows if the holy water vendor was a financial success, but the American vending industry did not start to take off until World War II with the invention of the coin-operated coffee machine.

Looking toward greater growth is Don Hesch, vice president of A. H. Entertainers, Inc., Arlington Heights, operators of juke boxes and cigarette, candy, hot and cold beverage machines in the Northwest suburban area. He is chairman of the area's publicity of Illinois Automatic Merchandising Week, May 10-16.

"WE WANT TO MAKE our industry and its improvements in the last several years known," said Hesch. "The biggest accomplishment is in the equipment made available to us, which is more attractive and enables us to keep the machines cleaner.

"For example, we now use dry grounds coffee machines, with the grounds being blown dry after use for brewing. The old machines, with water running through the grounds after each use, were very difficult to keep clean."

There are seasonal hazards in the vending industry, said Hesch, such as the problem of chocolate candy melting during the summer months. "We don't even use regular chocolate in the summer any more, because it gets runny and turns white with the heat," he said. "Instead, we use compound-coated candy with synthetic chocolate."

HESCH, WHOSE FIRM has been in business since 1939, said one purpose of Illinois Automatic Merchandising Week is to let people know that there are individuals behind the machines keeping them in service. "We want to tell people that when they put their money in a machine and don't receive what they wanted, kicking or hitting the machine will not solve the problem, and could make it worse. We have people ready to repair and refill the machines."

Noting that small companies dominate the industry, with two out of three Illinois firms having six or fewer employees and most being locally owned and operated, Hesch stated, "We try to hold most of our business down to within a 12-mile radius of our building so we can give our customers the best possible service."

Another local vendor seeking to become better acquainted with the public this week is Matt Cockrell, president of Cockrell Coffee Service, which recently moved from Arlington Heights to Schaumburg. "We felt that the best way to celebrate Illinois Automatic Merchandising Week is through a series of open houses," said Cockrell, who is hosting employees, local health officers and the public this week.

COCKRELL, WHOSE company served close to three quarters of a million hamburgers in the Northwest suburban area over the past year, agreed that the vendor needs to let people know that behind the machine are people willing to help.

Cockrell was presented a plaque from the Illinois Automatic Merchandising Council last week for service. His vice president-operations, Gino Dal Cerro, was also elected a director and secretary of the organization.

"Food items are another area of improvement for the future," said Cockrell. "I look for a major breakthrough in this area in the next few years," he said "in fresh foods particularly."

The Illinois Automatic Merchandising Council, now in its fourth year, is one of the rapidly growing trade associations in the state, said Lou Cappello, president. "Because it takes skilled people to back up our machines, our association has started training courses for managers and for supervisors. Our annual business sessions now draw nearly 300 persons."

MASTERMINDING hundreds of vending machines is no easy task for vending company personnel, according to Cappello. With the advent of finely tuned electronic components in soft drink, coffee and food vending machines, fast repair service and preventive maintenance programs have become indispensable and this requires highly skilled mechanics.

Many of the state's vending service firms direct their maintenance trucks through private radio communications systems.

"Above all we want to keep our customers happy, but machines which are out of order also cost us a lot of money. A vending machine out of order means no sales until it is fixed," commented Cappello.

To keep a hungry and thirsty public content, many Illinois vending companies have recently gone beyond just selling merchandise and food from vending machines.

Nearly half of Illinois' vending industry now also operates contract food service for banks, insurance companies and industrial plants where vending machines play a secondary role. Ranging from executive dining rooms to conventional factory cafeterias, these new services often are supplied from a central food production commissary which not only feeds vending machines but supplies company picnics, mobile catering trucks and concessions at ball parks with food and beverages.

A TYPICAL CANDY vending machine sells $842 worth of candy bars in a year and nets less than $50 before income taxes. Of special concern to local vending firms, said Cappello, is the inflationary trend which has raised the cost of merchandise which vending companies buy, while the inability to adjust prices upward has reduced an already slim profit margin of less than $5 per $100 of sales.

"We have no complaints about sales volume," says Cappello, "but there's plenty of wailing about our ability to make a reasonable profit in our business today."

"More and more people are getting the habit of eating away from home and we have the equipment and the knowhow to go with them wherever they are," Cappello adds. "High schools and recreation areas are among our most interesting markets for future expansion, whether it be for light meals or between-meals refreshments."

Veterans' Vane

More than 230,000 veterans were aided in the purchase of homes by VA-guaranteed and direct loans in fiscal year 1969, according to VA's annual report.

The VA recently announced an accelerated allocation to states of $15 million in spending for the agency's Department of Medicine and Surgery.

More than five million veterans were insured during 1969 in five government life insurance programs valued at $38 billion, the VA reported recently.

The VA is moving to promptly implement recommendations of the President's Committee on Vietnam Veterans relating to jobs, education, loans and other benefits.

VA Chief Donald E. Johnson says volunteer workers contributed more than nine million hours of service last year at 166 VA hospital and outpatient clinics. Yet more volunteers are needed.

The VA urges college veterans studying under the G.I. Bill to return their certification of attendance cards during the last full month of every enrollment period so final checks for that period may be prepared.

The VA says both "honorable" and "general" discharge certificates issued by the military service are completely and equally acceptable in determining eligibility for veterans benefits.

More than 777,000 veterans, servicemen, wives, widows and children will receive increased educational allowances under a bill signed recently by the President, according to the VA.

Palatine Soccer Celtics Surprise The Champions!

Something happened last Saturday at Palatine's Winston Park that hadn't happened in a year and a half. The Menominee Boys Club soccer team was defeated.

It was the hosting soccer club — the Palatine Celtics of the local park district, coached by Bill Hughes and Jim Kinsella — that pulled off the thrilling upset, by a 5-4 score on the intermediate level.

"It was a magnificent win for us. We beat the champions," enthused Kinsella.

Due to a slow start this season, the Celtics will not win the league title, in all probability. That distinction will undoubtedly go to the big, fast, experienced Menominee team.

But the Palatine team is intent on winning the cup playoffs in the post-season (similar to hockey's Stanley Cup series, but with just one semi-final and one final game). And the team, which will probably finish second, proved Saturday that it is indeed capable of knocking off the leaders.

The victory was also revenge for the Celtics, who just one week earlier suffered a 3-2 loss to the same team on its home grounds in Chicago.

Newcomer Alex Suchowsky was one of the heroes of last Saturday's win, coming up with a three-goal hat trick. Suchowsky is one of many boys who became interested in playing from reading stories in The Herald.

Other individuals singled out by coach Kinsella were Scott Byker, who was exceptional on defense; Luis Granja, who did a "mastermind" job of engineering the attack and setting up plays; and — once again — goalie Mark Dittrich, who Kinsella said "was great in goal and saved the day for us again."

Rugged Menominee quickly grabbed a 2-0 lead, just as they had the week before, but Palatine also made history repeat by fighting back to a 2-2 tie. Paul Richter got the first goal, a beautiful picture score, on a pass pattern and Luis Granja tied it up. The first of Suchowsky's three goals put the Celtics ahead.

"There was a rain delay just before the half because of a heavy shower," said Kinsella, "but the boys were so fired up that they went right back and played harder."

It was no contest for the Palatine midgets, who swamped Menominee, 18-0. Some of them may have been helped by tips picked up while attending the Newcastle United-Chicago All Stars game Friday night.

Steve Sobey and Lance Gracowski led the onslaught, pumping in four goals each. Sobey, sporting a very black eye from catching while playing baseball, spent much time leading the attack. Sobey's brothers, Mike and Phil, also scored a goal apiece.

Getting two goals apiece were King Bibby, Mike Miller and Mike Justa. Brad Byker and Bill Brownlow also added one score each.

In the Cup playoffs, the first-place team will play the squad which finishes third and the second and fourth-place teams will tangle in semi-final games. Saturday, May 30 (Memorial Day) is a probable date. The Cup championship will be decided Saturday, June 6 with a picnic to wind up the spring season the same day. The Celtics also compete during the fall but do not interfere with little league baseball in the summer.

Boys interested in playing may still contact the Palatine Park District or Jim Kinsella in that town. Participants need not live in Palatine but must be 8-15 years old.

Both Palatine teams will play at Morton Grove this Saturday.

Tourney Problems Continue

It happens every spring!

The problems continued Wednesday as district baseball tournaments involving area teams were washed out again by the weatherman.

It doesn't even look too promising for Thursday, but they'll try again — and hope.

One district — Wheeling — has even decided to postpone the Thursday play already and go for Friday, switching to Deerfield if the field is not playable.

So, as it stands today — and you can look outside this morning and figure out what's going on — the games are Prospect vs. Forest View at Forest View, Palatine vs. Fremd (3:15) and Arlington vs. Conant (1:15) at Fremd, and Addison vs. Fenton at Elk Grove.

These are all first round games so no championships will be decided until Friday — if then.

What happens if it keeps raining?

Don't even think about it, but somebody has mentioned the possibility of flipping a coin so that champs are determined by the start of regional play next Monday.

Rain, rain go away . . .

Order Western Open Tickets

There is a wide variety of tickets . . . and ticket prices . . . for the Western Open golf championship June 8-14 at Beverly Country Club. In each case they are better, or cost less, when purchased in advance.

For instance, tickets which also permit entry into the Beverly clubhouse will not be sold at the gate during tournament week. These must be obtained in advance.

For bargains, the advance "Sponsor Book" can't be beaten. It contains 25 grounds tickets good for admission any one day. Since the single price is $5.00 until Saturday and $6.00 on Saturday and Sunday, the Sponsor Book for $20 has guaranteed saving.

All advance tickets are sold through the headquarters of the sponsoring Western Golf Association in Golf, Ill. Information about tickets is available by calling the headquarters at 539-4600.

WGA turns over 100 per cent of the Western Open profits to its own Evans Scholars Foundation. This year there are 761 Evans Scholars in college. An additional 1,353 have graduated as Evans Scholars since the program was launched in 1930 through the efforts of Chick Evans.

Knights Golfers Outshoot Hersey

Paced by Tom Neumann's 37, Prospect handed Hersey a 136-173 Mid-Suburban League golf defeat on the Mount Prospect Country Club course.

Kim Walter and Art Hagg turned in 39's for the Knights and teammates Al Marchetti and Jim Schmid; shot 41's.

Mark Boyett led Hersey with a 41 followed by Rich Fosselman's 43, Mike Sutton's 44, Dean Taggart's 45 and Mark Zakula's 45.

The Knights continued to go undefeated in the league on the frosh-soph level with a 166-183 win over the Huskies.

Hole-in-Ones Shot At Buffalo Grove

The Buffalo Grove Golf Club was the tenth birthday, Rick Chaikben, 8335 Kimball, Skokie, scored his ace on the 135 yard par-3, 17th hole, using an 8-iron. Stan Blanshei followed with his hole-in-one on the 200 yard par-3, 4th hole, swinging a 2-iron. This thriller was witnessed by Ray Ford and Mike Baldovski.

THE BEST IN Sports

Walkin' the Sidelines

by PAUL LOGAN

HOW DO YOU THINK a high school athletic director would react to this situation:

His school's football team, the visitor in a game, takes the field for the first time only to see something drastically different about the makeup of the field — the goal posts, normally located in the rear of the end zone, are 30 yards farther back.

This would make it almost impossible to kick extra points and field goal attempts would be out of the question.

The visiting team's AD might allow the team to play the game on that day, but future games between the two schools would probably depend on whether the goal posts were returned to the end zone.

Ridiculous, you might say. It can't be done. You'd be right on both counts.

But isn't it just as ridiculous not having fences in a ball park?

Just as football fields must conform to certain specifications, so should high school baseball fields.

When a prep attempts a 20 or 30-yard field goal, if it's long and straight enough, it's good for three points.

But when a prep baseball player smacks a ball down the left or right field line carrying between 325 and 350 feet — a distance that would clear the fence in many major league parks — why must he be penalized by it being caught because of a park without a fence?

On many occasions this spring, area players have belted balls that distance or possibly farther, only to have them pulled in.

And, last Friday, the reverse happened at Fremd's non-fenced diamond. This time the wind was blowing out and the ground was very hard, so any ball that eluded an outfielder was a cheap home run.

A fence might have turned this game around for although Fremd had four homers to Prospect's two, only one of the hosting team's blows might have cleared the fence.

The game went 13 long innings, but it might have been over much sooner had the Vikings' "cheap homers" been only doubles or triples. But both teams benefited by the weather and the lack of fences.

After asking around the Mid-Suburban league, it seems the baseball coaches have been in favor of making it a rule that all the conference schools have fenced-in fields. However, the athletic directors have never approved such a rule.

It seems that some of the ADs believe that having the fences up in the spring interferes with the physical education programs during the regular school day.

Still, four of the MSL schools have the temporary snow fences.

Two other reasons seem to be that the fence would cost too much and not enough maintenance men are available to put it up and take care of it.

Several schools in the area, such as Prospect and Glenbrook South, have taken care of both problems.

After getting the okay from their ADs, Larry Pohlman of Prospect and Ed Baker of Glenbrook contacted two different places and received fences on loan.

Pohlman revealed that the school received its fence from the park district. After picking it up themselves, Pohlman, the team and some of the custodians erected it the first time the Knights ever had a fence.

Baker requested his fence in March from the highway commission. The commission let him know within a week of when it could be picked up and he and his boys took it from there.

The Glenbrook fence will stand throughout the summer to be returned to the commission garage in the fall, a time when it would have to come down anyway because of football practice.

Ernest Kumerow, head coach at Glenbrook North, used the fencing from the highway commission until this year. The school now owns a brand new fence purchased from a dealer in Wheeling.

Kumerow said this of those who put off erecting a fence because of the lack of maintenance help:

"It didn't take long to erect . . . approximately three hours with the help of the whole team. With just a little work and effort on anybody's part, you can get anything done."

Right now, with the okay from their ADs, just about all the other diamonds in the MSL could have fences. Although Arlington and Palatine play their games at park district fields, they, too, might work something out on the diamonds at their respective schools so that some sort of barrier could be set up.

"I think it makes more of a ball game to have a fence there," says Pohlman. "I think it's a necessity."

But the "necessity" for helping make baseball the exciting game that it is will have to be absent until the coaches and the athletic directors take action.

So, if the area teams are not playing at Wheeling, Prospect, Elk Grove or Forest View, they'll either have to hit the ball a ton or be exceptionally fast if they want baseball's most dramatic happening — the homer.

Fremd Rolls Over Grove

Fremd had too much overall talent for Elk Grove and overwhelmed the Grenadiers 89-37 in a track meet on the losers' grounds, despite a sterling performance by Elk Grove's versatile Mike Michela.

Michela placed in four different events, taking two firsts, a second and a third. But Fremd took firsts in 10 of the 15 events, rolling to victory with their fine depth.

There were two other double winners besides Michela. They were Fremd's Rick Gaare and Elk Grove's Frank Taucher.

Michela was first in the 220-yard dash with a 23.8 time and also took the long jump with a 21-4 leap. The Grenadier, who must have been totally exhausted by day's end, was also second in the 100-yard dash and third in the 880-yard run.

Gaare's usual victories came in his weight specialties. He won the shot put with a 49-4 heave and the discus with a 124-11½ toss.

Taucher was easily hurdler of the day, winning the 120 highs in 14.9 and the 130 lows in 20.9.

Still another outstanding individual was the Vikings' Steve Bruce. He was first in the 100-yard dash with 10.6, second in the low hurdles with 21.9 and third in the pole vault.

Others claiming two places were Elk Grove's John Fleish, first in the 440-yard dash with 52.5 and second in the 220 with 24.4; Fremd's Steve Wickum, first in the high jump with 5-8 and third in the shot put with 44-2; Elk Grove's Mark Lichter, second in the high hurdles with 15.9 and third in the low hurdles with 22.1; and Fremd's Mike Menick, second in the 440 with 52.6 and third in the 160 with 10.7. (Menick twice missed firsts by one-tenth of a second).

Fremd's other firsts were by Wally Spiniolas in the two-mile run (9:51.1), Bill Jaroski in the 880 (2:00.3), Pete Vasquez in the pole vault and Dan Pittenger in the mile (4:31.6).

Both of Fremd's relay teams also won — the 880 unit in 1:37.5 and the mile quartet in 3:31.7.

Cards, Vikes Top Elk Grove

Arlington's and Fremd's golf teams blistered the Palatine Hills Country Club course with splendid scores as both teams handed Elk Grove Mid-Suburban League defeats.

Arlington fired a 152, a new high school record at Palatine Hills. The Cards defeated Elk Grove 152-180. Fremd shot a fine 158 in beating Elk Grove 158-180.

Jack Van Veen paced Arlington's incredible round with an even par 36. Chris Marszalek turned in a 38, Gordon Kaser a 39, Jeff Haire a 39 and Rich Armour a 40.

Rob Miezio paced Fremd with a 37 followed by Jeff Oakley's 39, Mike Strauss' 40 and Craig Kremel's 42.

For Elk Grove, Bob DeHaven and Curt Hejduk shot 44's, Jim Cooney a 45, Marius Kesler a 47 and Larry Nelson a 48.

Kennedy Group Remnants Worry N.Y. GOP

Editor's Note: This is one of a continuing series of dispatches by UPI political correspondents reporting on key state elections this year which could have significant national influence

by CLAY F. RICHARDSON

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI)—Three-term Republican Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller and his maverick Senate appointee Charles E. Goodell, face stiff election races in New York state this fall from a surprisingly well organized band of Kennedy Democrats.

The senator and governor races shape up as a political struggle between Rockefeller Republicanism and the remnants of the "New Frontier" of John and Robert Kennedy.

That is the kind of political battle that could end in a standoff to bedevil New York's important Conservative and Liberal parties.

"I'm the underdog," Rockefeller has said. He has used the slogan before, but there is some truth to it. Democrats outnumber registered Republicans by 600,000 in New York state — where between six and seven million persons will cast ballots on election day.

Rockefeller, whose last two Democratic challengers were relative unknowns, will probably face former Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg. Goldberg is by far the toughest political opponent Rockefeller has faced since he beat Averell Harriman in 1958.

GOODELL WAS A conservative congressman from a small upstate city when Rockefeller appointed him to the Senate seat vacated by the death of Robert F. Kennedy. Most likely he will oppose former Kennedy speechwriter Theodore C. Sorensen, who like Goldberg, must survive a Democratic primary.

Rockefeller and Goodell have no primary opposition. The governor, 61, went to the Republican State Committee in March and told the members if they were interested in his running for reelection they had to take Goodell, too.

For many GOP county chairmen, Goodell was a bitter pill. He has antagonized them by his well-publicized demands for U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam, his frequent criticisms of the Nixon administration and his "flip-flop" from conservatism to liberalism in the Senate.

For the Democrats in New York, selection of candidates is never easy, and this year was a free-for-all—mostly because Goldberg couldn't make up his mind to run.

He finally won the party's endorsement at a wild convention on April Fool's Day in the Catskills. But instead of having it all to himself as he could have in February, he now must face two primary opponents.

ROBERT M. MORGENTHAU, deputy mayor in John V. Lindsay's fusion New York City administration and Howard J. Samuels, an upstate millionaire industrialist and former Undersecretary of Commerce, both will challenge Goldberg.

Morgenthau, a former U.S. attorney ran against Rockefeller in 1962 and lost by 500,000 votes.

The Senate primary is a four-way race with Sorensen the party choice. He is twice divorced a fact that otherwise liberal New York voters might not overlook easily.

Sorensen will be opposed by two congressmen: Richard McCarthy of Buffalo, who got some national attention on the issue of biological and chemical warfare, and Richard L. Ottinger of Westchester County who has made his mark on the antipollution battlefield.

The fourth contender for the Senate is peace candidate Paul O'Dwyer, who lost to Jacob Javits in the 1968 Senate race after winning a three-way Democratic primary. O'Dwyer, a former New York City councilman, is a favorite among young people.

SINCE ROCKEFELLER became the liberal light of the Republican party, New York has had a viable four party system. Conservatives put up their own candidates and in 1966, an unknown upstate college dean, Dr. Paul Adams, polled 510,000 votes in a race against Rockefeller.

Adams is running again and Rockefeller has done little in the past four years to woo the conservatives. He did make a token reduction in state spending in 1969 — but restored most of the cuts and increased aid in other areas dramatically in 1970.

On the other side of the spectrum is the older Liberal Party, which also can be counted on for 500,000 votes in a gubernatorial year.

This year the Liberals have endorsed a slate composed of party officers, a political holding action to see whether the Democratic candidates, Goldberg and Sorensen, warm up.

In the Senate race the conservatives have thrown their number one vote-getter James F. Buckley against Goodell. Buckley, brother of columnist William F.

Buckley, polled one million votes in the 1968 Senate race against Javits and O'Dwyer.

THE ISSUES in the campaign should be in Rockefeller's favor. Vietnam will be something of a standoff, both Rockefeller and Goldberg were closely identified with the Johnson administration position three years ago. Goldberg's position now is more likely to appeal to peace advocates, but Goodell's aggressively antiwar stance should offset this to some extent.

On purely state issues Rockefeller will have good campaign fodder in the record of the 1970 legislature which the GOP controlled.

Biplane Buff Gets Lots of Ribbing From His Neighbors

by JOHN J. SPETC

BROOKLYN, Ohio (UPI)—Since Robert Slepecky started building the wings on his homemade biplane he's been in for a lot of ribbing from his neighbors who love to point out their span exceeds the width of his garage doors.

The plane may fly they say, but the garage will never get off the ground.

Slepecky, 38, the owner of an auto body shop, explains that the wings will be taken off when the time comes to take the plane out of the garage.

The weekend pilot began building his aerobatic biplane in September 1966, and hopes to have it finished this December. With most of the framework completed it has crowded his cars out of the family garage.

It all started about 1940 when his older brother and a friend began building a plane in his parents' garage.

When the war broke out they gave it up," he said. "They had one wing finished. I used to spend a lot of time looking at it and I really had a desire to build my own.

Then one day a few years ago he drove out to Columbia Airport in nearby Columbus Station, Ohio.

"Just as I turned into the driveway I saw a little biplane come in for a landing," he said. "Before the pilot could get out I was next to the plane shooting questions at him. He told me to wait until he got his parachute off and then he answered my questions."

The pilot told Slepecky he had built the plane himself and referred him to the Experimental Aircraft Association. Slepecky became a member and got the plans for his plane, designated the EEA biplane through the association.

"I spend four nights a week in the garage," he said. "The whole thing will cost me about $2,800."

The payoff for all the time spent in the garage is about a year away. Slepecky expects to test fly his homemade aircraft next spring.

By that time the only things left to buy will be a scarf and goggles.

'Fumaroles' Are Great Resources

by WILEY MALONEY

THE GEYSERS Calif. (UPI)—When bear hunter William Bell Elliott fired what he termed a leaden message into the head of a grizzly in the Big Sulphur Creek Valley in 1847 he had no notion he had come upon one of the world's great resources.

The valley was filled with clouds of steam and smelled strongly of sulphur. Elliott called it the "gates of hell." To day the gates of hell have gone to work.

Later explorers called it the "geysers." The name is a misnomer. There are no geysers. The steam escaping through the crust of the earth is what geologists call fumaroles.

This steam now has been tamed by turning the natural underground energy into the only geothermal electric power plant in the Western Hemisphere and the only such plant in the world privately financed.

The process is relatively simple to explain, but technically difficult to apply. You simply have to drill a hole deep enough in a volcanic area—perhaps a mile or more—to tap the live steam. It's like drilling an oil well into an oil dome.

This steam, coming up under pressure with all its latent heat is piped to turbines which turn generators transforming the energy into electric power.

The theory was first turned into an accomplished fact by John D. Grant in 1920. The geysers had become one of those "health resorts" so popular at the turn of the century. It was visited by presidents and other notables, first by stage coach later by early motor cars.

Grant conceived the idea of using the steam to power a turbine to generate electricity to light his resort hotel.

"He had some difficulties though," said H. A. "Hank" Zagar, manager of the Pacific Gas & Electric Company's Cloverdale geysers area. "When it rained the steam in the pipes cooled the generators slowed — the lights dimmed. People sitting inside had no need to go out to know it was raining. One entertainer, who played an electric organ refused to perform on such nights. The organ gave out sour notes."

It became evident however that producing electricity from the earth's steam was more expensive in those days than using conventional fuels such as kerosene or coal. The whole project was termed Grant's Folly.

But the thermal power company set out 15 years ago to make Grant's dream come true. New steel alloys had been developed to cut down the corrosive effects of the steam from the fumaroles and better methods had been developed for drilling.

Most people of the time just "tapped their heads" at the oddball scheme. Even when the first electricity was sold 10 years ago by PG&E the project was regarded more as a curiosity than practical.

Good ideas don't die. PG&E contracted to buy the steam if it was piped to a turbine-generator-condenser system and thence over power lines as electric energy. PG&E set up its first two power units which went into production in 1960 with a capacity of producing an output of about 27,000 kilowatts.

Currently PG&E has four units in operation and is building two more which will bring the capacity up to 192,000 kilowatts enough electricity to serve a city of 200,000.

PG&E does not dig the wells. It only contracts to buy the steam delivered to its plants. The cost of drilling the wells and piping the live steam to the plants is borne by the well-diggers.

The development at the geysers is being carried out jointly by the Thermal Power Co. the original successful pioneer, the Magma Power Co. and Union Oil Company the largest of the three operators. Other firms are prospecting and drilling but do not yet have customers for their steam even if they do tap a live geothermal well. PG&E remains the sole customer.

WANT ADS Are for People In A Hurry!

A couple of years ago, a Peace Corps volunteer could do a lot of good in a lot of places with a little Yankee ingenuity and great enthusiasm.

But the world's getting harder to fix. The emerging nations are much more sophisticated. And so are their problems.

That's why we're giving the bulk of our volunteers, the young college graduates, more and better training before they go overseas. With emphasis on specific skills for specific assignments.

We figure they should know how to solve problems before they're overwhelmed by them.

We're also asking for volunteers with more experience and more skills. Plumbers. Engineers. Electricians. Farmers. Almost anybody who's had experience working with his head and his hands.

To get this kind of person, we have to make some changes.

For the first time, the Peace Corps will take volunteers with wives and children.

We will provide adequate living allowances and medical protection for families. Schooling for children.

We will provide adequate housing. (Or find it.)

We're willing to talk to employers about holding jobs and seniority.

Whether we train you, or if you have the skills we need, we'll do what we must to put you where you're needed.

Write us for more information. The world needs all the help it can get.

The Accepted Influence in the Northwest Suburbs

Briefly on Business

by IFA TONKIN

BAROMETER TROPHY was recently presented to Mrs. Shirl Greenfield of Winnetka, Montgomery Ward saleswoman in the Randolph center Mount Prospect for the highest curtain and drapery sales among the company's 12 Chicago area stores during 1969. Mrs. Greenfield received the honor from metropolitan merchandise manager Tex Usher at a recent dinner honoring eight of Ward's top sales personnel. Bob Daley, manager of the Chicago metropolitan area, was also present at the ceremony.

CHICAGO AREA businesses have been invited by the Chicago Crime Commission to participate in its new free program of business services as a weapon against crime syndicate infiltration. This includes access to a comprehensive file on criminal activities in Chicago and consultation between the staff of the Chicago Crime Commission and management personnel. Registration is available through the commission at 79 W. Monroe St., Chicago, Ill. 60607.

HAROLD F. WERHANE, president of Culligan Inc., recently announced that Culligan has entered into a contract for the purchase on June 1 of 70 per cent of the shares of TEKOK Ingenjorsfirma AB, headquartered in Stockholm, Sweden. It is subject to the final approval of the Culligan board of directors and governmental agencies. TEKOK, the licensed Culligan distributor in Sweden since 1959, will change its name to Culligan TEKOK AB.

THE YOUNG BUILDERS Committee of the Home Builders Association of Chicago will hold its annual spring golf outing Thursday, May 14, at the Elmhurst Country Club in Elmhurst. The first tee-off is at dawn. Cost for dinner and golf is $19.50.

NOTING THAT THE construction industry is expected to double by 1975 and will generate $1.5 trillion in revenues, the Builders Association of Chicago has prepared a booklet on Opportunities in Chicago Construction being distributed to area guidance counselors and association members. The handbook contains a series of job descriptions, study suggestions about on-site trade jobs and estimated annual salary ranges. For further information on the construction industry education and job recruitment program, contact the association at 228 N. LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill. 60601.

AT THE RECENT annual meeting of Motorola Inc., shareholders approved an increase of the company's authorized capital stock from 10 million common shares to 20 million common shares. Robert W. Galvin, chairman, announced that a share distribution will be made May 25 to shareholders of record May 11 at the rate of one additional share for each share held. He also reiterated plans of the board of directors announced last February 4 to declare a quarterly dividend of 15 cents per share on all shares then outstanding. This would have the effect of a 20 per cent increase in the current dividend rate. Other action at the Motorola meeting included the re-election of twelve directors, the election of one new director and the adoption of an employee share option plan. Added to the board was Homer L. Marrs, vice president and general manager of the company's communications division.

RECIPIENTS OF THE Building Department of the Year awards at the recent general membership meeting of the Home Builders Association of Chicago include city of Countryside Club Hills, city of Highland Park, village of Northbrook, village of Round Lake Beach and village of Skokie. The awards were presented by Fred G. Hillman, chairman of the HBAC Technical and Codes Committee.

JOHN McCARDIE of Wilmette, vice president Midwest area and Larry M. Smith, Palatine, director of personnel for commercial division Honeywell, recently accepted a citation on behalf of the company's employees for contributions to the Metropolitan Crusade of Mercy from J. Theodore Forrester, a Crusade campaign director. Honeywell's 1,420 employees in Arlington Heights, Morton Grove and Schiller Park contributed $15,600 to the annual drive.

Credits Gain To Sales Experience

A strong sales spurt for the first three months of 1970 has been reported by Baird & Warner Inc., for their Arlington Heights office, 220 E. Northwest Hwy., and Mount Prospect office, 21 E. Prospect Ave.

Robert G. Walters, vice president and district sales manager for the two offices, reported consolidated volume of $3,360,000 for the 1970 first quarter compared with $2,874,000 in 1969, a gain of slightly over 16 per cent.

The number of transactions for the two offices was moderately ahead of 1969, with a combined total of 88 as against 79 for the like period a year ago.

Walters said experience and a great deal of tenacity and hard work by a veteran sales staff accounted for the performance in a generally depressed real estate market.

Many of the transactions were generated by Baird & Warner's RESET (Real Estate Service for Employee Transfers) program.

Walters also credited "a strong, favorable relationship with many lenders" for enabling Baird & Warner to secure the necessary financing to support a selling program in the Arlington Heights-Mount Prospect area.

Pressing Ahead For New Plants

Business firms are pressing ahead with plans for large outlays on new plant and equipment. The Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago stated in the current issue of its monthly review, Business Conditions.

The 11 per cent increase in capital spending in 1970 projected in a recent government report is twice the percentage rise typically foreseen for the gross national product. According to the bank government projections of capital spending have a remarkable record for accuracy.

The prospect of continued strength in plant and equipment outlays is supported by other evidence. Construction contracts for manufacturing commercial and utility projects in early 1970 were above last year's record level. Moreover, the backlog of projects in the bid and planning stage is large and still rising.

The extremely heavy calendar of new corporate security issues in the months ahead, in part, reflects the need for funds to finance acquisitions of fixed assets. Undistributed profits are expected to be somewhat lower this year, but any decline is likely to be offset by rising depreciation allowances.

Despite declines in total output from the peaks of the third quarter of last year and uncertainties as to immediate economic prospects, most businessmen see the current adjustment as a "short and shallow valley." Expectations of a renewed rise in activity and of further increases in prices of capital goods, especially structures, creates a strong incentive to move ahead with investment programs.

Small gains in output per man-hour in the past year coupled with rapid wage increases have caused a sharp rise in labor cost per unit of output. More competitive markets are spurring the acquisition of new facilities to cut costs, raise quality and shorten delivery schedules. Measures to control air and water pollution often require the purchase of expensive special-purpose equipment. All these factors are working to maintain plant and equipment expenditures in 1970, the report concluded.

Bureau Initiates Speaker Service

A Speaker's Service was launched by the Better Business Bureau of Metropolitan Chicago Inc. on Tuesday, April 28, at a reception in the Time-Life Building hosted by Charles A. Adams, vice president, Time Inc. and chairman of the bureau's education committee.

Approximately 100 business and civic leaders have agreed to serve as accredited representatives of BBB Chicago to educate the public on consumer interest matters and what responsible business is doing on a voluntary self-regulation basis.

The speakers were carefully selected from BBB Chicago's member firms, its board of directors, as well as interested people from the Chicago Advertising Club, the Women's Advertising Club, and the Junior Association of Commerce and Industry.

At the reception the speakers were given a short formal presentation on the mechanics of the Speaker's Service, and were presented a copy of the Speaker's Manual, a 102-page speaker's kit with research and documented material, enabling a speaker to prepare a speech on most aspects of the Better Business Bureau for most audiences, in a relatively short time.

Earl R. Lind, BBB Chicago's president said, "No single program we have undertaken will have more long range value in terms of informing various segments of our community concerning the operations of BBB Chicago advertising as a source of information, and the concept of self-regulation as it relates to the principles of free enterprise."

Sola Sailing Into Profits

Sola Basic Industries' fourth quarter net earnings per share rose 63 per cent over the corresponding period last year, setting a new quarterly earnings record for the company which has an Elk Grove Village facility. Frank H. Roby, president of the Milwaukee-based corporation, told the Atlanta Society of Financial Analysts recently.

Earnings a share for the fiscal year ending March 31 were up 38 per cent on a 10 per cent increase in sales, Roby added.

Net earnings in the fourth quarter were $1,225,779 or 39 cents a share in contrast with $748,520 or 24 cents a share a year earlier. Sales for the period were $25,964,346 or 8 per cent from $24,140,773 in the same quarter of fiscal 1969.

Fiscal 1970 net earnings were $3,458,763 or $1.10 a share. Corresponding results last year were $2,415,836 or 80 cents a share. Sales totaling a record $99,396,890 were up from $90,064,890 a year earlier.

Improved operations and oil-filled transformer cost reductions at Hevi-Duty Electric's new Goldsboro plant, reorganization and consolidation of the Lindberg Hevi-Duty Division, integration of the recently acquired TOMIC and EVER-WARM lines into Anchor Electric's new Whiteville plant as well as integration of a new marine electrical equipment line into Nelson Electric's enlarged Tulsa plant were mentioned as factors in profit margin improvement.

Roby also cited continuing emphasis on buildup of the company's network of overseas plants.

Sola Basic Industries is a leading manufacturer of electrical and electronic equipment for the distribution, control and use of electrical power.

Brookwood Greens To Open in June

Brookwood Greens a new complex of 720 condominiums will be developed in west suburban Wood Dale adjoining the Brookwood Country Club. It was announced recently.

According to developer Richard Fencil, pre-opening sales for apartments in the first building will begin approximately June 1.

The $44 million Brookwood Greens complex will be situated on a wooded site on the west side of Wood Dale Road, about one mile south of Irving Park Road. The luxury condominiums will overlook the fairways of Elmhurst Country Club to the south and Brookwood Country Club to the west. The property is bounded on the north by DuPage County forest preserves.

Plans call for six multiple buildings containing 120 condominium apartments each. Every building will feature two levels of inside parking laundry and storage areas and recreational facilities with saunas meeting rooms and access to two deluxe outdoor swimming pools. "Complete maintenance is provided," Fencil said "so residents may enjoy carefree apartment living with the benefits of suburban location and advantages of home ownership."

Brookwood Greens will offer a wide selection of floor plans including one-bedroom/one-bath, two-bedroom/two-bath and three-bedroom/two-bath units. The apartments will be custom finished to suit individual tastes. A selection of apartments is available.

Each apartment will open on to its own private balcony. Promenade level apartments will open to private, landscaped terraces. Every apartment will feature a breakfast area in addition to separate dining rooms or dining L's. Each unit will have closet space and fully equipped kitchens.

Apartments in Brookwood Greens will start at about $25,000 to $40,000. Prospective purchasers are invited to the on-site sales headquarters during the pre-opening sales period beginning about June 1. Those reserving apartments prior to grand opening scheduled for late August will take advantage of pre-opening savings, according to the developer.

Lansman Heads Service

The new president of the Illinois Insurance Information Service, organization of the 25 principal Illinois casualty companies, is Harry A. Lansman, executive vice president of Lumbermens Mutual Casualty Co., Kemper Group, Chicago.

His election by executives of the industry followed his work as chairman of an ad hoc committee working on Illinois insurance problems.

Lansman is also manager of underwriting and industry affairs for Lumbermens.

He entered the insurance business 15 years ago as a claimsman and has been in underwriting, training and sales since joining Kemper Insurance in 1956. He was placed in charge of the Kemper Companies fire and casualty underwriting five years ago.

He is a member of the Industry Advisory Committee, Department of Transportation, member of the Advisory Committee Flood Insurance Department of Housing and Urban Development, and director of the American Arbitration Association. He recently was appointed by Governor Richard B. Ogilvie to the advisory board of the Illinois Insurance Department and the Governor's Advisory Council.

Other major officials selected by the executives for the 1970-71 term include vice presidents: Darrell L. Achenbach, executive vice president, the County Companies, Bloomington; Donald L. Schaffer, vice president and general attorney, Allstate Insurance Co., Northbrook; Nelson K. McBrien, executive vice president, Millers' Mutual Insurance Association of Illinois, Alton; Jacques W. Sammet, president, Continental Casualty Company — CNA, Chicago; and Neil C. Russell, executive vice president, Inter-Insurance Exchange of the Chicago Motor Club.

Cameron Brown, president Interstate Fire and Casualty Co., Chicago, was named secretary and Robert H. Gowers, treasurer, Zurich Insurance Co., Chicago, was re-elected treasurer.

Boise Cascade Is Optimistic

Boise Cascade Corp. including a Palatine office, reported a net income a common share of 66 cents, compared to 66 cents for last year's first quarter, a decrease of 9 per cent.

Net income was $17,680,000, compared with $19,680,000 for the same period a year ago. Net sales increased 6 per cent to $461,740,000. "We consider this to be a very good first quarter for 1970," stated William M. Agee, vice president, finance.

Several Boise Cascade paper mills set tonnage records. The new liner-board machine in De Ridder, La. started production during the first quarter.

"Looking ahead," Agee stated, "we are optimistic for 1970. This outlook is supported by the recent drop in the bank prime interest rate. The interest reduction, together with a strong pent-up demand for housing appears to be improving the prices for building materials."

Boise Cascade is an international manufacturing and service organization participating in eight markets: building materials, housing, urban development, engineering and construction services, recreation, communication papers, packaging and the office.

The board of directors of Boise Cascade Corp. has approved a second quarter cash dividend of 61 cents a share on the company's $2.50 par value common stock. The dividend is payable on July 23, to stockholders of record at the close of business on June 19.

The directors also approved payment of a 75 cent cash dividend on the company's $1 cumulative convertible preferred stock, Series A. This dividend is payable on Aug. 1 to stockholders of record at the close of business on July 10.

Shareholders of Boise Cascade re-elected the present 16-member board of directors, including President and chairman Robert V. Hansberger, and heard the company's two executive vice presidents, John B. Fery and Stephen B. Moser, and financial vice president William M. Agee, comment on Boise Cascade operations.

Underinsurance Hurts Homeowner

More than one-half of the nation's single-family homes may be underinsured according to a report on inflation and building and repair costs in the current Journal of American Insurance.

Wages in the construction industry have skyrocketed up 22 per cent since 1964. In addition, building material costs have increased 11.5 per cent in the same period, said the magazine, a publication of the American Mutual Insurance Alliance.

For the homeowner, this means that more money is needed in the event of a loss in order to pay for restoration of his home in material of like kind and quality. In many cases, owners, especially those who pay their homeowners premium every three years, may easily be outdistanced in the inflation race.

How spiraling inflation can undermine the security of a homeowner was recently demonstrated in a survey of inflationary effects on home rebuilding conducted by a large mutual insurance company. According to company figures, the cost of replacing a home jumped 14.5 per cent in a two-year period. In terms of dollars, this adds up to the fact that a home that cost only $20,000 to replace two years ago would take $22,900 to replace today.

Persons who own older homes are in general the most seriously affected by the pressure of inflation. The average home built for $15,000 10 years ago would cost about $21,000 to replace in today's construction market, according to the report.

Policyholders who allow their homes to become underinsured lose in two ways, said the journal. First, if it is destroyed the building will not be covered for the full loss. And secondly, if they don't maintain coverage to at least 80 per cent of their dwelling's replacement cost they will lose out on a special feature included in the policy: waiver of the usual deduction for depreciation on the building loss.

This incentive is built into the policy to encourage policyholders to maintain an adequate amount of insurance. But in effect it is also a bonus benefit for the homeowner. Insurance normally does not replace new for old, and in other types of policies depreciation is taken into account in settling a loss. But when homeowners insurance is above the 80 per cent level, the policy will pay the full replacement cost of the loss up to policy limits.

How can a homeowner make sure that his home is adequately insured? First, he should examine his homeowners policy coverage limits. If he hasn't raised them within the past five inflationary years, he is definitely in underinsurance trouble.

Next, he should consider obtaining the services of a professional appraiser to determine what it would cost to completely rebuild his present home. As an alternative, the contractor or development company which built his home may also be able to come up with an accurate estimate of what it would take to replace the structure.

However, many insurance companies now provide policyholders with do-it-yourself appraisal kits. One simple kit enables a policyholder to determine the replacement cost of his home in a matter of minutes. All the owner has to do is take the original cost of constructing his home and apply it to the replacement cost multiplier listed for the year it was built. For instance, if the home was constructed in 1958 for $15,000, he would multiply that figure by 1.50 (the 1958 multiplier). This would give him a figure of $22,500, an increase in replacement value of $7,500.

Insurance company personnel and insurance representatives are also ready to help policyholders in determining the proper amount of insurance they need, said the journal. These professionals keep constant watch on rising costs and insured's exposures through contact with local contractors and appraisal services. Their knowledge of rebuilding costs is further enhanced by day-to-day handling of claims submitted by property owners who have suffered losses, the report con-

Name Pamco Executives

The Paraplegics Manufacturing Co. of Bensenville has announced that Irvin M. Prybyl has been elected vice president of manufacturing, succeeding the late Lester M. Prybyl.

Prybyl, who lives at 1100 Willow Lane in Mount Prospect, has been with the company for 17 years and has held the positions of plant superintendent and general foreman. He is a paraplegic as a result of polio, which he contracted while attending high school.

Prior to joining the paraplegics firm, he was a self-employed watchmaker in Arlington Heights. The company, also known by its trade name of Pamco, has gained a reputation for the employment of physically handicapped persons. It assembles electronic and electro-mechanical equipment for other companies throughout the United States. In 1968 a branch plant was opened in Phoenix, Ariz.

In making the announcement, Dwight D. Guilford, Jr., president, stated that other recent promotions included the naming of Mrs. Pauline Allen as corporate secretary and David Hudson as director of purchases.

Guilford stated that nine months' sales for the company ending March 31 had already passed the million dollar mark and that employment had reached an all time high of 175 employees.

Articulated Boom Has Flexibility

A mechanized version of the "board-in-house reach" is being used at the new Westlake community in Bloomingdale to lay concrete driveways for the first 140 homes in spite of muddy terrain.

Construction crews of the Hoffman Rosner Corp., builders of Westlake, are using a concrete pumping rig that can reach out as much as 60 feet over soft spots to apply the concrete mix exactly where needed. The rig is stationed in the street.

Mainly used for high forms of tall buildings, this is the first time the pump-and-boom device has been put to work for driveways.

Ordinarily, concrete trucks would back up onto the ground and dump the concrete mix right into the driveway forms. But since the earth is still relatively soft, a fully-loaded truck, which weighs up to 28 tons, would bog down. The alternative would be to carry the concrete by wheelbarrow from the truck to the pouring site.

The special rig has an all-hydraulic articulated boom, which can be adjusted to practically any angle. A flexible spout at the end enables the worker to pin-point delivery to each driveway form. Concrete can be pumped at the rate of 60 cubic yards an hour, enabling a driveway to be poured in 10 minutes.

Part of a 500-acre site in west suburban Bloomingdale, the Sunnyside section of Westlake will include two-story designs, ranches, split-levels and dual level homes ranging in price from $30,950 to $43,500. When completed, the Hoffman Rosner community will consist of 2,631 housing units.

NO STICK-IN-THE-MUDS are allowed at the Westlake development in Bloomingdale. Construction crews of the Hoffman Rosner Corp. use a pumping rig for applying concrete mix. Stationed on the street, the rig can reach out as much as 60 feet, eliminating the need to drive trucks on the soft earth.

6,000 Visitors Trekged to Show

An estimated 6,000 persons attended the recently-held "Products for Progress in the '70's" products show presented by the Northwest Suburban Manufacturer's Association.

Joseph Henderson of Precision Steel Warehouse, Franklin Park, general chairman of the two-day event held April 16th and 17th, said the show offered the public an opportunity to view the many types of goods manufactured in the area.

Henderson listed 52 area manufacturers who participated in the program by displaying their products in booths at the O'Hare Inn's Convention Hall. They include:

Alpha Employment, Inc.; American Telephone Answering Service; Application Engineering; Bartman-Capal; Beckline Products, Inc.; A. M. Castle (which was donated its space for a booth by the Social Security Administration); Certif-A-Gift Co.; Chicago-Dyna-Burr, Inc.; Chicago Precision Supply Co.;

Kennedy & Co., Inc.; Korthe Engineering Co.; Lancaster Press, Inc.; Lien Chemical; Lindberg Heat Treating Co.; Local Vending Service Co.; Melray Manufacturing Co.; Milsch Tool; Motorola, Inc.;

Northern Illinois Gas Co.; Northwest Suburban Manufacturers Association; Peterson Products Corp.; Precision Steel Warehouse, Inc. (which donated its booth space to Triton Junior College); Pres-On Products, Inc.; Scrap Corp. of America; Slip-Mate Co.; Stanford Advertising Specialties; State Welding Supply Co.;

Streamed Cabinet; Suburban Industrial Supply Co.; United American Insurance Co.; Vapor Engineering, Inc.; Wayne Products, and Zengers, Inc.

"Products for Progress in the '70's" was the 12th biennial products show presented by the Northwest Suburban Manufacturers Association and its predecessor organization, the Franklin Park Manufacturers Association.

NSMA president George Lang of Georges' Screw Machine Products, Franklin Park, said, "We were pleased by the enthusiasm shown by the public. They demonstrated great interest in the many products on display at the show, goods manufactured locally for consumer consumption as well as tools produced for industrial use."

Produced in conjunction with the exhibition was a buyers' guide and membership directory of the NSMA. Prior to the products show, the guide was distributed into buying channels of more than 5,000 metropolitan area manufacturers. The books are now on sale at the NSMA office, 9500 W. Belmont Ave., Franklin Park.

Bearing Company Took Second Step

Chicago Bearing and Power Drive Co. has moved to larger quarters at 2367 Devon Ave., Elk Grove Village, from its former Chicago location.

W. Shibley, vice president of CB&PD, commented, "This is the second step in our expansion program. After serving the Chicago area for more than 35 years as a distributor of all major brands and types of bearings, we recently opened branches in Hammond and Princeton and now find it necessary to expand our headquarters office in the Northwest suburban area."

Announcement Of Speakers Bureau

General Motors announced the formation of a Chicago speakers bureau to provide programs of current interest for schools and civic, social, and business organizations.

"With so much concern about air pollution we decided to make a special program on 'The role of the automobile in the air pollution problem' our foremost presentation," Frank Faraone, regional manager for GM public relations, said.

This new half-hour presentation on air pollution includes a 15 minute film on what General Motors and the industry have accomplished in reducing auto emissions and what they intend to do about the problem.

Organizations wishing to schedule GM speakers can do so by contacting GM Public Relations at 500 North Michigan Avenue. Other subjects available include progress of power, auto safety and auto theft.

Village Realty Announced Office Shows 'New Concept'

John Christensen

Anthony Andros

Wayne Johnson

A new real estate firm is now open in Elk Grove Village. Specializing in residential sales, Village Realty has announced its official opening at 92 Turner Ave. Principals of the firm include John Christensen, Anthony Andros and Wayne Johnson, who have participated in sales in excess of $10 million over the last several years. Serving Elk Grove Village, the company will also serve other areas, according to Christensen.

Commercial and industrial sales are also offered in addition to the residential market.

Christensen has been a real estate broker since 1956. He sold over $1,000,000 worth of homes during 1967, 1968 and 1969. He is a resident of Elk Grove Village.

Andros, with several years' experience in real estate sales, sold $1 million worth of real estate in 1968 and 1969. A resident of Elk Grove Township, he has received the designation, GRI (Graduate Realtors Institute).

Johnson, who has been in the real estate business since 1967, was a "million dollar salesman" for both 1968 and 1969. He lives in Bensenville.

A total of five salesmen are associated with Village Realty.

Christensen expressed optimism for the real estate market since the easing of the mortgage market and the lowering of points charged on FHA loans. "The market has picked up," he commented. "Some people were holding back because of the large down payments that were previously required."

"Because of the shortage of homes, the prices are definitely going up from the levels earlier this year," said Christensen. "Homes are selling better than last year at this time. By the end of the year, the demand will be even greater."

"Today's new concept of real estate service," a phrase displayed during construction in the windows of the newly relocated and enlarged Quinlan and Tyson, Inc. Palatine area real estate office at 630 E. Northwest Hwy., Palatine, is now available to Northwest Suburban home buyers and sellers, Richard G. Rutledge, vice president and general manager-real estate sales of the Real Estate firm and Robert A. Stirm. Palatine area sales manager announced this week, following the Firm's May 1 move from much smaller quarters at 132 S. Northwest Hwy.

The executives of Quinlan and Tyson, Inc., Realtors, explained the "new concept" as a program involving office design, office location, direction of office activities, and office staffing. The new building has multiple conference facilities for personal consultation between brokers and clients. Space dividers, carpeting, soundproofing and set-back of desks provide complete privacy for less formal conversations.

Areawide service is also part of the "new concept," Stirm added. The nine Quinlan and Tyson offices have been located, planned and equipped, and will be staffed, for intensive service to a primary market area roughly centered on the intersection of Northwest Hwy. and Route 53, extending from the Northwest Tollway system to the North Cook County line and beyond, including the Villages of Palatine, Rolling Meadows (including Plum Grove), Buffalo Grove, Long Grove, Inverness, Arlington Heights (northern portion), Wheeling and Barrington countryside.

The pluses and minuses of covering a real estate sales area from large, centrally located offices (versus a larger number of smaller offices) have been thoroughly explored by Quinlan and Tyson. Rutledge stated, nothing that the firm typically operates larger offices in its other locations. "A larger office offers advantages in terms of availability of sales personnel at all times, rapid handling of advertising inquiry, speedy handling of messages and other matters," he said.

"There will always be someone on duty at our office during business hours, including weekends," Rutledge said. "Also, parking for over 32 cars in front of and behind the office assures availability of transportation and parking at all times."

"Today's new concept of real estate service also includes an integral part a program of continuing education for real estate sales representatives and a research facility," Rutledge said. The 630 E. Northwest Hwy. offices are equipped for the use of audio visual and other types of salesman training programs. Training programs supplementing those of the local Board of Realtors for new sales representatives will be included as required.

"Sidwell Maps," showing lot sizes, descriptions, and permanent index numbers as assigned by the assessor, are included in a collection of real estate maps and books available to personnel and customers.

Office areas include a secretary-receptionist station, filing of all current records, and a custom-designed system of multiple telephone switching at each desk and office interdialing.

Rutledge noted that the relocation and expansion of Quinlan and Tyson's offices from quarters at 132 S. Northwest Hwy. to 630 E. Northwest Hwy. represents the latest stage of an expansion of offices located in Arlington Heights, Evanston, Deerfield, Glenview, Lake Forest, Libertyville, Schaumburg and Winnetka.

Completion of the new building at 630 E. Northwest Hwy. by Simons Construction Co. to accommodate offices for Quinlan and Tyson began late in January, and is being completed this month. Transfer of operations from the former location was completed April 30. Interested customers and local businessmen are invited to visit the new offices for informal tours at their convenience. Stirm stated that formal opening ceremonies are planned for a later time.

Members of the area office staff in addition to Stirm, include: Beverly Berry, Mary Ann Falkenberg, Mary Fraser, Joseph Fredian, Peggy Huber, Mary Jane Kohl, Maryellen Morris and Grace Sullivan.

General contractor for office interior aided by John Kearney, work was Simons Construction Co. Architect for the project was Meyer Rudoff,

Purchasing Power Gains

With the majority of Americans receiving higher incomes today than a year ago, consumers are in a position to stimulate business through higher spending, according to this month's Barometer of Business, Harris' economic newsletter.

The reduction in the surtax from 10 to 5 per cent last January has maintained the upswing in personal income at an 8 per cent pace. Take-home pay will increase further July 1 when the surtax is eliminated.

Moreover, an increase in Social Security benefits and the pay raise for postal, civil service and military personnel will put additional purchasing power in the hands of government employees and retired citizens.

At the same time that individuals are experiencing higher incomes, they are also increasing their savings. Higher ceiling rates on time deposits and savings capital have encouraged people to place more of their funds in banks and savings and loan institutions during the past two months.

Despite the improving income of consumers, households have displayed little inclination to step up their purchases of large ticket items such as cars. Automobile sales of domestic products slipped 12 per cent from a year earlier during the first four months of 1970.

A change in buying attitudes could well generate a resurgence in consumer purchasing in late 1970, the newsletter concluded. But if an extended strike occurs in the automobile industry this fall, the pickup in expenditures would be delayed until early 1971.

Barber Gains Certificate

Frank P. Barber

Frank P. Barber, who has represented Baird & Warner, Inc., as resident leasing and management agent at Elk Grove Terrace Apartments in Elk Grove Village for the past year, has been awarded a certificate of achievement for attending 20 hours of real estate courses at the Central YMCA Community College.

To further his training Barber is now attending the Institution of Real Estate Management for certification as a Certified Property Manager (CPM). A former retail salesman, Barber joined Baird & Warner in April, 1969, after returning from military service in Vietnam.

He and his wife Jeri live at Elk Grove Terrace Apartments.

Reports Sales For One Week

William Maybrook, general sales manager said that approximately $1 million in sales have been recorded at Hanover Highlands near Hanover Park since 311 Building Corp. announced its new "Dimension 70's" marketing program last weekend.

He reported that approximately 1,900 families visited Hanover Highlands to view the low-priced single family homes aimed at the $8,000-$10,000 wage earner on Saturday and Sunday. More than 200 families daily have been visiting the development since Monday, May 4.

The three and four-bedroom homes range from $22,990 to $26,990. Four homes are included in the Dimension 70's program. They are the: Tempo, a three-bedroom ranch priced at $22,990; Nova, a three-bedroom tri-level, $24,990; Vista, a three-bedroom multi-level $25,990; and the Bedford, a four-bedroom, two-story Cape Cod selling for $26,990.

Hanover Highlands is located at Irving Park and Barrington Roads. 311 is a publicly-held company (OTC) with headquarters at Rolling Meadows.

Prior to his promotion he was an engineering associate in ESS Engineering at Indian Hill Bell Laboratories in Naperville. Insuring Men of Modest Incomes

The affluent and the not so affluent are buying more large insurance policies. So John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company found in the last 12 months.

Since April, 1969, Hancock sold 3,600 life insurance policies in amounts of $100,000 and more — an average of about 10 a day. In contrast, 20 years ago, when average income was $4,500 or about half what it is today, the company sold 10 for the year.

Among the 3,600 policies were 20 multi-million dollar policies. Two decades ago John Hancock did not sell any of that size.

However, most of the $100,000 policies were not bought by men with extraordinary incomes. People of more modest incomes, a telephone installer, city patrolman, luncheonette owner and others, found they could afford and needed $100,000 of protection.

The reason for the increase in the number of policies is simple, explained Paul Weaver, Hancock marketing vice president. "Today a $10,000-a-year man is worth more than $100,000 to his family. At age 30, he can expect to earn over $300,000 in his career, even if he never gets a raise."

In addition, he said, rapidly rising cost of goods, services and education make the need for greater protection obvious.

Larger incomes are not the only reason more Americans can afford large policies — the cost of life insurance has actually dropped somewhat over the last 20 years.

"The price tag on life insurance has not followed the general price spiral," Weaver explained, "as an expanding and generally profitable economy has given insurance companies a greater return on investments."

A man of 30 can buy a $100,000 policy package combining permanent and term insurance for about $48 a month, he said.

Hancock computers indicate that sales of larger policies will be even more commonplace in the '70's. They make that prediction when given estimates that families with incomes of over $10,000 will account for 72 per cent of total family income in 1975. In 1965, only 50 per cent fell in this category.

However, it probably will be well beyond the '70's before Mr. Average American can afford a five figure annual premium on a multi-million dollar policy, according to Hancock.

Here's How Realtor Can Help You

The service of the Realtor in fulfilling the need of the home seeker and seller too often overshadows his other roles in the whole spectrum of the real estate field. Realtor John P. McKay, president of the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors, said this week as his board prepared for its celebration of 1970 Realtor Week May 17-23.

John P. McKay

The expansion and increasing complexity continually developing in industry and commerce point up the mushrooming need for the expertise of the Realtor in all real estate matters. he continued.

"Not only industry, but government is taking advantage of the Realtor's professional services," President McKay added. "For example, our growing network of interstate highways and the continuing urban renewal programs require the services of appraisers to estimate the value of properties taken under eminent domain," he said. "As part of this activity, the appraiser who is usually a Realtor in many cases appears as an expert witness for either the government or the property owner in court cases arising out of condemnation proceedings."

Housing for low and moderate income families is a current and legitimate concern of government and society," Realtor McKay explained. "To assure that this type of housing is properly man-as do educational and other institutions, banks, and almost all types of business. Members of the newest branch of real estate specialization — counseling — serve as advisors in property acquisition, disposal, and use, much as a lawyer counsels in matters of law. Retained on a fee, retainer or per diem basis, the counselor has no direct interest in the outcome of a given transaction.

"Any discussion of corporations and their need for real estate for expansion or transfer of operations, brings to mind the large number of brokers who specialize in the sale or lease of commercial property," McKay continued.

"A relatively new phenomenon in business property is the industrial park, in which light manufacturing and warehousing facilities are provided for an area, which, otherwise, would have no industry to provide jobs and a broadened tax base," said McKay. "Many of these have been developed through Realtors who specialize in industrial property, an area which gained prominence during and immediately after World War II."

"All of these specialties depend upon one thing for their success — land. Today, many brokers are devoting their businesses solely to the creation of better uses for and more widespread ownership of land. It used to be that land brokers spent their time selling, leasing and managing only agricultural acreage. With the tremendous boom in land values and the need for more space to house and serve our growing population, these former farm specialists have gained the knowledge and experience to make them expert in the best use of land, whether urban, rural, suburban or agricultural. Contact with them is invaluable for those interested in the future development of land."

Many of the people involved in real estate are Realtors, signifying they subscribe to a strict code of ethics as members of their local and state boards and of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

"Under all is the land," the five words that open the Realtor's Code of Ethics, have been selected as the theme for Realtor Week according to McKay. He announced that a highlight of the week will be the release of a new book, Under All is the Land, with text and more than 200 color photographs depicting various areas in the United States.

Home Builders Hold Meeting

The varied and sometimes dangerous experiences of an adventurous Colonel Jerry Samuels will be presented in a color-slide illustrated talk at the May meeting of the Northern Illinois Home Builders Association, set for Tuesday, May 19 at Sharko's Restaurant, Villa Park.

Colonel Samuels will describe several of his more exciting adventures in his talk, illustrating the stories with color slides taken during the trips.

For example, he plans to describe the hazards of hunting seals with the Eskimos of remote White Cove on the western shore of Hudson Bay in Canada's Northwest Territories.

Colonel Samuels has traveled the entire globe as an explorer and hunter. He retired from the U.S. Army after 27 years of service and has written numerous articles for leading outdoor and sports magazines.

Some 100 home builders and subcontractors are expected to attend the meeting which begins at 7 p.m.

House Hunting Clinic Offered

If house hunting has become a troublesome search for you, help is on the way.

North West Federal Savings of Chicago will offer its Home Buyers' Clinic on two dates — Monday, May 18 and Thursday, May 21.

A panel of experts will suggest ways you can make your house-hunting easier and will answer your questions about home buying plans and problems.

A film, "What You Should Know Before You Buy A Home," will be shown. Every couple attending will be given a free copy of the Chicago Land Community Guide and other useful literature.

Guest panelists include Robert Winkler, sales director for the Centex Elk Grove Village development. Winkler is a current member of the Home Builders Association and past president of the organization's Sales and Marketing Council. He is also a founder and past president of the Elk Grove Kiwanis.

Fred Bragiel is partner in the law firm of Sloan & Bragiel. He is a graduate of DePaul University and a member of the American Bar Association and of the Chicago Bar Association. Bragiel specializes in the practice of real estate law.

James Best has served at North West Federal for the past 12 years. He holds the position of assistant treasurer and title officer. Best is a graduate of the American Savings and Loan Institute.

The public is invited to attend one of the two sessions. Meetings will be held in North West Federal's Community Room, 4901 W. Irving Park Road, lower level. The program begins at 7:30 p.m. and ends at 9:00 p.m.

For reservations write Robert F. Kaponek at North West Federal Savings, 4901 W. Irving Park Road, Chicago, Illinois 60641, or call Esther Brewer at SPing 7-7200.

QUINLAN AND TYSON'S AREA OFFICE CONCEPT SERVES OVER 37 COMMUNITIES FROM NINE STRATEGIC LOCATIONS

Diagnostic Check For Executives

Although top management preaches the merits of delegation, too many managers, supervisors, and foremen remain "do it yourself" types without knowing it, said Raymond Dreyfack, business advisor.

He provided a diagnostic checklist in the current edition of the Office Administration Service of The Dartnell Corp.

As an executive, you are not delegating properly if you find at least three or four of the following indicators applying to your situation, said Dreyfack:

You're too busy, with no cushion of time to sit back and think creatively.

You keep putting off an important but unscheduled project.

You find yourself taking more work home at night.

You wouldn't mind delegating that job, but after all, no one can do it as fast as you do.

You recognize you should do more planning but can't find the time for it.

Your department's turnover rate is too high; employees quitting because they don't have enough challenge and opportunity.

Tasks pile up to the ceiling when you're away, out sick, or on vacation.

You feel insecure at times, reluctant to delegate work because you're afraid a subordinate will do it better than you.

You'd be happy to delegate except one thing: The know-how you possess came hard and took a long time to acquire; why should you pass along what you know to somebody else?

If three or four of the above-stated indicators ring a bell, it may be a sign that there's no better time than the present to start sharpening your skills as a delegator, and if several more of the indicators strike a familiar note, your need for corrective action may be urgent, Dreyfack warned.

Dr. Powers Part Of Convention

Dr. Walter L. Powers

Dr. Walter L. Powers of 1911 N. Chestnut Ave., Arlington Heights, served on the program at the 15th Annual Convention of the International Reading Association in Anaheim, Calif., May 6-9.

Dr. Powers is vice president of Psychotechnics, Inc., Glenview. Prior to his appointment at Psychotechnics, he served as a classroom teacher, reading coordinator and supervisor, administrative assistant for curriculum development, and assistant superintendent for curriculum for school systems in Indiana. He is quite active professionally and is affiliated with numerous professional organizations.

IRA has 55,000 members and subscribers throughout the United States and Canada, as well as 60 foreign countries. IRA's publications provide educators with the latest information on reading instruction and the annual convention is held for the exchange of international ideas and information in the field of reading. The Anaheim convention theme is "Reading and the Individual."

Develop New Particleboard

A research and product development breakthrough with substantial impact toward further improvement of the environment in wood processing communities was reported today by E. W. Hughes, vice president, timber and building materials manufacturing, Boise Cascade Corp., which has a Palatine office.

"The successful testing of research samples of a particleboard which for the first time utilizes log bark," Hughes said, "means that millions of tons of such materials which formerly went up in smoke will be utilized."

Boise Cascade's particleboard plant was built in 1965 and is now producing and shipping some 2,000 carloads of particleboard a year made from 110 thousand tons of waste materials; a second plant is planned.

Together both plants will use over 400,000 tons a year of wood waste previously burned. This includes planer mill shavings, planer mill trim ends, sawdust and plywood panel trim and ultimately, bark.

The new bark board, composed of 25 per cent bark and 75 per cent wood waste is blended with synthetic resin binders and wax sizes. After the mat is formed, it is hot pressed into a medium density, rigid board. Particleboard is used as floor underlayment in home construction and as corestock in the manufacture of furniture.

Teach Safety Near Railroad

"Spending a few concerned minutes with your children today may spare them crippling injury and even death this summer," said R. A. Dregler, superintendent of the Chicago and North Western R.R.'s Chicago terminal division which encompasses most of the railroad's suburban operations.

Dregler said that, with the school year drawing to an end, this is the most appropriate time for parents and school teachers to devote a few minutes to lessons for children on safety, especially the dangers of playing on or near railroad tracks. "Now is the time to discuss the subject with the youngsters before school vacations start," said Dregler, adding that such safety reminders should be repeated by parents throughout the summer months.

Dregler said trespassing by children on railroad property is always the worst during summer vacation months when they have time on their hands.

Hardly a vacation month passes without some injury or fatality to children playing on railroad tracks, flipping cars, climbing on or under cars or crossing tracks where no pedestrian crosswalk is provided, he continued.

"The few minutes parents or teachers spend discussing these hazards with youngsters today," said Dregler, "may be the most important minutes in the lives of these children. Nothing could please us more than the knowledge that every youngster in the areas we serve will have a wonderful summer vacation and will be back in school next fall — safe and sound."

Units Topped by Penthouse Moe Heads Three Plants

"Come and compare" is the theme for the sales campaign for Hollywood Builders' newest project — the Stonebridge Hill apartment community in Arlington Heights.

Manuel S. Kramer, vice president of Hollywood Builders, estimates that the 96 one and two-bedroom apartments in the first of six units were 70 per cent rented by grand opening date May 4. First families began moving into the development April 1.

Four of the six units, set on a 45-acre landscaped plot containing swimming pool, low field-tone fences, plus a recreation hall, will contain 96 apartments; the first and second units first is now completed) will also feature penthouses atop the four-story elevator buildings. One-bedroom apartments rent for $210; two-bedroom for $265; the penthouses, furnished to taste, rent for $850.

Each penthouse will contain a living room, a den with fully equipped wet bar, refrigerator and ice maker, a formal dining room, kitchen and washroom, all on the third floor. Oak stairs lead up to master bedrooms, bathrooms and walk-in closets.

"There is a trend in business and in industry today," Kramer pointed out, "to avoid the trip from outlying airports to crowded downtown areas. Within a five-mile radius of Stonebridge Hill there are more than 250 companies which are natural prospects for a company-leased apartment which can be used for a variety of purposes."

But how will the renter of the smaller units feel about all this activity in his building? "We anticipate no problems on that score," said Kramer. "These are elevator buildings, and the penthouses are really in a world of their own. Most of the smaller apartment dwellers won't even notice that a company meeting or party is being held above them."

Each apartment in Stonebridge Hill has two walk-in closets; self-cleaning ovens, self-defrosting refrigerators, dishwasher and disposal; rooms completely carpeted; individually controlled heating and air conditioning; landlord pays heating and cooking costs; angled terraces.

The recreation hall will contain party facilities, an equipped exercise room, game room for billiards and table tennis, separate men's and women's saunas, and separate men's and women's locker rooms with direct access to the swimming pool.

Hollywood Builders, now in its 20th year of business in the Chicago area, has a current total gross volume in excess of $100 million. The firm is headed by Jack F. Netchin, president; and Manuel Kramer, vice president.

Paper Firm Observes Anniversary

Observing its sixtieth anniversary this month is the Hobart-McIntosh Paper Co., headquartered at 1825 Greenleaf Ave., Elk Grove Village.

The company is a supplier of fine paper for the printing, publishing and commercial trades and is the developer of technical papers for the industrial field.

In May, 1910, A. C. Allen, S. G. Barton and H. B. Hobart each engaged in paper sales in the Chicago area. Joined forces to form the Barton-Hobart Paper Co.

The corporate name of the firm was changed to Hobart Paper Co. in 1927. That same year Percy H. Oliver joined the firm as a salesman and in 1940 became its president.

In 1967 the company merged with the McIntosh Paper Co., forming the Hobart-McIntosh Paper Co. of today. J. J. Barrett became vice-chairman of the board of the new company, with P. H. Oliver as chairman of the board, and his son, T. H. Oliver, president.

Hobart-McIntosh Paper Co. has nationwide service with sales offices in the east as well as warehouse facilities in Cleveland and Elk Grove.

Tips from a Gourmet Expert

Cooking Teacher Shares Her Recipes

by LOIS SEILER

A gourmet cook in every sense of the word is Mrs. Kenneth E. Slavik of 815 We-Go Trail Mount Prospect.

Not only does she enjoy preparing fancy dishes at home, but she also belongs to two gourmet cooking groups and recently completed teaching a course in gourmet cooking in the adult education program at Prospect High School.

Although elegant food is Falcia Slavik's specialty, she is a staunch advocate of recipes that can be prepared in advance.

There are so many fine dishes that can be prepared ahead of time leaving a hostess free to nap in the afternoon and greet her guests relaxed and in a lovely hostess gown, she said.

KNOWN AS FIL to her friends this capable homemaker has a flair for foreign cookery and particularly enjoys Polynesian food which she and her husband developed a great appreciation for while vacationing in Hawaii.

She also likes Indian curry-type dishes and is enthusiastic about cooking with wine.

All the alcohol burns away yet the delicate aroma of the wine remains to enhance the flavor of almost any food," she remarked.

A dry white wine is used in one of her favorite recipes called Chicken Crab Bake, which has been in her family for four generations.

Typical of a gourmet dish that can be prepared in advance, the recipe is made in the morning by Fil. It consists of chicken breasts smothered in a savory sauce which uses chicken broth and white wine as its base. Tomatoes, chives and mushrooms add color and flavor.

ABOUT AN HOUR before serving Fil pops this into the oven. The only last-minute chore is the addition of crabmeat and parsley the final ten minutes of baking time.

The combined flavors of the chicken and crab are delightful served over Golden Raisin Rice. Fil simply prepares Uncle Ben's Long Grain and Wild Rice according to package directions adding 1/2 cup each golden raisins and chopped almonds.

"The raisins add a sweetness to the rice which complements the Chicken Crab Bake," she said.

As accompaniments she suggests Broccoli Puff, a delicious vegetable dish which is similar to a soufflé yet devoid of any temperamental features.

Cooked broccoli is covered with a creamy sauce easily made of mushroom soup, cheese, egg milk and mayonnaise. Buttered bread crumbs are used as a topping.

"THIS ALSO CAN be prepared in the morning, then baked before serving," Fil explained. "It has a custard-like texture and will hold without falling."

For a salad she recommends crisp romaine and shredded carrots topped by a Buttermilk Bleu Cheese Dressing.

Made in a blender, buttermilk gives a smooth texture to the mayonnaise base while bleu cheese, green onions and garlic add zest.

For dessert she likes the drama of Cherries Jubilee. With lights dimmed, she prepares this flaming dessert in a chafing dish at the table.

Dark sweet cherries are cooked in a syrup to which warm brandy is added and then ignited. After the alcohol has burned off the delectable branched cherries are served over vanilla ice cream.

To accompany this elegant meal, Fil recommends a dry white wine such as Chablis or Cracking Rose.

ALTHOUGH SHE IS the busy mother of two young children, Brad, 3½, and Jacalyn, 11 months old, and is active in several organizations, Fil loves to entertain, maintaining that with recipes such as these it can be done with ease.

A graduate of Northern Illinois University with a major in English and speech and minor in home economics and library science, she was both a teacher and a librarian for six years before her children were born.

She and her husband have been members of a couples' gourmet club for eight years. She also belongs to the local Newcomers' Gourmet Club and is an active circle member at St. Mark's Lutheran Church.

Fil's hobbies are sewing and growing roses and during the summer months she enjoys tennis and golf for recreation.

CHICKEN CRAB BAKE

- 4 chicken breasts, halved and deboned
- 1 teaspoon seasoned salt
- 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground pepper
- 1/4 cup butter
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 2 cups seasoned chicken broth or bouillon
- 2 tablespoons tomato paste
- 1 tomato, chopped
- 1 tablespoon chopped chives, fresh or frozen
- 1/2 cup dry white wine
- 1/2 cup fresh sliced mushrooms
- 1 tablespoon diced fresh parsley
- 1 7½-ounce can crabmeat

Season chicken breasts with salt and pepper and brown lightly in butter. Remove chicken from pan and arrange in casserole.

Make a smooth paste of flour and a small amount of broth. Add to remaining chicken broth and then to drippings in pan. Cook, stirring constantly, until thickened.

Add tomato paste, tomato, chives, wine and mushrooms and heat. Pour over chicken, cover and bake at 325 degrees for 40 minutes.

Top with crabmeat shredded into bite size pieces. Submerge crab in the sauce and sprinkle fresh parsley over all. Continue baking for an additional 10 minutes.

Serve over Golden Raisin Rice. Serves 4.

BROCCOLI PUFF

- 1 10 ounce package frozen broccoli cuts or chopped broccoli
- 1 can condensed cream of mushroom soup
- 2 ounces sharp processed American cheese, shredded (about 1/4 cup)
- 1/2 cup milk
- 1 cup mayonnaise
- 1 beaten egg
- 1/4 cup fine, dry bread crumbs
- 1 tablespoon butter or margarine melted

Cook frozen broccoli according to package directions, omitting salt. Drain thoroughly. Place broccoli cuts in a 10 by 6 by 1½-inch baking dish.

Stir together the condensed soup and shredded cheese. Gradually add milk, mayonnaise and beaten egg to soup mixture, stirring until well blended. Pour over broccoli in baking dish.

Combine bread crumbs and melted butter. Sprinkle evenly over soup mixture. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes, until crumbs are lightly browned. Serves 4.

BUTTERMILK BLEU CHEESE DRESSING

- 1 cup buttermilk
- 6 ounces bleu cheese
- 1 silver garlic
- 3 green onions with tops, cup in one-inch pieces
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 5 springs fresh parsley
- 1 cup mayonnaise
- 1½ pounds Romaine
- 2 carrots, peeled and grated

Make the dressing a day ahead for flavors to blend.

In a blender, combine buttermilk, cheese, garlic, onions, salt and parsley. Blend until cheese and vegetables are fine. Add the mayonnaise and blend just long enough to mix. Store in refrigerator in covered jar. Makes 2½ cups.

The next morning, clean Romaine, drain and wrap in towel for crispness. Store in refrigerator until serving time.

Combine carrots and Romaine and pour dressing on top. It may be tossed if desired.

If individual salad plates are arranged chopped cooked egg may be sprinkled over the greens before they are topped with dressing.

CHERRIES JUBILEE

- 1 can (17 ounces) dark sweet pitted cherries
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- Dash of salt
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- 1/2 to 1/3 cup brandy
- 1 quart vanilla or French vanilla ice cream

Drain cherries. Add enough water to make one cup.

In chafing dish, mix sugar, salt and cornstarch. Add syrup and cook over direct heat until slightly thickened. Add cherries and heat.

In the meantime, have brandy warming over boiling water. Add to cherries and then ignite.

After the flame goes out, serve Cherries Jubilee over ice cream. Serves 4.

SUNSET SALAD, a molded beauty made by Mrs. Kenneth Slavik, right, is admired by Mrs. David Lindzy and Mrs. Robert Tincu members of Mrs. Slavik's gourmet class at Prospect High School. The salad combines canned apricots and 8 ounces cream cheese blended with 1 cup apricot syrup boiled and 3 ounces orange gelatin. After partially set, 1 cup whipping cream whipped and 1 can mandarin oranges are folded in and mold is chilled until firm.

Take a Taste Of This 'n That

Evidently suburban homemakers are always on the look out for new and different recipes to serve the family and to highlight special buffet parties. Four hundred of these homemakers attended the tasting luncheon recently held at the First United Methodist Church in Arlington Heights and at the rate the 10 cent copies of recipes were running out guests were eager to add the unusual ones to their menu files.

There was plenty of room for each of the courses, from appetizers through desserts, as well as room for a display of the church history and a collection of craft hobbies of the Women's Society members. This allowed guests the luxury of strolling through each course sampling dishes leisurely and stopping to purchase recipes along the way.

BY THE TIME THEY reached the dessert table they appreciated a chance to sit down and relax with a cup of coffee or tea and one of each in an array of sweets.

It's amazing how many different meat casserole dishes can cover a buffet table without duplicating a single recipe. They all could easily be served at the most elegant buffet dinner party.

One unusual casserole was donated by Mrs. Forrest Sward, co-chairman of the luncheon, and combines Creamettes with dried beef.

CREAMETTE DRIED BEEF CASSEROLE

- 2 cans mushroom soup
- 2 cups milk
- 1/2 pound Velveeta cheese cut fine
- 4 hard boiled eggs chopped
- 1 box uncooked Creamettes
- 2 packages (3 oz. each) dried beef, cut fine
- 2 small onions, diced

Stir together and let set overnight. Bake 1 hour at 350 degrees in 9x13x2 inch pan.

ANOTHER CASSEROLE appealing to the luncheon guests featured veal, sherry wine and sour cream. Mrs. Gilbert Yeazel, luncheon chairman, made the dish. It serves 8 to 10.

HUNGARIAN VEAL CASSEROLE

1/4 cup butter or margarine

- 4 pounds boneless veal cut in cubes (use cheapest cut)

- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 3 cups condensed mushroom soup, undiluted
- 3 cups sliced onion
- 1/2 teaspoon seasoned salt
- 1/4 teaspoon Tabasco
- 1/2 cup sherry wine
- 1 cup sour cream
- 1/4 teaspoon cracked black pepper

Heat 1/4 cup butter in large skillet. Add veal one third at a time and brown well on all sides. Remove as browned to large roasting pan with cover. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Spoon soup on top.

Pre heat oven to 375 degrees. Heat remaining butter in same skillet. Add onion and saute to golden. Place on meat mixture. Add 1/4 cup water, seasoned salt and Tabasco to skillet. Bring to boiling, stirring to dissolve dripping. Pour over meat.

Bake covered 45 minutes. Remove cover. Add wine and cook 35 minutes uncovered. Add sour cream and cracked pepper. Stir gently to blend and heat 10 minutes more. Serve over rice or noodles.

MRS. MERLE HILL'S corn bread casserole was another of the taste-tempters and serves 10. Mrs. Hill is president of the WSCS.

CORN BREAD CASSEROLE

- 1½ pounds ground beef
- 1 medium onion chopped
- 1/2 cup diced Velveeta cheese
- 1 package corn bread mix
- 1 can tomato soup
- 1/4 cup green pepper chopped
- 2 tablespoons parsley flakes
- Salt and pepper to taste

Saute onion. Reserve 2 tablespoons of this for topping. Saute green pepper and ground beef. Gradually add tomato soup then cheese. Blend and simmer until cheese melts. Place in 9x13 inch baking dish cover with topping and bake until golden brown.

Topping: Prepare corn bread mix. Add reserved sauteed onion and parsley flakes. You can also add 2 tablespoons sugar if desired. Spoon over meat. Make topping no thicker than 1/2 inch.

Mostly for Men

by CHARLES E. FLYNN

Whether working indoors or using the outdoor grill barbecuing pork spare ribs always offers opportunity for savory fare.

This recipe combines fresh grapefruit juice and apple juice with the naturally good flavor of pork and was developed by the famous Colonial Inn in Harbor Springs, Mich.

At the Inn the ribs are baked in a moderate oven but they also can be prepared outdoors with equally good results.

To serve 4 generously select 2 small slabs of pork ribs. Best size will weigh from 1½ to 2 pounds, and beware of the extremely heavy slabs for barbecuing. They're too full of gristle.

HAVE THE RIBS cracked. Wash and wipe dry. Salt and pepper both sides. Place on a rack in a shallow roasting pan (line with foil to save later work) and cook for 1 hour in a 350-degree oven. Turn the pieces occasionally to brown evenly.

In a large sauce pan mix 1 cup fresh grapefruit juice, 1 cup apple juice, 1/4 cup chili sauce, 1/4 cup brown sugar, 1 tablespoon soy sauce, garlic salt to taste, a dash of Worcestershire sauce and teaspoon black pepper.

Begin basting ribs generously with sauce as they brown and continue to baste for another half hour. If ribs are nicely browned, cover and continue to cook for 30 minutes more, basting frequently. This will give you pork which is thoroughly done but moist and juicy.

YOU ALSO CAN use back ribs for this preparation, but cooking time will have to be increased depending upon thickness. Be sure chine bone has been cut for ease in serving and eating.

Outdoors, let the charcoal fire burn down to grey coals, then cook ribs slowly for 45 minutes, turning each 15 minutes to brown evenly. Begin basting as ribs brown and continue to cook for another 45 minutes.

At this point I like to lift ribs onto a large piece of heavy foil, cupping edges. Pour over a small amount of the sauce, then close foil loosely and allow ribs to steam on the back of the fire for a half hour.

Pork must be done, as I've often pointed out, but cooked too long without moisture will be dry.

Hello Hostess

Bid A Fond Farewell

by MARY KAY MARSH

In these mobile days we all get used to bidding friends farewell. But nobody's sent on her way with more genuine regret than a greatly beloved kindergarten teacher.

Our local fives faced such a crisis recently. And while a party didn't exactly reconcile them to the fact that their own Miss W was moving to Pennsylvania at least planning such a special farewell party helped to ease the pain of parting.

THE LITTLE RED schoolhouse was chosen for the theme and all the mothers were invited to the surprise party, held on a Friday afternoon.

The decorations and refreshments were simple. There were plain white napkins with a little red schoolhouse on each. A-B-C blocks added a bit of atmosphere to that already provided by the environment of the kindergarten room itself.

There was fruit punch served formally and with some elegance from a committee member's punch bowl. Above all, there was a cake — and what a cake!

It was a big sheet cake, professionally made, and covered with white icing. It had the top of a little country school house on it, complete with the traditional old school bell. Most important of all it had each child's name on it in red icing — the boys' names on one side, the girls' names on the other. When you're only five, or barely six, it can be quite a thrill to see the name you've only recently learned to read.

PRESENTS WERE A major problem for the mothers. After all, what can you give that's truly memorable when your budget runs only to bubble gum? Why, of course, you give of yourself.

A committee member bought an inexpensive photograph album, and arranged for each child to contribute a picture of himself, plus a sheet of paper on which he (or she) wrote his name, address and birthday. Another committee member wrote a simple farewell poem, working each child's name into it. The poem was tucked into the album with the pictures and was also read aloud at the party. No Shakespeare ever received such enthusiastic applause.

There was also enough money to buy a bracelet with an engraved bangle, as a lasting keepsake. The final touch was a carnation corsage for the guest of honor, decorated with a couple of chenille bees to symbolize that it was from "your hive of fives."

MISSION IMPOSSIBLE here was to keep the surprise party a surprise. But it turned out to be a Mission Possible, with no child giving the teacher so much as a hint.

Since the party was held at school, the committee checked with the school principal and the guest of honor's fellow teachers to be sure that all their arrangements met with school approval. All the pupils' mothers were contacted by letter and phone to arrange for the collection of the children's pictures, plus a modest contribution from each mother to cover the cost of refreshments and presents. You may have been to much more elaborate parties in your day, but we'll bet that you never went to one where such a good time was had by all.

JUST A REMINDER that the sign of Gemini, the Twins, (named for the sons of Jupiter and Leda) is coming up from May 21 to June 21. If you're gifting a Gemini, choose a pair of bookends or anything that comes in pairs. Then wrap them separately, in honor of the astrological sign. Decorate one package with a happy face and put a sad face on the other, as the Gemini is supposed to be notoriously changeable.

Stars Are Favorable to 'Y' Women

According to the stars, this will be another good year for Northwest Suburban YMCA Women's Auxiliary. Born 10 years ago under the sign of Taurus, the Auxiliary possesses great vitality, astrologer Katherine de Jersey told the women at their annual spring luncheon last week at Rolling Meadows Holiday Inn.

Added to the fine position of the Auxiliary's planets and stars is the fact that president Mrs. Walter Barnett is a cusp, a borderline situation which combines characteristics of two signs. Marge is an intuitive Piscean born close to the sign of progressive and inventive Aquarius. Pisceans are also the "power behind the throne," which fits Marge perfectly as intuitive Piscean born close to the sign of she completes her first year of leadership for the 'Y' women.

DURING LAST week's luncheon, Mrs. Barnett presented a check for $3,000 to the YMCA on its $10,000 pledge to the building fund.

She has been elected to another term as president and will be assisted by Mrs. James Costello, Mount Prospect, first vice president, and Mrs. Mylan Ross, Arlington Heights, second vice president.

Also, Mrs. Dominick Spoto, Arlington Heights, as corresponding secretary; Mrs. Leonard Zahour, Arlington Heights, recording secretary, and Mrs. G. Hudson Wirth, Northbrook, treasurer.

SINCE THE AUXILIARY'S purpose is to give both financial and volunteer support to the YMCA, one of its top jobs is that of volunteer director. Mrs. Ted Lubas of Arlington Heights will be in charge of filling all the necessary spots in the 'Y' where the women give regular service all year long. This includes the Snack Bar, locker room, health service, pool guarding and helping the 'Y' office staff with bulk mailings.

Mrs. Erie Whitney, Mount Prospect, is the new membership chairman as the Auxiliary begins a second decade of service to the YMCA.

luncheon for Northwest Suburban 'Y' Women's Auxiliary. Astrologer Katherine de Jersey was guest speaker.

Not Even a Change in Initials

April 11 was a great day for the McDonalds and the McGowans. The two families were united through the marriage of Barbara Sue McDonald and John J. McGowan.

Barbara Sue, daughter of the B. W. McDonalds 624 S. Ridge, Arlington Heights, and John, son of the J. F. McGowans of Fonda, Iowa, were married in Our Lady of the Wayside church, Arlington Heights. Rev. John J. Mackin officiated at the 11 a.m. service in a setting of mums, stephanotis and white gladioli.

Pew decorations were greens with white satin ribbons.

Barbara's empire gown was of white peau de soie trimmed in Venetian lace and satin with long sleeves and chapel train. Her elbow-length veil fell from a small headpiece, and she carried a white nosegay of stephanotis, phalaenopsis and mums. Mr. McDonald gave his daughter in marriage.

The bride's sister and brother and the groom's sister and three brothers were among the attendants. Mrs. M. E. "Why Couldn't I Do" Amundsen of Salisbury N.C. was her sister's maid of honor, and Mrs. John Russell of Houston, Texas, sister of the groom, was one of the bridesmaids. Other bridesmaids were Mrs. James Vandenberg of Martinsville, Ind., and Miss Carol Lofler of Omaha, Neb.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. McGowan

Their empire gowns were fashioned with white Venetian lace bodices and powder blue skirts. Powder blue satin ribbon sashes trimmed the gowns, and their headpieces of powder blue satin flowers held their veils. Their flowers were nosegays of multi-colored spring flowers.

James McGowan of Bettendorf, Iowa, was his brother's best man, while Robert and Richard McGowan of Fonda and the bride's brother, B. W. McDonald Jr., were groomsmen. Ushers were James Sapp of Stephenson, Mich., and John Buser of Kansas City, Mo.

Don't Lift Restrictions

by DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It wasn't enough that the House of Representatives acted this week to strike down a century-old ban on flying kites in the nation's capital.

Just as I warned more than a month ago, this move presages a further breakdown of law and order.

Already some house members are talking about trying to repeal the ancient law against tying horses to "public trees." Should that come about, you may be certain that efforts will be made to legalize other types of unseemly conduct.

The next step very likely will be a campaign to lift the restriction on playing bandy and shandy in the streets of Washington.

THESE SHOCKING activities were forbidden by the same 1892 statute that prescribed kite flying, which already has been outlawed in other ordinances dating back 100 years or more.

Bandy, as everyone knows, is an old name for tennis. It also, as everyone knows, is a game similar to field hockey. But everyone is not so clear about "shandy."

When the word "shandy" appeared in a committee report on the kite flying bill, there was some confusion. Some observers assumed it was a misprint. They figured the word the committee was groping for was "shindy."

Shindy, otherwise known — as "shiny," is, of course, the same game as bandy. Or at least one kind of bandy. That is it is played like hockey, except that you don't play on ice.

Dick West

The game is called shindy because the players usually get hit on the shins with sticks. This also is the origin of the word "shindig." But I disgress.

To get back to Congress, the committee report in question may indeed have used "shandy" where "shindy" was intended. I'm not sure about that, however.

SHANDY, AS A NOUN, is short for "shandygoff," which is a beverage made by mixing beer with ginger ale. As an adjective, shandy means "wild and inclined to irresponsible ideas."

Well, anyone who drank beer mixed with ginger ale undoubtedly would be inclined to be wild and to have irresponsible ideas. Just like iceless hockey players.

Therefore, that 1892 statute may have been intended to outlaw shandy, as well as shindy and bandy.

At any rate, if congress legalizes any of them, it will be making a bad mistake.

Home Ownership Growth Predicted

Nearly seven of every 10 American families own their own homes — a record equaled by few, if any, other nations in the world — and newly popular forms of ownership, coupled with the almost universal desire, will increase the percentage in the future, according to John P. McKay, president of the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors.

As examples of emerging ownership forms, McKay cited condominium and cooperative buildings. Under these plans, occupants either own their own apartment (condominium) or own shares in the corporation which owns the building in which they live (cooperative). These two plans provide a form of ownership for those who prefer apartment living.

MANY WHO LEASE their year-around place of residence own a second or vacation home; thus, they are landowners also.

"Despite this expansion of, and desire for, real property, periodic attacks are launched on the concept of home ownership by those with varying and often hidden reasons. There are some who argue that single-family homes take too much space, that we must discourage or do away with home ownership," McKay added.

"Certainly, in some major urban centers there is a criticism of urban sprawl, but the idea that we are running out of land is not supported by the figures. At present, about 70 per cent of our population lives on only 3 per cent of the land. Obviously, there is still ample room for single-family home ownership," he declared, "although in some cases obvious problems of utilities, transportation, and the like must and will be solved."

"IMPORTANT TO many is the fact that they are able to express themselves in decorating and landscaping; they are able to keep pets, entertain, and in general, decide how to live without consulting the resident manager or worrying about the neighbors upstairs," he said.

McKay pointed out that members of the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors are celebrating Realtor Week May 17-23 in an effort to acquaint the public with the advantages of real property ownership and why it is wise to handle all real estate transactions through a Realtor.

He observed that the term Realtor is registered in the U.S. Patent Office by the National Association of Real Estate Boards, which sets requirements for its use. Basically, a Realtor must subscribe to the association's strict code of ethics governing his relationships with the buyer, the seller, his fellow brokers, and the public in general.

The Almanac

By United Press International

Today is Thursday, May 14th, the 134th day of 1970 with 231 to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase.

The morning stars are Saturn and Mercury.

The evening stars are Venus, Mars and Jupiter.

On this day in history

In 1904 the Olympic Games were held in the United States for the first time, at St. Louis.

In 1940 Nazi planes bombed the Dutch city of Rotterdam, killing an estimated 30,000 persons.

In 1942 Congress established the WAACS, the Woman's Auxiliary Army Corps, for World War II duty.

In 1969 President Nixon proposed an all-out withdrawal of all U.S. Allied and North Vietnamese troops from South Vietnam.

A thought for the day: British novelist George Meredith said, "A witty woman is a treasure, witty beauty a power."

'Sports World' Is Proposed

THE BIG MACHINES are crossing Rte. 53 between Higgins and Golf roads. Motorists are urged to use caution while driving in the area under construction for I-90.

by MARY REIFSCHNEIDER

"The Sports World," a recreation complex including a domed stadium with a seating capacity for 110,000, is being proposed for Schaumburg on 97 acres across from the WGN towers on Rte. 53.

The enclosed arena, with underground parking, could be home to major Chicago sports clubs now seeking new quarters, but it would also be available for local and amateur teams, its developer Lee Romano told the Herald Wednesday.

The 97 acres, fronting on Rte. 53 near the Interstate-90 breakoff, are not annexed to Schaumburg now. Romano has options on adjacent parcels that would make the land contiguous to the village. Mayor Robert O. Atcher told the Herald the land could be annexed by referendum.

Romano said he expects to bring the proposal before the Zoning Board of Appeals in the next several weeks.

"I HAVE BEEN approached by major sports groups seeking new locations that could occupy The Sports World," Romano said. He did not specify which teams are interested.

Atcher said a domed stadium is feasible for the Northwest area, especially since several of the major league Chicago teams are looking for new homes.

The professional baseball and football leagues are encouraging Chicago teams to find larger quarters that will increase attendance and revenues.

A domed sports stadium was once discussed for Arlington Park, but plans never got off the ground and apparently were scuttled when the race track was purchased by Gulf-Western.

The Sports World, with a dome that opens and closes, would have twice the seating capacity as the Houston Astro-dome, now the only completed enclosed stadium, which holds 44,500 spectators.

In addition to Sports World, the complex would include "The Adventure," a center with restaurants, lounges, a roller skating and ice skating rinks, caves and other activities, Romano said.

ROMANO, WHO IS THE developer of the Planet Project in Schaumburg, met for the proposed 113-story building, and other parcels to be developed in Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights.

The developer noted that the sports complex, which would cost upwards of $100 million, would not disturb any community or its residents. It is surrounded on three sides by the Cook County Forest Preserve.

The site is now a tree nursery.

Two Millionaires Join Commission

The foundation for a regional cultural center in Schaumburg, to rival those in major metropolitan areas, seemed more firmly laid when Mayor Robert O. Atcher announced the names of two millionaires who will serve on the commission.

At Tuesday's village board meeting, Atcher said Jack Pritzker, whose family owns the Hyatt House hotel chain and a substantial portion of Centex, has agreed to serve on the six member commission.

Herman Silverstein, president of Harding Museum and chairman of the board of Mid-America National Bank in Chicago, will also serve on the commission.

The third man's name was not revealed because Atcher has not had an opportunity to personally meet and discuss the commission with him. He was described as a man with an "art collection worth millions and a member of the Art Institute board."

THE COMMISSION will have three Schaumburg residents on it along with the mayor who is an automatic member by statute.

Mrs. Alexander Langsdorf, known for her artistic talents, is the first Schaumburg resident to be appointed to the commission.

The cultural center will be located in the new civic complex planned for Schaumburg Road just east of Roselle Road. Land for the complex is being donated by William Lambert.

Funds for the cultural center are being accumulated through apartment development in the village. Developers have agreed to donate $100 per apartment unit. This should provide the village with upwards of $4 million for the center.

The Harding Museum, once located on Chicago's south side, and now in storage, plans to locate in the cultural center. It is known for its collection of medieval armor and weapons, musical instruments, man of war models, medieval and contemporary art and Renaissance furniture. It has an outstanding collection of paintings of America's old west by Frederic Remington.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT of the first three commission members came as trustees approved an ordinance creating a cultural commission for Schaumburg. The six members, appointed by the village president, serve four year terms. Members receive no money for being on the commission.

"At completion, Schaumburg's center will top cultural centers in most major U. S. cities," village Atty. Jack M. Siegel said.

Enabling legislation for cultural centers was passed by the state legislature last year. Another nearby community, Arlington Heights, is trying to build a regional cultural center.

In addition to the museum, Schaumburg's center will probably have two theaters, one with a stage large enough for a symphony orchestra and a second for small theater guild activities, plus space for all the performing arts.

Keep The System: Galanter

by STEVE NOVICK

"They want us to be a corporation," Postal Supervisor Sheldon Galanter told the Hoffman Estates Chamber of Commerce Tuesday morning.

"What's so great?" he asked. "A corporation made the Edsel."

"All we need is money," Galanter has 26 years with the post office and he supervises the Hoffman Estates branch office on Roselle Road.

He urged the chamber members to write their congressmen and tell them to preserve the postal service.

The Roselle-Hoffman Estates post office handles 20 million pieces of mail a year with only a two per cent error factor, Galanter said.

PRIVATE INDUSTRY will do no better, he claimed.

The current postal service should be continued; it only needs to be better funded, Galanter said.

It's a service that's been paid for by the taxpayers and they deserve to have it maintained as a service, he added.

"Private industry needs $6 to get a postcard cross country. The rates will go sky high," Galanter said.

He advised businessmen to separate local mail from out of town mail and to get it mailed early in the day.

All pieces not going to communities serviced by the Roselle Post Office are sent to a central sorting station in Franklin Park, Galanter said. Plans for a second station were made for O'Hare in 1959, but it's 1970 and they haven't started yet, he added.

If mail is deposited late in the day, it, too, has to go to Franklin Park and come back.

Budget cuts handed down from Washington mean carriers now have to pick up most mail on the way back from their delivery routes. Trucks will no longer be used in the area.

AFTER THE WORK stoppage last March, (postal officials don't like the word strike) orders came that there is to be no overtime at the post office.

Trustee Ray Kessell. "This young lady started and ended with us and picked up as much as the adults," Atcher said.

2nd Clean-Up March Slated

Schaumburg residents who didn't participate in Saturday's Clean-Up March are getting a second chance.

Another will be held May 23, Mayor Robert O. Atcher announced this week.

"I want to thank the goodly number of Schaumburg citizens for breaking their backs last Saturday," the mayor said Tuesday. About 200 residents spent the morning picking up debris on state and county roadsides in an effort to curb pollution.

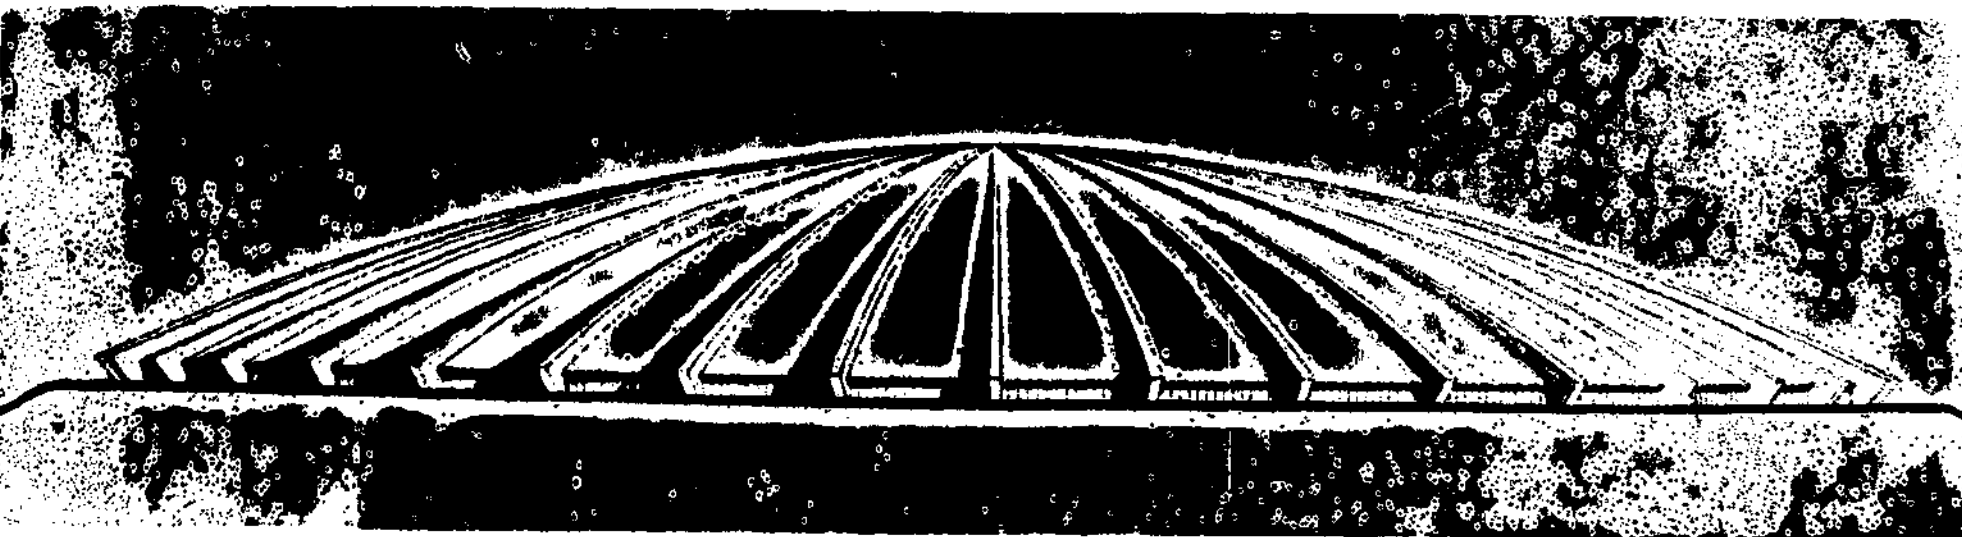

"We only got half way through. We'll be out again May 23. This time, we'll send an announcement to Conant High School. I understand many of the students there didn't know about last Saturday's clean-up."

The village president also thanked the public works department and the Schaumburg Disposal Co. for providing men and trucks to haul away the debris.

"I was never so glad to see a lot of junk in one place. When it's in a pile, you can sit down and pick it up," Atcher said.

SATURDAY'S WORKERS included not only Atcher but village trustees and about 180 Frost Junior High School students.

Atcher gave special commendation to nine-year-old Lisa Kessell, daughter of Sports World: Will it be home to the Chicago Cubs, the Chicago Bears or Black Hawks one day?

by JUDY BRANDEN

"My first thought was 'They didn't call us soon enough.'"

The speaker was Bruce Winter, a full-time fireman in the Rolling Meadows fire department.

He and 14 other full-time and volunteers who led the battle to stop the fire in a Three Fountains apartment building 19 days ago were discussing what happened on the moment they got the call to their return to the fire station several hours later.

"When we pulled out of the station on Meadow Drive, I could see the smoke already and knew we were in trouble," Charlie Sellards, the first officer to arrive at the fire said. Sellards radioed Arlington Heights for mutual assistance while en route to Three Fountains.

"Flames were already coming out the patio doors and that first floor apartment was burned out when we got there," Sellards said.

HE AND THE MEN on the first engine to arrive went after the apartment where the fire began. "We thought we had it until we went around the south end and saw it going up the stairwell. We couldn't get in. The heat was too much."

On the way into Three Fountains, the firemen's hearts were pumping madly, "they agree," I had Thumper with me all the way," Bill Schmidt, engineer on the first engine to arrive, said.

The men knew 3201 Carriage Way Drive was a building built before the life safety code was adopted by the city. They were expecting the fire to be bad, but didn't realize until later what type of fire it was.

"It was a hidden fire," Fire Chief Thomas Fogerty explained. Fogerty and four firemen were attending class at Harper Junior College when they heard about Three Fountains. "No matter what wall we took off, we always found fire. Once the fire got into the hallway, I knew it would move to other areas."

BEFORE FOGERTY arrived, Sellards was the officer in charge. "You call for all this equipment and it comes in. They're asking where you want them to go. I had to make a lot of decisions in a few seconds."

The first three engines to arrive, Rolling Meadows two and the aerial ladder from Arlington Heights, didn't get slowed down with traffic. The others, including the "mount prospect" snorkel, had trouble getting through the traffic which materialized as more people came to watch the fire.

Engineer Schmidt was responsible for laying the lines and hooking up to the fire hydrant. "I went past the first hydrant because people were standing there and I didn't see it," Schmidt said.

With a large fire, the department books up "hard sections" of hose to get enough water. "I was afraid we weren't going to get the hard section on the hydrant."

SCHMIDT AND FIREMAN Jack Fahn found the hydrant caps too low to the ground and when they finally got the top cap off, they had to clean the mud off before the hoses could be attached.

People trapped on the balconies were helped off by Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights men who arrived early on the scene.

"We got the police chief and two others off the back balcony and then went on up to the roof," Assistant Fire Chief Don Marshall, a volunteer, said. From the front, fire watchers couldn't see the men on the roof, who were working in the trough on the "M-shaped" roof.

"We stayed up there knocking holes in the roof to ventilate the fire until the tar started to bubble and the chief ordered us off," Marshall continued.

Red hot railings, intense black smoke and searing heat prevented teams of men from penetrating into the hallways. "We crawled in on our bellies from the balcony on the second floor with fire above and around us," Ed Retzer, a volunteer, explained. "It's a scary feeling when you turn to crawl back out in a dark room and run into a wall every way you turn."

RESCUE AND SEARCH teams couldn't get into the building. "We couldn't get in, the smoke was so black and thick," Sellards said.

The places the fire burned into were scattered. "You have to remember, a fireman is only in one place. We couldn't see all the places the fire was breaking out," Bruce Winter said.

"The men got mad at me when I ordered them out of the building," Chief Fogerty chuckled. "They couldn't see what was going on, of course, but I could see it was dangerous."

No fireman can recall what he did when. "The only reason I knew it was 2:30 in the morning was that I had scratched myself when I climbed into the attic and realized later it hurt. The watch was on my arm when I looked at the scratch," Marshall said.

"IT WAS A TERRIFIC stop on the fire," Fogerty said, "fire chiefs from other areas complimented us on how much we were able to save."

Dick Blane, who sang his ears working on the second and third floors, told how the only empty apartment in the building wasn't damaged too much. "If those tenants had only used common sense in closing doors, the fire probably wouldn't have gone as far as it did. When we went back the next day, there were some places, like closets, which had smoke damage, but no water and things weren't burned. We pulled three mink coats unharmed out of one closet."

Chief Fogerty attributes the spread of the fire to the fact that the door to the apartment where it started was left open.

"We didn't realize how fast it was going and didn't know it had gotten to the other end when we arrived," Winter said. "When I saw those flames, though, I knew that fire had a good start before we got there. My first thought was 'They didn't call us soon enough.'"

"SIDEWALK CHIEFS don't realize that as they are running out of a fire, the poor firemen have to be running into it," Lt. Ted Loesch, Rolling Meadows fire department, said of those who criticized his department about the Three Fountains apartment fire. Loesch and the department explain what they thought of while they fought the fire May 4.

Mint Is Nature's Insect Repellent

More than 100 suburban residents "attuned their ears to nature" and glued their eyes to the movie screen Tuesday night.

It was PEP's (Pollution and Environmental Problems) Eco-Catastrophe Film Festival which ironically was hit by a weather "catastrophe" as the fog rolled in and sirens sounded outside Forest View High School's Little Theater in Arlington Heights.

In the beginning the audience heard what individuals can do to fight pollution by using low phosphate detergents, eliminating dangerous pesticides from household use and gardening the organic way.

"There are several small plants which can be used in place of insecticides," explained Mrs. R. C. Good, PEP program chairman.

"For example, mint can be planted near cabbage or garlic plants near rose bushes to assist in bug control," she said.

MRS. GOOD ALSO explained how phosphates in detergents should stay below 35 units per washload. Enzyme pre-soaks are especially high ranging from 39 to 55 units of phosphate, she said.

A list of phosphate content of detergents prepared by Northwestern Students for a Better Environment was distributed to the group. Only 12 detergent products of 43 are above the hazardous phosphate level.

When the lights dimmed, it was time for visual proof of what pollution is doing to the environment.

An award-winner, "Urbanissimo," showed nature's destruction from city planning and aimless construction.

"Nature's Half Acre," the longer movie, dwelled on the struggle for survival among the non-human population and the children in the audience with quiet screams showed they were getting the point of the film as a duckling fled from the overbearing shovel of a bulldozer.

CHARLES YAGER, author and conservationist from Prospect Heights put his thoughts into poetry at Tuesday night's film festival.

"What is man? It's the only thing on earth which kills its own kind."

"What you kill or destroy is gone beyond your ever bringing it back."

"You are destroying yourself."

Then, Gunnar Peterson, executive director of the Open Lands Project in Chicago, warned, "This is only the beginning."

Student protests and violence will increase and they'll be demonstrating against pollution, according to Peterson.

PEP was commended by several members of the audience for the "stimulating and informative" session.

Current projects of the suburban anti-pollution group including a beautification project in Palatine, an environmental hot-line, an aluminum drive and testifying at public hearings against pollution were listed and more volunteers recruited.

'Fourth' Plans Under Way

Things are rolling for the Hoffman Estates Independence Day celebration. Committee member Phil Moore last week appeared before the village board and Tuesday spoke to the Chamber of Commerce gaining support for the annual event.

From the village board he obtained financial backing for the event budgeted at $7,000. A $500 support pledge was also gained from the Chamber. The committee has $2,500 remaining from last year's event.

Moore told the groups that July 4 activities in Hoffman Estates are planned each year to keep people home and off the roads. Last year 25,000 persons participated, he said.

The 1970 plans include more events for adults, he added, telling of plans for a booth to dunk the mayor and other local officials.

LARGE TENTS will be erected near village hall to protect participants against the elements, which are facilities not available in the past.

Something new for children will be a play put on by the area Theatre Guild. It comes in addition to traditional field events and watermelon eating contests.

A greased pig contest will also be planned. It is sponsored by the local Democrats, Moore said.

A parade to include six drum and bugle corps is also planned. The drum and buglers come from far distances and also march in parades held in nearby villages. They then return to Hoffman Estates for a special drum and bugle presentation, Moore said.

Special events will be held at Chino Park. Approval of the site was obtained last week from the village board. The parade route will be down Illinois Blvd., as in years past.

'Pig' to Woods Is Pride

by CYNTHIA TIVERS

Sheriff Joe Woods is a law and order man who says he practices justice.

He thinks the use of Mace is humane and he dislikes Mayor Daley's politics. He also says he would have walked along with those construction workers last week in New York. Those construction workers marched along Wall Street abusing students and demanding that flags lowered, in memory of the four slain Kent students, he raised.

The tall gray-haired Woods spoke to the Palatine Kiwanis Club about Law Enforcement in Cook County. He told his audience he doesn't mind it when he or his riot-control trained men are called "pigs" by protestors. "Pig to me" he said, "stands for pride, integrity and guts. It's abuse of my men that takes control. This abuse comes in the form of rock-throwing and being spit at in the face."

WOODS CONTINUED to get nods or grunts of approval from his audience as he spoke. They enjoyed his frequent attacks on student demonstrators and the media. He seemed to be voicing their thoughts. But he was appealing to their fright about the conditions in society. He seemed to be telling them, "Don't worry. Sheriff Joe won't let those kids destroy your property. But we'll only spray them with Mace. It won't hurt them. They'll just want to go home."

He also told them, "Sure some student violators are Communist inspired," and,

"I do not like some TV people. They are instigators of some of our problems in Cook County and in the rest of the country."

He thinks they (television) agitated demonstrators at the Democratic Convention but that the press wouldn't normally instigate a riot. "Newspapers hardly create problems," he remarked. "It's when people see themselves on the 'boob tube' they start to misbehave."

About the Contract Buyers League evictions, Woods said he knows he was put in the middle by Mayor Daley to arouse public sentiment against him (Woods). But he said he's been put in the middle for a long time and that he's used to it.

Kindergarten Sign-Ups Soon

May 28 is registration day for Schaumburg Township children who will be eligible to attend kindergarten in Dist. 54 next August. Registration will be held at all 17 schools in the district from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and from 1 to 3 p.m.

Parents of children whose last names begin with the letters A to L should register in the morning; and those whose last name begins with M to Z are to register in the afternoon. Parents are to register their child at their neighborhood school.

Parents of children entering school for the first time will need a birth certificate for their child. Hospital certificates will not be accepted in place of birth certificates, according to Dist. 54 school officials.

Children entering kindergarten must be 5 years old on or before Dec. 1, 1970.

DIST. 54 administrators urged district parents to register their children May 28, since early registration enables the schools to do better planning of kindergarten classes.

Children entering public schools in Illinois for the first time or entering kindergarten are required to have physical examinations before the opening of school Aug. 31. Dental exams are included in the total examination.

Examination forms will be given to parents May 28. Dist. 54 school officials said. Parents are urged to make medical appointments early in order to avoid the late summer rush.

A materials and book fee of $3.75 is charged for each Dist. 54 pupil in kindergarten. This fee will be collected on Book Fee Day in Dist. 54 next fall, scheduled on Aug. 26. Dist. 54 pupils will receive their class and teacher assignments for the school year on that date.

Mom: 'No One Ever Cried'

by BETSY BROOKER

Sixteen months ago, Mrs. Rosemary Bornhofen was lying in a hospital bed, completely paralyzed on her left side.

This Mother's Day, Rosemary was awarded a medallion and named "Handicapped Mother of the Year" by the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago.

The 28-year-old Prospect Heights resident walked up to the stand, completely unaided, to receive her award. A slight limp was the only trace left of the stroke she suffered a year and a half ago, after a blood clot blocked a main artery in her brain.

The tragedy was threefold for Rosemary because she had just returned from the hospital the day before after the birth of her first child, Gina Marie. And her father had died of cancer while she was in the hospital delivering Gina.

TODAY, ROSEMARY can sit in her kitchen and casually joke about her misfortune over a cup of coffee. Her sense of humor has carried her through the past year.

She is an attractive young woman with a windswept pixie hair cut and an open smile. While she is dark, her young daughter is very fair with soft blond hair.

Gina has probably fared the best since her mother's stroke because she has benefited from the love of at least four mother figures: Rosemary, two grandmothers and an aunt.

The stroke was a severe blow for the whole family, but they all pitched in and lent support, said Rosemary.

"I was asleep when it happened. It was early Sunday morning, a day after I got home from the hospital. My husband thought I was having a nightmare and woke me up. I had a terrible headache. He tried to help me walk to the bathroom so I could take an aspirin but I kept falling down. I couldn't stand up."

"HE CALLED MY brother and sister-in-law then, and they came over and watched my baby while my husband drove me to the hospital."

Rosemary stayed in the hospital until February, when she was transferred to the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago. "While I was in the hospital, everything was done for me, including bed baths. As soon as I got to the institute they put me into a plastic wheel chair and took me into the shower room. I never realized what a luxury a shower is before."

Everything was different at the institute, said Rosemary. "They encouraged you to help yourself. I didn't get breakfast in bed anymore, but had to wheel myself down to the cafeteria."

When Rosemary first arrived at the institute, she couldn't move any part of the left side of her body. It was a trying time because there was no way for the doctors to know if the brain cells had been permanently damaged.

"They put me on an extensive therapy program so my muscles would be limber in case my damaged brain cells revived. Some people never recover from a stroke."

ROSEMARY WAS also taught how to work with one arm. "They brought my baby down, and the head nurse in the pediatrics department at Wesley Memorial Hospital came over to teach me how to hold, feed and diaper Gina with only my right arm."

"I had a special curved knife so I could cut my meat with one hand, by rocking it. I've still got it, but don't use it anymore."

"I also had a board with all sorts of hooks, locks and gadgets to practice on. One day I was having trouble with one of the hooks, and a man next to me with an artificial arm offered to help me."

"There are so many people worse off than you at the institute, you can't feel sorry for yourself."

ROSEMARY'S MOTHER agreed saying, "I thought I would be depressed by the patients when I visited Rosemary, but they are so friendly and cheerful, they make you feel good."

"The first day I arrived at the institute my roommate asked me if I wanted to go to the movies with her. I didn't know what she was talking about, but later learned that the patients are taken on a trip once a week."

"And there was a Negro patient there we called 'the general.' He had been shot five times during a hold-up. I asked him one day if they had caught the robbers, and he said he knew who they were. So I told him he was lucky they were friends, or he would have gotten it worse."

"No one ever cries at the institute," added Rosemary.

In March, Rosemary was able to go home and visit the institute on an outpatient basis. By this time the muscles in her left leg had begun to move and she could walk with the aid of a brace and a cane.

BY THE MIDDLE OF the summer, she was able to move her left arm and throw away her sling. Two months later, she could walk without the brace.

Rosemary's mother stayed with her during her first few months at home, but now Rosemary is doing most of the housework herself and even driving.

"I feel more appreciative of simple things now," said Rosemary, "like just moving around."

"You never realize how lucky you are until something like this happens to you."

Students Urge Smoking Lounge

A recommendation to establish a smoking lounge in Palatine High School is expected to be presented to the Dist. 211 board of education tonight.

Either a representative of the Palatine High student council or school Prin Leonard Newendorp, in the capacity of an official representative of the school will present the student's request.

The gist of the request entails an area or room designated for student smoking in order to separate the non-smoker from the smokers. Richard Kolze, superintendent-elect, said.

Kolze said the students have made their request not in an effort to condone student smoking, but to present a realistic solution to the fact that students smoke, and to eliminate the tendency of smokers to use school washrooms and street corners as a smoking area.

Dist. 211 board members were presented written copies of the request at a special meeting May 9 and will discuss, and possibly decide the issue tonight.

AFTER A stroke 16 months ago, which paralyzed her left side, Rosemary Bornhofen, of Prospect Heights, is now able to assist her 16-month-old daughter Gina, in flower arranging, drive a car and play golf. She

Hamilton: Stop Airport Plan

Tom Hamilton, chairman of the Elk Grove Village Aviation Committee, has called for a halt to expansion of O'Hare International Airport.

We think it's time to call a halt to the expansion of O'Hare Field, said Hamilton, speaking before the Elk Grove Village Board Tuesday.

THERE ARE SOME pretty serious problems confronting Elk Grove Village, he said. Things are quickly coming to a head between the City of Chicago and surrounding villages.

A third airport is already under construction right here, he said, pointing to a map of Elk Grove's neighbor to the east.

He said plans for expansion of O'Hare made in 1964 are coming true.

Hamilton said the city plans to put in a triple runway system in three directions

Tom Hamilton

for a total of nine runways. CONSTRUCTION of a sixth major runway (northeast-southwest) began several months ago and plans are now being prepared for three more.

Hamilton and Warren Edwards, a committee member, urged village support of the O'Hare Area Noise Abatement Council, a group of about 18 municipalities formed last year by George Franks of Wood Dale.

Edwards said legislators must become concerned because the municipalities represent 400,000 voters.

We've been shoved under the table long enough, he said.

Edwards told of plans by Chicago to obtain 300 acres at the northeast corner of the airport, presently a military reservation for a $1 donation to the Department of Defense. The land is valued at $1,480,000, he claimed. If you know the structure of Chicago politics, this is going to go through.

Edwards said residents can oppose the land transfer and future expansion of O'Hare by attending a meeting May 27 at Fenton High School in Bensenville. If it's backed by enough people, someone will pay attention.

The village board then voted to support the aviation committee in its activities with the council, as well as spend $200 for the distribution of literature on airport expansion.

PARK RIDGE officials have already taken action against Chicago by seeking an injunction restraining construction of the northeast-southwest runway, but according to Elk Grove Village Atty. Edward Hofert, it has been abandoned.

Hofert said a second suit against the city and the airport may be filed by communities in DuPage County where they may have more of a chance of obtaining a favorable decision. O'Hare is mostly in Cook County but a southwest section lies in DuPage.

'Extra Mile' Set By Girl Scouts

A group of Girl Scouts is going to go the extra mile Saturday in Wheeling.

The Scouts are bringing their 'Project Extra Mile' to the village in an effort to interest Spanish-speaking girls in joining Girl Scouting.

Similar projects have been held recently in Chicago and Des Plaines. The four-hour program consists of the Scouts playing with neighborhood children and at the same time showing them what scouting offers.

Girls and boys too from throughout Wheeling are invited to participate in the street playing from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday on a corner at First Street and Stong Avenue in northern Wheeling, said Terry Cutts, a field adviser for the Girl Scouts of Northwest Cook County Inc.

Miss Cutts explained that while the program is designed to help the scouts reach Spanish-speaking children and interest them in scouting, the street play is for all local children.

We'll break the ice by letting the kids paint my car — that's right, paint my car, and we'll also be making ice cream, doing arts and crafts and a conservation project, Miss Cutts explained.

Wheeling Girl Scouts will be on hand to help at the area as well as local scout leaders who will answer parents' questions about the scouting program. Leaflets on scouting activities will also be available and parents can sign up their daughters for a scout troop at the project, she said.

The activities themselves will be conducted by a small group of senior scouts from the area council, Miss Cutts said.

The scout field adviser explained that the program has been held the last two weekends in various parts of Chicago and in south Des Plaines near the airport. During the summer it will tour Chicago for a month, she said.

The local scout organization decided to bring Project Extra Mile to Des Plaines and Wheeling because we realized there were girls in our own council that we haven't been reaching, Miss Cutts said.

She explained that some Spanish-speaking girls are sometimes shy because they are uncertain of their English. 'Project Extra Mile' is an attempt to encourage these children to join Brownie, Cadette or Girl Scout troops.

The Girl Scouts would also like to attract those girls who live in the Wheeling area only part of the year, moving to other parts of the country, mostly the southwestern United States, for the remainder of the year, Miss Cutts pointed out those girls can join troops in other parts of the country and transfer to local troops when they move here.

Miss Cutts asked that those children who will be walking some distance to Saturday's event bring their lunches. Beverages and ice cream will be provided free to the children.

RECENT CHILLY weather may have area residents temporarily wondering about the month of May, but to a child this is one of the best times of the year. At last you can go outside without your mother telling you to put on a jacket and after all, there's less than a month of school left. Then it'll be time to play all summer long — while mothers hope that most of it will be outside instead of underfoot.

A NEWSPAPER in the mouth is an effective way to keep someone from speaking. The scene is from the Wheeling High School production, "Pajama Game," which will be presented this weekend and next weekend in the Little Theater. Appearing in the musical comedy are, from left, Lou Ro franco,

Kendra Lewis and Diane Knowles. Tickets for the production will be available at the box office the evenings of the performances.

'Pajama Game' Comes To Town This Weekend

"Pajama Game" will come to Wheeling High School this weekend and next weekend. The WHS student production of the Broadway musical comedy will be presented at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and again May 22 and 23 in the Little Theater.

The show concerns the antics that result when employees in a pajama factory go on strike for wage increases. Marilyn Raelof of Prospect Heights, Illinois' Junior Miss, did the choreography for the show.

ERIC LIDH, FACULTY director of the play, has promised that the show "won't be conventional, but will provide a lot of fun and spontaneity."

A special runway has been constructed down the middle of the theater, and many of the scenes will be played on it, rather than on the stage.

"This will enable the cast to talk to the audience and get them involved in what's going on," he explained. "I've worked with many high school casts, but I can honestly say that this is the best one I've ever directed," he added.

The show's script and music have been specially arranged for the WHS production. Tickets for the play will be on sale at the door the evenings of the performances.

Wheeling Library Gets Zoning Nod

The first step toward renovation of a church in Wheeling that will be used as a library was taken Tuesday. Wheeling's zoning board of appeals recommended the village board grant a special use permit for the renovation.

The Wheeling Public Library District

plans to buy and remodel St. Mark's United Church of Christ building on Jenkins Court in Wheeling for use as the district's new library facility.

Funds for the purchase and renovation were approved in a $270,000 bond issue passed by library district voters April 4.

The district serves Wheeling and the Cook County portion of Buffalo Grove.

The zoning board voted unanimously to recommend to the Wheeling Village Board that a special use for the library be granted on the church property and on two adjacent lots already owned by the library district. Such a special use permit is needed to build a library in any zoning class in the village.

GENERAL OBLIGATION bonds totaling $250,000 will be issued by the district to pay for the purchase of the church building, remodeling, air conditioning, carpeting, and new books.

Library board Atty. Roger Bjorvik and Board Pres. Charles DuBois told the zoning board that two banks had agreed to purchase the bonds from the district.

DuBois testified that he felt using the church as a library "would not alter the essential character of the neighborhood."

He listed other sites studied by the board before the referendum including the east end of the golf course at Arlington

Country club, property east and west of the Soo Line R.R. tracks on Dundee Road, and a lot at the southwest corner of Wolf and Dundee roads.

Douglas Cargill, zoning board chairman, explained to the other board members that he, in his capacity as zoning administrator, had recommended to the library board members that they wait until after the referendum to seek a special use on the property.

A PARKING LOT for 50 cars will be provided west of the library building, architect Godfrey L. Duke told the zoning board.

Duke, who was the original architect on the church, explained the remodeling is largely a "facelifting" for the building and that the only structural change is to strengthen floors in the education wing to withstand the load of books.

Duke said plans for the building's remodeling would be submitted to the village within 2½ months if the special use zoning is granted. He predicted the library would be ready before Christmas.

Attorney Claims 'No Fraud'

An attorney for Levitt and Sons, Inc., declared this week there was no fraud involved in the builder's sale of homes in Lake County.

Lawyer Jack Siegel, commenting Tuesday on a suit expected to be filed against Levitt, said: "There was no fraud. Any affirmative representations that Levitt made to prospective homebuyers were based on the factual situation as it existed at that time."

THE SUIT is expected to be filed by a group of Lake County homeowners. Basically it will contend that Strathmore home buyers were not told of the shortage of schools in the Lake County portion of Buffalo Grove. Levitt is the firm building Strathmore.

Last Friday, the Strathmore Homeowners Association (SHA) voted to endorse the suit and to allow two of the SHA's committees to help raise funds for legal fees connected with the suit.

Of the charges, Siegel said, "I know of no misrepresentations or fraud. I know of no school problem which the school district does not have the authority to settle."

Currently School Dist. 98, the district in question, is condemning 15 acres of Levitt-owned land in Levitt's Strathmore development in Lake County.

The suit to be filed by homeowners and the district's condemnation suit are not the only legal actions that have resulted from the school site situation in the Dist. 98 area in the last several months.

WHEN THE SCHOOL district decided to condemn land in February, members of the SHA began picketing the Levitt model homes site on Arlington Heights Road. That stopped a few weeks later after Levitt asked for injunction to halt it. SHA stopped the picketing, and Levitt withdrew its request for the injunction.

More recently, School Dist. 98 sought to stop persons from moving into new Strathmore homes in an effort to stave off what district officials thought would be an unbearable overburdening of the district's lone facility, Kildeer School. That injunction petition was turned down.

A proposed townhouse and apartment complex on the Zale property in western Wheeling was recommended for planned development (PD-4) zoning by the Wheeling Zoning Board of Appeals Tuesday.

To be named Jamestown Circle on the Lake, the proposed development will include 236 townhouses, 252 apartments in four buildings, two swimming pools and a clubhouse. The townhouses will be in a cluster-type development with green areas between groups of buildings.

The four-story apartment buildings would each house 63 apartments and include 44 two-bedroom apartments, 7 one-bedroom apartments, and 12 three-bedroom apartments in each building.

Developer Al Zale testified that the number of bedrooms in the proposed townhouses would be unknown until a sales campaign was begun, but that there would be a predominance of three-bedroom units with some two-bedroom and some four-bedroom units.

THE CENTER of the townhouse section on the eastern two-thirds of the 38-acre site would hold a retention basin which will be the final step in the system of drainage basins in the Tahoe, Miller and Mallard Lake developments in the area.

The Jamestown Circle property is located north of Hintz Road 1,500 feet east of Buffalo Grove Road. It is bordered by the Server Co., Mallard Lake apartment project on the west and by the Tahoe project, a proposed planned development, on the north.

To the east of the property are single-family homes on Jackson drive, an unincorporated area.

The apartment buildings proposed in Jamestown Circle would have underground parking facilities. Two spaces would be provided, one outside and one inside, for each apartment unit.

Zale testified Tuesday that negotiations are being conducted with School Dist. 21 to find an alternate site for a school park site, 11 acres of which is located on the proposed development. He said he was hopeful the negotiations would prove successful within two or three months.

Scouts Walk 'Extra Mile' Saturday

A group of Girl Scouts is going to go the "extra mile" Saturday in Wheeling.

The Scouts are bringing their "Project Extra Mile" to the village in an effort to interest Spanish speaking girls in joining Girl Scouting.

Similar projects have been held recently in Chicago and Des Plaines. The four-hour program consists of the Scouts playing with neighborhood children and at the same time showing them what scouting offers.

Girls and boys too, from throughout Wheeling are invited to participate in the "street playing" from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday on a corner lot at First Street and Strong Avenue in northern Wheeling, said Terry Cutts, a field adviser for the Girl Scouts of Northwest Cook County Inc.

Miss Cutts explained that while the program is designed to help the scouts reach Spanish-speaking children and interest them in scouting, the "street play" is for all local children.

"We'll break the ice by letting the kids paint my car, — that's right, paint my car, and we'll also be making ice cream, doing arts and crafts and a conservation project," Miss Cutts explained.

Wheeling Girl Scouts will be on hand to help at the area as will local scout leaders who will answer parents' questions about the scouting program. Leaflets on scouting activities will also be available and parents can sign up their daughters for a scout troop at the project, she said.

The activities themselves will be conducted by a small group of senior scouts from the area council, Miss Cutts said.

The scout field adviser explained that the program has been held the last two weekends in various parts of Chicago and in south Des Plaines near the airport. During the summer it will tour Chicago for a month she said.

The local scout organization decided to bring "Project Extra Mile" to Des Plaines and Wheeling, "because we realized there were girls in our own council that we haven't been reaching," Miss Cutts said.

She explained that some Spanish speaking girls are sometimes shy because they are uncertain of their English. "Project Extra Mile" is an attempt to encourage these children to join Brownie, Cadette or Girl Scout troops.

The Girl Scouts would also like to attract those girls who live in the Wheeling area only part of the year, moving to other parts of the country, mostly the southwestern United States, for the remainder of the year. Miss Cutts pointed out those girls can join troops in other parts of the country and transfer to local troops when they move here.

Miss Cutts asked that those children who "will be walking some distance" to Saturday's event bring their lunches. Beverages and ice cream will be provided free to the children.

Joint Vacation Church School To Be Offered

A joint vacation church-school will be offered this summer by St. Joseph the Worker Catholic Church in Wheeling, and the Lutheran Church of the Good Shepherd in Prospect Heights.

The church school will be held July 27 through Aug. 7 in St. Joseph Church.

Children from preschool through junior high school age from both congregations may participate.

SPANISH-SPEAKING children from the area have also been invited to participate. The two churches are working with the Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows and NORWESCO to enroll these children.

These children will attend the church school in the morning and then participate in a day camp program in the afternoon. The day camp program is being sponsored by the youth in the two congregations.

Registration information may be obtained from either St. Joseph or Good Shepherd Church.

Bike Ride Is Sunday

The second Wheeling Park District bicycle ride is set for 1:30 p.m. Sunday at Heritage Park.

The ride, sponsored in conjunction with the League of American Wheelmen, will be along Portwine Road and into the two forest preserves this week.

Children under 12 should be accompanied on the ride by a parent, Park District Recreation Director Keith Vernon said.

Demonstrators Offer Nothing, Says Cop

The week May 10 - 16 has been set aside by presidential proclamation to honor policemen throughout the nation. The police man along with the fireman the nurse and the mailman are still revered in most grade school classrooms. And the citizens voting for law and order candidates still view the policeman as an instrument of one of America's highest ideals.

But there is a segment in our country a little older than the grade school student and younger than the electorate that refutes the policeman's integrity. They call him 'pig'.

The reaction from the law enforcers has ranged from anger to quiet indignity. But they all agree the attack is unjust.

We are just like everyone else but we wear uniforms and carry guns," objected Patrolman Roger Holt, administrative aide to the commander at the Cook County Sheriff's north suburban station in Niles.

"IT IS WRONG to classify us as one group," added Holt. "We are all individuals."

The newspapers and TV always show everything the policeman does wrong. But we have files of letters from citizens commending the work of the policemen in our department. And that never gets in the headlines.

On the suburban beat the 80 men at the Niles station rarely come into direct contact with the element that derides them. However, they were on standby all last week during the demonstrations by students in Evanston. And they have been called into the city many times to evict residents who have not fulfilled contract buyers' agreements.

Demonstrators, in my opinion are stupid," said Holt. "They don't like the form of government they have but they don't offer a solution."

ANYONE CAN GO out and burn buildings and throw rocks. It doesn't take much intelligence. But it does take intelligence to find a solution to society's problems.

Holt said he didn't believe a division exists between the police and all youth. "A lot of our officers have friends in college. But these students have parents who taught them right from wrong."

While demonstrations don't rate high on the Niles station's list of problems, a shortage in manpower does. The 80 man force is responsible for all of the unincorporated areas in Cook County north of the Eisenhower Expressway and west of Elgin.

SIX CARS PATROL during each shift backed up by six to 10 policemen. For Prospect Heights the largest unincorporated area in Cook County, this means only one car is patrolling the community along with other areas.

Our situation isn't that critical, but we could always use more men," said Holt.

I'd like to see us go into a countywide crime laboratory and detective agency. But the county is too old to have a centralized police force. They had it all along in England. But here there are too many jealousies between towns.

None of the local politicians and police chiefs will want to give up the position they already have," added Holt.

Holt objected to the current investigation of the Northwest Suburban Council of Associations (NSCA), a group of nine Prospect Heights organizations into the opinions of the community towards hiring a private patrol service.

I THINK PRIVATE protection might be illegal. I know any police department has to be registered in the state of Illinois. It is a heck of a thing to turn a force loose on the citizens that isn't trained and properly equipped. They have plenty of protection with the county. We are more than happy to come out.

Contract policing on the other hand is great, according to Holt. We don't have a structure for it yet but a committee is working on it. State legislation permits townships to contract with the county or a municipality for additional police patrol in unincorporated areas.

Looking even further into the future Holt commented, eventually I may be out of a job because I don't think unincorporated areas will always exist.

A Fire Call Too Late?

by JUDY BRANDES

My first thought was, "They didn't call us soon enough."

The speaker was Bruce Winter, a full-time fireman in the Rolling Meadows fire department.

He and 14 other full-time and volunteers who led the battle to stop the fire in a Three Fountains apartment building 10 days ago were discussing what happened from the moment they got the call to their return to the fire station several hours later.

When we pulled out of the station on Meadow Drive, I could see the smoke already and knew we were in trouble. Charlie Sellards, the first officer to arrive at the fire, said Sellards radioed Arlington Heights for mutual assistance while en route to Three Fountains.

Flames were already coming out the patio doors and that first floor apartment was burning when we got there," Sellards said.

HE AND HIS MEN on the first engine to arrive went after the apartment where the fire began. "We thought we had it out until we went around the south end and saw it going up the stairwell. We couldn't get in. The heat was too much

On the way into Three Fountains, the firemen's hearts were pumping madly. They agreed. I had Thumper with me all the way. Bill Schmidt, engineer on the first engine to arrive, said.

The men knew 3201 Carriage Way Drive was a building built before the life safety code was adopted by the city. They were expecting the fire to be bad but didn't realize until later what type of fire it was.

"It was a hidden fire. Fire Chief Thomas Fogarty explained Fogarty and four firemen were attending class at Harper Junior College when they heard about Three Fountains. No matter what wall we took off, we always found fire. Once the fire got into the hallway, I knew it would move to other areas."

BEFORE FOGARTY arrived Sellards was the officer in charge. "You call for all this equipment and it comes in. They're asking where you want them to go. I had to make a lot of decisions in a few seconds."

The first three engines to arrive, Rolling Meadows two and the aerial ladder from Arlington Heights didn't get slowed down with traffic. The others, including the "Mount Prospect" snaked, had trouble getting through the traffic which was terrified as more people came to watch the fire.

Engineer Schmidt was responsible for laying the lines and hooking up to the fire hydrant. "I went past the first hydrant because people were standing there and I didn't see it," Schmidt said.

With a large fire, the department hooks up "hard sections" of hose to get enough water. "I was afraid we weren't going to get the hard section on the hydrant."

SCHMIDT AND FIREMAN Jack Fahn found the hydrant caps too low to the ground and when they finally got the top cap off they had to clean the mud off before the hoses could be attached.

People trapped on the balconies were helped off by Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights men who arrived early on the scene.

"We got the police chief and two others off the back balcony and then went on up to the roof," Assistant Fire Chief Don Marshall, a volunteer, said. From the front fire watchers couldn't see the men on the roof who were working in the trough on the "M-shaped" roof.

"We stayed up there knocking holes in the roof to ventilate the fire until the tar started to bubble and the chief ordered

Red hot railings, intense black smoke and searing heat prevented teams of men from penetrating into the hallways. "We crawled in on our bellies from the balcony on the second floor with fire above and around us," Ed Retzer, a volunteer, explained. "It's a scary feeling when you turn to crawl back out in a dark room and run into a wall every way you turn."

RESCUE AND SEARCH teams couldn't get into the building.

"We couldn't get in the smoke was so black and thick," Sellards said.

The places the fire burned into were scattered. "You have to remember, a fireman is only in one place. We couldn't see all the places the fire was breaking out," Bruce Winter said.

"The men got mad at me when I ordered them out of the building," Chief Fogarty chuckled. "They couldn't see what was going on of course but I could see it was dangerous."

No fireman can recall what he did when "The only reason I knew it was 2:30 in the morning was that I had scratched myself when I climbed into the attic and realized later it hurt. The watch was on my arm when I looked at the scratch," Marshall said.

"IT WAS A TERRIFIC stop on the fire," Fogarty said. "Fire chiefs from other areas complimented us on how much we were able to save."

Dick Blane, who singed his ears working on the second and third floors, told how the only empty apartment in the building wasn't damaged too much. "If those tenants had only used common sense in closing doors, the fire probably wouldn't have gone as far as it did. When we went back the next day, there were some places, like closets, which had smoke damage but no water and things weren't burned. We pulled three mink coats unharmed out of one closet."

Chief Fogarty attributes the spread of the fire to the fact that the door to the apartment where it started was left open.

We didn't realize how fast it was going and didn't know it had gotten to the other end when we arrived," Winter said. "When I saw those flames though I knew that fire had a good start before we got there. My first thought was 'They didn't call us soon enough.'"

Woods Doesn't Mind 'Pig' Call

by CYNTHIA TIVERS

Sheriff Joe Woods is a law and order man who says he practices justice.

He thinks the use of Mace is humane and he dislikes Mayor Daley's politics. He also says he would have walked along with those construction workers last week in New York. Those construction workers marched along Wall Street abusing students and demanding that flags lowered in memory of the four slain Kent students be raised.

The tall, gray-haired Woods spoke to the Palatine Kiwanis Club about law enforcement in Cook County. He told his audience he doesn't mind it when he or his riot control trained men are called "pigs" by protesters. "Pig to me," he said, "stands for pure integrity and guts. It's abuse of my men that takes control. This abuse comes in the form of rock throwing and being spit at in the face."

WOODS CONTINUED to get nods or grins of approval from his audience as he spoke. They enjoyed his frequent attacks on student demonstrators and the media. He seemed to be voicing their thoughts. But he was appealing to their fright about the conditions in society. He seemed to be telling them, "Don't worry. Sheriff Joe won't let those kids destroy your property. But we'll only spray them with Mace. It won't hurt them. They'll just want to go home."

He also told them, "Sure some student violators are Communist inspired. I do not like some TV people. They are instigators of some of our problems in Cook County and in the rest of the country."

He thinks they (television) agitated demonstrators at the Democratic Convention but that the press wouldn't normally instigate a riot. "Newspapers hardly create problems," he remarked. "It's when people see themselves on the 'boob tube' they start to misbehave."

About the Contract Buyers League evictions, Woods said he knows he was put in the middle by Mayor Daley to arouse public sentiment against him (Woods). But he said he's been put in the middle for a long time and that he's used to it.

Post Office Building Ahead of Schedule

Work is ahead of schedule on the new post office building being built in Wheeling and the new facilities may be ready for use sooner than expected. Wheeling Postmaster Edward Swan said Monday.

Swan said outside work is almost completed on the new building on the north side of Dundee Road across from the Wheeling Municipal building.

He said he is hopeful the move to the new building could be made in July instead of in August as originally planned.

THE $191,800 building will have five service windows for Wheeling and Buffalo Grove area residents to use instead of the three in the current post office's rented quarters in the Wheeling Shopping Center.

Major additions will also include offices, lunchroom facilities for employees and larger work area, Swan said.

by MARY REIFSCHEIDER

"The Sports World," a recreation complex including a domed stadium with a seating capacity for 110,000, is being proposed for Schaumburg on 97 acres across from the WGN towers on Rte. 53.

The enclosed arena, with underground parking, could be home to major Chicago sports clubs now seeking new quarters, but it would also be available for local and amateur teams, its developer Lee Romano told the Herald Wednesday.

The 97 acres, fronting on Rte. 53 near the Interstate-90 breakoff, are not annexed to Schaumburg now. Romano has options on adjacent parcels that would make the land contiguous to the village. Mayor Robert O. Atcher told the Herald the land could be annexed by referendum.

Romano said he expects to bring the proposal before the Zoning Board of Appeals in the next several weeks.

"I HAVE BEEN approached by major sports groups seeking new locations that could occupy The Sports World," Romano said. He did not specify which teams are interested.

Atcher said a domed stadium is feasible for the Northwest area, especially since several of the major league Chicago teams are looking for new homes. The professional baseball and football leagues are encouraging Chicago teams to find larger quarters that will increase attendance and revenues.

A domed sports stadium was once discussed for Arlington Park, but plans never got off the ground and apparently were scuttled when the race track was purchased by Gulf-Western.

The Sports World, with a dome that opens and closes, would have twice the seating capacity as the Houston Astro-dome, now the only completed enclosed stadium, which holds 44,500 spectators.

In addition to Sports World, the complex would include "The Adventure," a center with restaurants, lounges, a roller skating and ice skating rinks, caves and other activities, Romano said.

ROMANO, WHO IS THE developer of the Planet Project in Schaumburg, noted for the proposed 113-story building, has other parcels to be developed in Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights.

The developer noted that the sports complex, which would cost upwards of $100 million, would not disturb any community or its residents. It is surrounded on three sides by the Cook County Forest Preserve.

Romano said that Sports World will centrally serve any area of Northwest Cook and North DuPage Counties that already has a population of over one million and will grow to many times that in the next 10 years.

He has not announced a timetable for building the stadium complex yet.

Romano expects to run into trouble from the Cook County Forest Preserve over the site. He has heard rumors that the forest preserve wants to add the 97 acres to its 3,500 acre holdings in the Schaumburg Elk Grove vicinity.

"THE FOREST PRESERVE has ample land without this 97 acres. I intend to fight with everything I have for this," he said.

The site is now a tree nursery.

Mint Is Nature's Insect Repellent

More than 100 suburban residents "attuned their ears to nature" and glued their eyes to the movie screen Tuesday night.

It was PEP's (Pollution and Environmental Problems) Eco-Catastrophe Film Festival which ironically was hit by a weather "catastrophe" as the fog rolled in and sirens sounded outside Forest View High School's Little Theater in Arlington Heights.

In the beginning the audience heard what individuals can do to fight pollution by using low phosphate detergents, eliminating dangerous pesticides from household use and gardening the organic way.

"There are several small plants which can be used in place of insecticides," explained Mrs. R. C. Good, PEP program chairman.

"For example, mint can be planted near cabbage or garlic plants near rose bushes to assist in bug control," she said.

MRS. GOOD ALSO explained how phosphates in detergents should stay below 25 units per washload. Enzyme presoaks are especially high ranging from 30 to 55 units of phosphate, she said.

A list of phosphate content of detergents prepared by Northwestern Students for a Better Environment was distributed to the group. Only 12 detergent products of 43 are above the hazardous phosphate level.

When the lights dimmed, it was time for visual proof of what pollution is doing to the environment.

An award-winner, "Urbanissimo," showed nature's destruction from city planning and aimless construction.

"Nature's Half Acre," the longer movie, dwelled on the struggle for survival among the non-human population and the children in the audience with quiet screams showed they were getting the point of the film as a duckling fled from the overbearing shovel of a bulldozer.

CHARLES YAGER, author and conservationist from Prospect Heights put his thoughts into poetry at Tuesday night's film festival.

"What is man? It's the only thing on earth which kills its own kind."

"What you kill or destroy is gone beyond your ever bringing it back."

"You are destroying yourself."

Then, Gunnar Peterson, executive director of the Open Lands Project in Chicago, warned, "This is only the beginning."

Student protests and violence will increase and they'll be demonstrating against pollution, according to Peterson. PEP was commended by several members of the audience for the "stimulating and informative" session.

Current projects of the suburban anti-pollution group including a beautification project in Palatine, an environmental hot-line, an aluminum drive and testifying at public hearings against pollution were listed and more volunteers recruited.

Hamilton: Stop Airport Plan

Tom Hamilton, chairman of the Elk Grove Village Aviation Committee, has called for a halt to expansion of O'Hare International Airport.

"We think it's time to call a halt to the expansion of O'Hare Field," said Hamilton, speaking before the Elk Grove Village Board Tuesday.

THREE ARE SOME pretty serious problems confronting Elk Grove Village, he said. Things are quickly coming to a head between the City of Chicago and surrounding villages.

A third airport is already under construction right here, he said, pointing to a strip of Elk Grove's neighbor to the east.

He said plans for expansion of O'Hare made in 1964 are coming true.

Hamilton said the city plans to put in a triple runway system in three directions

Tom Hamilton

for a total of nine runways. CONSTRUCTION of a sixth major runway (northeast-southwest) began several months ago and plans are now being prepared for three more.

Hamilton and Warren Edwards, a committee member, urged village support of the O'Hare Area Noise Abatement Council, a group of about 18 municipalities formed last year by George Franks of Wood Dale.

Edwards said legislators must become concerned because the municipalities represent 400,000 voters.

"We've been shoved under the table long enough," he said.

Edwards told of plans by Chicago to obtain 300 acres at the northeast corner of the airport presently a military reservation, for a $1 donation to the Department of Defense. The land is valued at $1,480,000, he claimed. If you know the structure of Chicago politics this is going to go through.

Edwards said residents can oppose the land transfer and future expansion of O'Hare by attending a meeting May 27 at Fenton High School in Bensenville. If it's backed by enough people, someone will pay attention.

The village board then voted to support the aviation committee in its activities with the council, as well as spend $200 for the distribution of literature on airport expansion.

PARK RIDGE officials have already taken action against Chicago by seeking an injunction restraining construction of the northeast-southwest runway, but according to Elk Grove Village Atty. Edward Hofer, it has been abandoned.

Hofer said a second suit against the city and the airport may be filed by communities in DuPage County where they may have more of a chance of obtaining a favorable decision. O'Hare is mostly in Cook County but a southwest section lies in DuPage.

Milwaukee-Strong Gas Station Asked

A proposal to rezone property on the corner of Milwaukee Avenue and Strong Street to a classification that would allow construction of a gasoline service station has been submitted to the Wheeling Village Board. Only a year ago the village board removed the very zoning now being sought.

The new rezoning petition, which asks that the property's zoning be changed from B-1 (general business district) to

B-4 classification from the site. The petition to the zoning board of appeals Monday by the village board.

A DATE FOR the zoning board's consideration of the proposal remains to be set.

On the property now is an abandoned service station and an antique shop. In May 1969, the village board removed the B-4 classification from the site. The change came following a hearing last year on the matter held by the zoning board.

Now the property's owner, Henry Sheridan, is asking that the change be reversed.

During the proceedings on the matter last year, Arthur Sheridan, nephew of the property owners, told the zoning board that his uncle had been living for the last four years to find a tenant for the property. He indicated at that time that the removal of B-4 zoning might halt the search for a tenant.

Sheridan's recent rezoning petition does not indicate that if the property is rezoned once more to B-4, it will be used for a service station. The petition does say, however, the property would be leased to the Cook Oil and Refining Corp. if the rezoning is granted.

Hintz Work Starts Monday

Hintz Road at its intersection with Wolf Road will be widened to four lanes in connection with a Cook County Highway Department resurfacing program on Hintz from Elmhurst Road to Wolf Road.

Hintz Road will be closed to through traffic beginning Monday morning. Local traffic will be allowed on the road, however.

Department of Highway officials indicated yesterday the detour of through traffic will remain in effect until early fall. Hintz Road traffic will be diverted to Dundee Road on Elmhurst and Wolf roads for the detour.

The road will remain two lanes wide, except for the widening at the intersection, highway department officials said.

The contract for almost $300,000 for the project was awarded to the Rock Road Construction Co. of Wheeling in April by the Cook County Board of Commissioners.

Plan Shrub, Flower Sale At High School

Trees, shrubs, rosebushes and flowers will be on sale this weekend and next at Wheeling High School.

The Wheeling Instrumental League is sponsoring the sale to raise money for a concert trip by the WIIS band to Winnipeg, Canada, this summer.

The sale will run from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday and May 23 and 24.

Sponsors of the project hope to raise $2,000 for the band.

Students Took Tea, Then Saw Chinatown

First graders at Twain School brought Japan to their classrooms recently. Studying the customs of Japan, the children took part in a formal tea party wearing Japanese hats and slippers they had made.

The children also toured Chicago's Chinatown and ate a meal at Kiyos Chinese Restaurant. The students are in the classes of Miss Dorothy Estelle and Mrs. Karen Hardin.

A NEWSPAPER in the mouth is an effective way to keep someone from speaking. The scene is from the Wheeling High School production, "Pajama Game," which will be presented this weekend and next weekend in the Little Theater. Appearing in the musical comedy are, from left, Lou Rofrano,

Plans Start For Annual Grove Days

Planning for the 1970 Buffalo Grove Days celebration began with an organizational meeting Tuesday of the committee handling the event.

Buffalo Grove Days, held annually Labor Day weekend, is sponsored and financially supported by the village. Last year's observance was expanded to include two days, and cost the village $1,050.

Planning for Buffalo Grove Days usually begins much sooner in the year, sometimes as early as February, according to Ken Felten, village trustee, who is acting as temporary chairman for the event.

REPRESENTATIVES of several civic organizations in the village met with Felten and trustee Allan Thornd in an effort to begin laying groundwork for the event. Monday's meeting was the first held concerning this year's Buffalo Grove days.

Village officials each year hope the celebration's revenue will match its expenses. However, Felten said, usually expenses are greater than revenue.

The village board has yet to approve any expenditures this year for the celebration. Felten estimated about $2,000 would be needed for the celebration. He said he planned to bring up the matter at the May 23 village board meeting.

Representatives from about 10 civic groups were at the Tuesday's meeting. Felten, who had sent letters to most civic organizations in the village concerning the meeting, termed Monday's turnout "small." He urged other organizations in the village to join in working on the project. "The persons who were there Monday showed enthusiasm for the celebration, but they need more people from other parts of the village."

SEVERAL ASSIGNMENTS and appointments were made Monday. However, the Buffalo Grove Days committee is still lacking a general chairman and a finance chairman.

The group chose the theme "Heritage Day" for this year's celebration. Representatives from the Strathmore Homeowners Association, the men's and women's clubs of St. Mary's Church the Killmer PTA, the Buffalo Grove and the Cambridge Women's Clubs, and the Jaycees tentatively agreed to handle certain parts of the celebration. However, the representatives indicated they would have to receive official approval from their organizations before officially committing their groups to participate in the celebration.

Felten said plans for this year's Buffalo Grove Days include carnival rides for small children, carnival games and booths, a parade, a big-name rock band concert and a teen dance. As in past years, the Jaycees will handle the fireworks display the second night of the celebration, climaxing the celebration. Felten said the next meeting of the committee working on Buffalo Grove Days will meet June 2 at the village's municipal building.

Environment Program Set At Stevenson

University professors, corporation leaders, teachers and public service personnel will participate in an all-day environmental teach-in at Stevenson High School tomorrow.

The program was organized by a student committee. The public has been invited to attend. Regular classes will not be held tomorrow at the school.

Dr. James Holman, biology professor at Roosevelt University will deliver the keynote address beginning at 8:30 a.m. in the Stevenson auditorium. Later Holman will debate antipollution issues with a representative from the Commonwealth Co.

Others on the morning program include Dr. Carlos Ignoffo, researcher with the International Mineral Corp.; Mrs. Tryna Goldsmith, a member of the Campaign Against Pollution (CAP) of Chicago; and Dr. Donald Levy, chemistry professor at the University of Chicago, who will discuss "Air Pollution: Causes and Cures."

AFTERNOON SPEAKERS include George R. Lester of the Universal Oil Corp. who will discuss "Pollution from Auto Exhaust," Maud Grau, foreign language instructor at Ridgewood High School who will lecture on "zero population," and Paul Schultz, a member of the College Live-In Projects group, who will discuss ecology.

Donald Marshall of the U. S. Public Health Service will lecture on "Environment" and State Rep. Daniel Pierce from the 31st district will discuss a topic to be announced later.

"New for Tomorrow," a movie on pollution problems will be shown every hour on the hour beginning at 10 a.m. A second movie, "A Third Pollution" will be shown at 11 a.m.

Stevenson students who headed the committee to set up the program include Andy Elmore, Bill Clayton, Marge Bernard, Ellen Krnak, Chris Tallamone and Brian Horne. They are members of the newly organized Stevenson group, called Environmental Salvation People. Wayne Schnable, Stevenson curriculum coordinator and social studies instructor, works with the organization.

'Pajama Game' Comes To Town This Weekend

"Pajama Game" will come to Wheeling High School this weekend and next weekend. The WHS student production of the Broadway musical comedy will be presented at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and again May 22 and 23 in the Little Theater.

The show concerns the antics that result when employees in a pajama factory go on strike for wage increases. Marilyn Raedel of Prospect Heights, Illinois' Junior Miss, did the choreography for the show.

ERIC LIDH, FACULTY director of the play, has promised that the show "won't be conventional, but will provide a lot of fun and spontaneity."

A special runway has been constructed down the middle of the theater, and many of the scenes will be played on it, rather than on the stage.

"This will enable the cast to talk to the audience and get them involved in what's going on," he explained. "I've worked with many high school casts, but I can honestly say that this is the best one I've ever directed," he added.

The show's script and music have been specially arranged for the WHS production. Tickets for the play will be on sale at the door the evenings of the performances.

Wheeling Library Gets Zoning Nod

The first step toward renovation of a church in Wheeling that will be used as a library was taken Tuesday. Wheeling's zoning board of appeals recommended the village board grant a special use permit for the renovation.

The Wheeling Public Library District

plans to buy and remodel St. Mark's United Church of Christ building on Jenkins Court in Wheeling for use as the district's new library facility.

Funds for the purchase and renovation were approved in a $250,000 bond issue passed by library district voters April 4.

The district serves Wheeling and the Cook County portion of Buffalo Grove.

The zoning board voted unanimously to recommend to the Wheeling Village Board that a special use for the library be granted on the church property and on two adjacent lots already owned by the library district. Such a special use permit is needed to build a library in any zoning class in the village.

GENERAL OBLIGATION bonds totaling $250,000 will be issued by the district to pay for the purchase of the church building, remodeling, air conditioning, carpeting, and new books.

Library board Atty. Roger Bjorvik and Board Pres. Charles DuBois told the zoning board that two banks had agreed to purchase the bonds from the district.

DuBois testified that he felt using the church as a library "would not alter the essential character of the neighborhood."

He listed other sites studied by the board before the referendum including the east end of the golf course at Arlington

Country club, property east and west of the Soo Line R.R. tracks on Dundee Road, and a lot at the southwest corner of Wolf and Dundee roads.

Douglas Cargill, zoning board chairman, explained to the other board members that he, in his capacity as zoning administrator, had recommended to the library board members that they wait until after the referendum to seek a special use on the property.

A PARKING LOT for 50 cars will be provided west of the library building, architect Godfrey L. Duke told the zoning board.

Duke, who was the original architect on the church, explained the remodeling is largely a "facelifting" for the building and that the only structural change is to strengthen floors in the education wing to withstand the load of books.

Duke said plans for the building's remodeling would be submitted to the village within 2½ months if the special use zoning is granted. He predicted the library would be ready before Christmas.

Attorney Claims 'No Fraud'

An attorney for Levitt and Sons, Inc., declared this week there was no fraud involved in the builder's sale of homes in Lake County.

Lawyer Jack Siegel, commenting Tuesday on a suit expected to be filed against Levitt, said: "There was no fraud. Any affirmative representations that Levitt made (to prospective homebuyers) were based on the factual situation as it existed at that time."

THE SUIT is expected to be filed by a group of Lake County homeowners. Basically it will contend that Strathmore home buyers were not told of the shortage of schools in the Lake County portion of Buffalo Grove. Levitt is the firm building Strathmore.

Last Friday, the Strathmore Homeowners Association (SHA) voted to endorse the suit and to allow two of the SHA's committees to help raise funds for legal fees connected with the suit.

Of the charges, Siegel said, "I know of no misrepresentations or fraud. I know of no school problem which the school district does not have the authority to settle."

Currently School Dist. 96, the district in question, is condemning 15 acres of Levitt-owned land in Levitt's Strathmore development in Lake County.

The suit to be filed by homeowners and the district's condemnation suit are not the only legal actions that have resulted from the school site situation in the Dist. 96 area in the last several months.

WHEN THE SCHOOL district decided to condemn land in February, members of the SHA began picketing the Levitt model homes site on Arlington Heights Road. That stopped a few weeks later after Levitt asked for injunction to halt it. SHA stopped the picketing, and Levitt withdrew its request for the injunction.

More recently, School Dist. 96 sought to stop persons from moving into new Strathmore homes in an effort to stave off what district officials thought would be an unbearable overburdening of the district's lone facility, Kildeer School. That injunction petition was turned down.

A proposed townhouse and apartment complex on the Zale property in western Wheeling was recommended for planned development (PD-4) zoning by the Wheeling Zoning Board of Appeals Tuesday.

To be named Jamestown Circle on the Lake, the proposed development will include 238 townhouses, 252 apartments in four buildings, two swimming pools and a clubhouse. The townhouses will be in a cluster-type development with green areas between groups of buildings.

The four-story apartment buildings would each house 63 apartments and include 44 two-bedroom apartments, 7 one-bedroom apartments, and 12 three-bedroom apartments in each building.

Developer Al Zale testified that the number of bedrooms in the proposed townhouses would be unknown until a sales campaign was begun, but that there would be a predominance of three-bedroom units with some two-bedroom and some four-bedroom units.

THE CENTER OF the townhouse section on the eastern two-thirds of the 36-acre site would hold a retention basin which will be the final step in the system of drainage basins in the Tahoe, Miller and Mallard Lake developments in the area.

The Jamestown Circle property is located north of Hintz Road 1,500 feet east of Buffalo Grove Road. It is bordered by the Server Co., Mallard Lake apartment project on the west and by the Tahoe project, a proposed planned development, on the north.

To the east of the property are single-family homes on Jackson drive, an unincorporated area.

The apartment buildings proposed in Jamestown Circle would have underground parking facilities. Two spaces would be provided, one outside and one inside, for each apartment unit.

Zale testified Tuesday that negotiations are being conducted with School Dist. 21 to find an alternate site for a school park site, 11 acres of which is located on the proposed development. He said he was hopeful the negotiations would prove successful within two or three months.

HE TOLD THE zoning board that the townhouses and apartments would be sold "in the mid-20 price range" to provide homes for what he termed "middle income families."

Zale said owners in the development would pay a monthly maintenance fee for landscaping, painting and other similar work.

New roads would include two dedicated streets.

The property is currently zoned for single family homes. Final action on the rezoning of the property to a planned development must come from the village board.

The developers were unable to predict the number of school-aged children who would live in the complex when questioned by the zoning board because the number of bedrooms in the townhouses was not determined.

All apartments and townhouses in the project would be sold rather than rented, Zale testified.

ONE LOCAL resident, John D. Swiders Jr., of 2324 E. Hintz Rd., told the zoning board he was concerned that the school and park districts might condemn his house, adjacent to the Jamestown development, as part of a school-park site.

Zoning board members said they thought it would be unlikely the districts would consider anything except vacant land for a new school site.

Planned Development Endorsed

Demonstrators Offer Nothing, Says Cop

The week May 10-16 has been set aside by presidential proclamation to honor policemen throughout the nation.

The policeman, along with the fireman, the nurse and the mailman, are still revered in most grade school classrooms. And the citizens voting for law and order candidates still view the policeman as an instrument of one of America's highest ideals.

But there is a segment in our country, a little older than the grade school student and younger than the electorate, that refutes the policeman's integrity. They call him "pig."

The reaction from the law enforcers has ranged from anger to quiet indignity, but they all agree the attack is unjust.

"We are just like everyone else, but we wear uniforms and carry guns," objected Patrolman Roger Holt, administrative aide to the commander at the Cook County Sheriff's north suburban station in Niles.

"IT IS WRONG to classify us as one group," added Holt. "We are all individuals."

"The newspapers and TV always show everything the policeman does wrong. But we have files of letters from citizens commemorating the work of the policeman in our department. And that never gets in the headlines."

On the suburban beat, the 80 men at the Niles station rarely come into direct contact with the element that derides them. However, they were on standby all last week during the demonstrations by students in Evanston. And they have been called into the city many times to evict residents who have not fulfilled contract buyers agreements.

"Demonstrators, in my opinion, are stupid," said Holt. "They don't like the form of government they have, but they don't offer a solution."

"ANYONE CAN GO out and burn buildings and throw rocks. It doesn't take much intelligence. But it does take intelligence to find a solution to society's problems."

Holt said he didn't believe a division exists between the police and all youth. "A lot of our officers have friends in college. But these students have parents who taught them right from wrong."

While demonstrations don't rate high on the Niles station's list of problems, a shortage in manpower does. The 80 man force is responsible for all of the unincorporated areas in Cook County, north of the Eisenhower Expressway, and west of Elgin.

SIX CARS PATROL during each shift, backed up by six to 10 policemen. For Prospect Heights, the largest unincorporated area in Cook County, this means only one car is patrolling the community along with other areas.

"Our situation isn't that critical, but we could always use more men," said Holt.

"I'd like to see us go into a county-wide crime laboratory and detective agency. But the county is too old to have a centralized police force. They had it all along in England. But here, there are too many jealousies between towns."

None of the local politicians and police chiefs will want to give up the position they already have," added Holt.

Holt objected to the current investigation of the Northwest Suburban Council of Associations (NSCA), a group of nine Prospect Heights organizations, into the opinions of the community towards hiring a private patrol service.

has to be registered in the state of Illinois. It is a heck of a thing to turn a force loose on the citizens that isn't trained and properly equipped. They have plenty of protection with the county. We are more than happy to come out."

Contract policing, on the other hand, is "great" according to Holt. "We don't have a structure for it yet, but a committee is working on it." State legislation permits townships to contract with the county or a municipality for additional police patrol in unincorporated areas.

Looking even further into the future, Holt commented, "eventually I may be out of a job, because I don't think unincorporated areas will always exist."

A Fire Call Too Late?

by JUDY BRANDES

"My first thought was 'They didn't call us soon enough.'"

The speaker was Bruce Winter, a full-time fireman in the Rolling Meadows fire department.

He and 14 other full-time and volunteers who led the battle to stop the fire in a Three Fountains apartment building 10 days ago were discussing what happened from the moment they got the call to their return to the fire station several hours later.

"When we pulled out of the station on Meadow Drive, I could see the smoke already and knew we were in trouble," Charlie Sellards, the first officer to arrive at the fire said. Sellards radioed Arlington Heights for mutual assistance while en route to Three Fountains.

"Flames were already coming out the patio doors and that first floor apartment was burned out when we got there," Sellards said.

HE AND THE MEN on the first engine to arrive went after the apartment where the fire began. "We thought we had it out until we went around the south end and saw it going up the stairwell. We couldn't get in. The heat was too much."

On the way into Three Fountains, the firemen's hearts were pumping madly, they agreed. "I had Thumper with me all the way," Bill Schmidt, engineer on the first engine to arrive, said.

The men knew 5201 Carriage Way Drive was a building built before the life safety code was adopted by the city. They were expecting the fire to be bad, but didn't realize until later what type of fire it was.

"It was a hidden fire," Fire Chief Thomas Fogarty explained. Fogarty and four firemen were attending class at Harper Junior College when they heard about Three Fountains. "No matter what wall we took off, we always found fire. Once the fire got into the hallway, I knew it would move to other areas."

BEFORE FOGARTY arrived, Sellards was the officer in charge. "You call for all this equipment and it comes in. They're asking where you want them to go. I had to make a lot of decisions in a few seconds."

The first three engines to arrive, Rolling Meadows two and the aerial ladder from Arlington Heights, didn't get slowed down with traffic. The others, including the "Mount Prospect" snail, had trouble getting through the traffic which materialized as more people came to watch the fire.

Engineer Schmidt was responsible for laying the lines and hooking up to the fire hydrant. "I went past the first hydrant because people were standing there and I didn't see it," Schmidt said.

With a large fire, the department hooks up "hard sections" of hose to get enough water. "I was afraid we weren't going to get the hard section on the hydrant."

SCHMIDT AND FIREMAN Jack Fahn found the hydrant caps too low to the ground and when they finally got the top cap off, they had to clean the mud off before the hoses could be attached.

People trapped on the balconies were helped off by Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights men who arrived early on the scene.

"We got the police chief and two others off the back balcony and then went on up to the roof," Assistant Fire Chief Don Marshall, a volunteer, said. From the front, fire watchers couldn't see the men on the roof, who were working in the trough on the "M-shaped" roof.

"We stayed up there knocking holes in the roof to ventilate the fire until the tar started to bubble and the chief ordered

Red hot railings, intense black smoke and searing heat prevented teams of men from penetrating into the hallways. "We crawled in on our bellies from the balcony on the second floor with fire above and around us," Ed Retzer, a volunteer, explained. "It's a scary feeling when you turn to crawl back out in a dark room and run into a wall every way you turn."

RESCUE AND SEARCH teams couldn't get into the building.

"We couldn't get in, the smoke was so black and thick," Sellards said.

The places the fire burned into were scattered. "You have to remember, a fireman is only in one place. We couldn't see all the places the fire was breaking out," Bruce Winter said.

"The men got mad at me when I ordered them out of the building," Chief Fogarty chuckled. "They couldn't see what was going on, of course, but I could see it was dangerous."

No fireman can recall what he did when. "The only reason I knew it was 2:30 in the morning was that I had scratched myself when I climbed into the attic and realized later it hurt. The watch was on my arm when I looked at the scratch," Marshall said.

"IT WAS A TERRIFIC stop on the fire," Fogarty said. "Fire chiefs from other areas complimented us on how much we were able to save."

Dick Blane, who singed his ears working on the second and third floors, told how the only empty apartment in the building wasn't damaged too much. "If those tenants had only used common sense in closing doors, the fire probably wouldn't have gone as far as it did. When we went back the next day, there were some places, like closets, which had smoke damage, but no water and things weren't burned. We pulled three mink coats unharmed out of one closet."

Chief Fogarty attributes the spread of the fire to the fact that the door to the apartment where it started was left open.

"We didn't realize how fast it was going and didn't know it had gotten to the other end when we arrived," Winter said. "When I saw those flames, though, I knew that fire had a good start before we got there. My first thought was 'They didn't call us soon enough.'"

"SIDEWALK CHIEFS don't realize that as they are running out of a fire, the poor firemen have to be running into it," Lt. Ted Loesch, Rolling Meadows fire department, said of those who criticized his department about the Three Fountains apartment fire. Loesch and the department explain what they thought of while they fought the fire May 4.

Woods Doesn't Mind 'Pig' Call

by CYNTHIA TIVERS

Sheriff Joe Woods is a law and order man who says he practices justice.

He thinks the use of Mace is humane and he dislikes Mayor Daley's politics. He also says he would have walked along with those construction workers last week in New York. Those construction workers marched along Wall Street abusing students and demanding that flags lowered, in memory of the four slain Kent students, be raised.

The tall gray-haired Woods spoke to the Palatine Kiwanis Club about Law Enforcement in Cook County. He told his audience he doesn't mind it when he or his riot-control trained men are called "pigs" by protesters. "Pig to me" he said, "stands for pride, integrity and guts. It's abuse of my men that takes control. This abuse comes in the form of rock-throwing and being spit at in the face."

WOODS CONTINUED to get nods or grunts of approval from his audience as he spoke. They enjoyed his frequent attacks on student demonstrators and the media. He seemed to be voicing their thoughts. But he was appealing to their fright about the conditions in society. He seemed to be telling them, "Don't worry. Sheriff Joe won't let those kids destroy your property. But we'll only spray them with Mace. It won't hurt them. They'll just want to go home."

He also told them, "Sure some student violators are Communist inspired," and, "I do not like some TV people. They are instigators of some of our problems in Cook County and in the rest of the country."

He thinks they (television) agitated demonstrators at the Democratic Convention but that the press wouldn't normally instigate a riot. "Newspapers hardly create problems," he remarked. "It's when people see themselves on the 'boob tube' they start to misbehave."

About the Contract Buyers League evictions, Woods said he knows he was put in the middle by Mayor Daley to arouse public sentiment against him (Woods). But he said he's been put in the middle for a long time and that he's used to it.

Wolf Rd. award winners were Nick Kron, Ron Or-Colleen Byrne of 150 Sunrise Dr. Wheeling, was treated for abrasions on her back, knees and face.

Wheeling police charged the driver of the truck, Lennart F. Anderson, 36, of 7 N. Patricia, Prospect Heights, with negligent driving in connection with the accident on private property.

Post Office Building Ahead of Schedule

Work is ahead of schedule on the new post office building being built in Wheeling, and the new facilities may be ready for use sooner than expected, Wheeling Postmaster Edward Swan said Monday.

Swan said outside work is almost completed on the new building on the north side of Dundee Road across from the Wheeling municipal building.

He said he is hopeful the move to the new building could be made in July instead of in August as originally planned.

THE $491,000 building will have five service windows for Wheeling and Buffalo Grove area residents to use instead of the three in the current post office's rented quarters in the Wheeling Shopping Center.

Major additions will also include offices, lunchroom facilities for employees, and larger work area. Swan said.

Students: Don't Lower Flag

Hersey High School students voted by more than a 3-1 margin yesterday not to lower the school's flag in memory of the four dead students at Kent State.

Retracing the events that led to yesterday's vote, Principal Roland Goins told the Herald that a group of students asked him on Monday morning to lower the flag to half staff in memory of the students who were killed at Kent.

Goins told them that he didn't have the authority to make such a move and suggested that they draw up a petition and present it to the School Dist. 214 board meeting that night. The students gathered 500 signatures but the school board decided to defer action and let a committee discuss the entire question of lowering flags at a future date.

Goins informed the students involved of the board's decision on Tuesday and suggested they discuss their feelings with board members.

Yesterday morning, Goins said, about 40 to 50 students gathered around the flagpole and said they were going to lower the American flag.

"We told them they couldn't lower the flag and they agreed to come inside and talk about it," Goins said.

After refusing their suggestion of putting up another flagpole and lowering an American flag, Goins said they could lower the Hersey flag from the flagpole. The group agreed, but the student body voted 1,722-502 against such a move.

Cement Blocks Are Smashed At School

About 60 cement blocks were smashed by vandals at the Lincoln School construction site in Mount Prospect Tuesday.

A foreman for the Lee Construction Co. of Chicago, told police this is just one of several reports of damage by vandals at the construction site since the project was started this spring.

The foreman estimated damage at about $50 to $100.

Two windows, valued at about $75, at Westbrook School in Mount Prospect were also broken by vandals Tuesday.

'Don't Offer Solutions' Demonstrators 'Stupid': Cop

The week May 10 - 16 has been set aside by presidential proclamation to honor policemen throughout the nation.

The policeman, along with the fireman, the nurse and the mailman, are still revered in most grade school classrooms. And the citizens voting for law and order candidates still view the policeman as an instrument of one of America's highest ideals.

But there is a segment in our country, a little older than the grade school student and younger than the electorate, that relates the policeman's integrity. They call him "pig."

The reaction from the law enforcers has ranged from anger to quiet indignity, but they all agree the attack is unjust.

"We are just like everyone else, but we wear uniforms and carry guns," objected Patrolman Roger Holt, administrative aide to the commander at the Cook County Sheriff's north suburban station in Niles.

"IT IS WRONG to classify us as one group," added Holt. "We are all individuals."

"The newspapers and TV always show everything the policeman does wrong. But we have files of letters from citizens commemorating the work of the policemen in our department. And that never gets in the headlines."

On the suburban beat, the 80 men at the Niles station rarely come into direct contact with the element that derides them. However, they were on standby all last week during the demonstrations by students in Evanston. And they have been called into the city many times to evict residents who have not fulfilled contract buyers agreements.

"Demonstrators, in my opinion, are stupid," said Holt. "They don't like the form of government they have, but they don't offer a solution."

"ANYONE CAN GO out and burn buildings and throw rocks. It doesn't take much intelligence. But it does take intelligence to find a solution to society's problems."

Holt said he didn't believe a division exists between the police and all youth. "A lot of our officers have friends in college. But these students have parents who taught them right from wrong."

While demonstrations don't rate high on the Niles station's list of problems, a shortage in manpower does. The 80 man force is responsible for all of the unincorporated areas in Cook County, north of the Eisenhower Expressway, and west of Elgin.

SIX CARS PATROL during each shift, backed up by six to 10 policemen. For Prospect Heights, the largest unincorporated area in Cook County, this means only one car is patrolling the community along with other areas.

"Our situation isn't that critical, but we could always use more men," said Holt.

"I'd like to see us go into a county-wide crime laboratory and detective agency. But the county is too old to have a centralized police force. They had it all along in England. But here, there are too many jealousies between towns."

None of the local politicians and police chiefs will want to give up the position they already have," added Holt.

Holt objected to the current investigation of the Northwest Suburban Council of Associations (NSCA), a group of nine Prospect Heights organizations, into the opinions of the community towards hiring a private patrol service.

"I THINK PRIVATE protection might be illegal. I know any police department has to be registered in the state of Illinois. It is a heck of a thing to turn a force loose on the citizens that isn't trained and properly equipped. They have plenty of protection with the county. We are more than happy to come out."

Contract policing, on the other hand, is "great" according to Holt. "We don't have a structure for it yet, but a committee is working on it." State legislation permits townships to contract with the county or a municipality for additional police patrol in unincorporated areas.

Looking even further into the future, Holt commented, "eventually I may be out of a job, because I don't think unincorporated areas will always exist."

Creek Widening OK Is Requested

Jack Gilligan, chairman of the McDonald Creek Improvement committee, has requested permission from the Prospect Heights Park District to widen McDonald Creek just north of Palatine Road and west of Route 83 in the "Boy Scout Park."

Gilligan had received an easement permit from the park district earlier, but now needs permission to remove soil and trees along the creek bank.

"The creek is only two feet wide at some points in the park, with a flow capacity of eight square feet," Gilligan explained. "We would like to widen it by two or three feet."

The park commissioners were reluctant to grant the additional permit until they had inspected the area where the work will be done. The park board meeting has been adjourned to the site, at 10 a.m., Saturday. Gilligan will attend the meeting, and a decision, one way or the other, should be made at that time.

IF THE PERMIT is granted, Gilligan said he would not turn it over to the state until the maintenance crew is actually at the scene ready to begin work.

The maintenance crew arrived in Prospect Heights last week for an emergency cleanup operation. By the end of the week, they had cleaned out a log jam on the east side of the Wheeling Road bridge, and widened and deepened the creek at the point.

The team also cleaned out another log jam, further east, near the Wheeling industrial area and St. Alphonsus School.

Both of these sites were identified for the clean up earlier at a meeting between Gilligan, Richard Schulz, president of the Old Town Sanitary District; State Rep. Eugene Schlickman; and John Guillou, director of the Illinois Division of Waterways (IDW).

MAJOR CREEK improvements requiring heavier equipment will not begin until after the 1971 fiscal year, according to Guillou, because the Des Plaines River takes priority over its tributaries. The engineer survey outlining restructuring of the river has not yet been completed.

However, the state crew has deviated from the original plan by returning to Prospect Heights this week and doing additional work on the west side of the Wheeling Road bridge.

A turn in the creek 125 yards east of the bridge will also be widened by the crew before they leave the area.

Gilligan hopes to convince the crew to widen the creek in the Boy Scout Park in addition before their departure. He said he inspected the area with the crew Tuesday, but they were reluctant to do any work at that time because of the high water level.

"We are meeting again today to see if widening of the creek in the park is more feasible," said Gilligan.

GILLIGAN STRESSES the urgency of widening the creek as much as possible now before the heavy June rains.

The last heavy flooding occurred in 1967, totaling $75,000 in damage. So, Gilligan predicts another problem this year or next.

Phoenix Girl Junior Miss

Karen Stenwall of Phoenix, Ariz., was named America's Junior Miss for 1970 last night in the pageant's finals held in Mobile, Ala.

With the title goes a $10,000 scholarship.

First runner up was Carol Buckland of Farmington, Conn. who received a $6,000 scholarship. Lara Boyette of Jackson, Miss., second runner-up, won a $4,000 scholarship.

Taking part in the competition that honors high school senior girls was Marilyn Raedel, recently of Prospect Heights and now of Barrington, a senior at Wheeling High School.

Lions Park Students To Display Projects

The Lions Park School will display art and science class projects tonight beginning at 7 p.m.

The halls, classrooms and auditorium will be filled with works of art and displays in the areas of science which are studied in the classrooms.

Art projects will be displayed representing most every media such as watercolor, clay, weaving, work with chalk and charcoal and cut paperwork. Both mod and conventional work will be shown.

Science displays will cover the areas of geology, astronomy, anatomy, chemistry and the physical sciences.

All students in the building will be represented in the exhibit.

Woods Doesn't Mind 'Pig' Call

by CYNTHIA TIVERS

Sheriff Joe Woods is a law and order man who says he practices justice.

He thinks the use of Mace is humane and he dislikes Mayor Daley's politics. He also says he would have walked along with those construction workers last week in New York. Those construction workers marched along Wall Street abusing students and demanding that flags lowered, in memory of the four slain Kent students, be raised.

The tall gray-haired Woods spoke to the Palatine Kiwanis Club about Law Enforcement in Cook County. He told his audience he doesn't mind it when he or his riot-control trained men are called "pigs" by protestors. "Pig to me" he said, "stands for pride, integrity and guts. It's abuse of my men that takes control. This abuse comes in the form of rock-throwing and being spit at in the face."

WOODS CONTINUED to get nods or grunts of approval from his audience as he spoke. They enjoyed his frequent attacks on student demonstrators and the media. He seemed to be voicing their thoughts. But he was appealing to their fright about the conditions in society. He seemed to be telling them, "Don't worry. Sheriff Joe won't let those kids destroy your property. But we'll only spray them with Mace. It won't hurt them. They'll just want to go home."

He also told them, "Sure some student violators are Communist inspired," and,

"I do not like some TV people. They are instigators of some of our problems in Cook County and in the rest of the country."

He thinks they (television) agitated demonstrators at the Democratic Convention but that the press wouldn't normally instigate a riot. "Newspapers hardly create problems," he remarked, "It's when people see themselves on the 'boob tube' they start to misbehave."

About the Contract Buyers League evictions, Woods said he knows he was put in the middle by Mayor Daley to arouse public sentiment against him (Woods). But he said he's been put in the middle for a long time and that he's used to it.

Mint Is Nature's Insect Repellent

More than 100 suburban residents "attuned their ears to nature" and glued their eyes to the movie screen Tuesday night.

It was PEP's (Pollution and Environmental Problems) Eco-Catastrophe Film Festival which ironically was hit by a weather "catastrophe" as the fog rolled in and sirens sounded outside Forest View High School's Little Theater in Arlington Heights.

In the beginning the audience heard what individuals can do to fight pollution by using low phosphate detergents, eliminating dangerous pesticides from household use and gardening the organic way.

"There are several small plants which can be used in place of insecticides," explained Mrs. R. C. Good, PEP program chairman.

"For example, mint can be planted near cabbage or garlic plants near rose bushes to assist in bug control," she said.

MRS. GOOD ALSO explained how phosphates in detergents should stay below 25 units per washload. Enzyme presoaks are especially high ranging from 30 to 55 units of phosphate, she said.

A list of phosphate content of detergents prepared by Northwestern Students for a Better Environment was distributed to the group. Only 12 detergent products of 43 are above the hazardous phosphate level.

When the lights dimmed, it was time for visual proof of what pollution is doing to the environment.

An award-winner, "Urbanissimo," showed nature's destruction from city planning and aimless construction.

"Nature's Half Acre," the longer movie, dwelled on the struggle for survival among the non-human population and the children in the audience with quiet screams showed they were getting the point of the film as a duckling fled from the overbearing shovel of a bulldozer.

CHARLES YAGER, author and conservationist from Prospect Heights put his thoughts into poetry at Tuesday night's film festival.

"What is man? It's the only thing on earth which kills its own kind."

"What you kill or destroy is gone beyond your ever bringing it back."

"You are destroying yourself."

Then, Gunnar Peterson, executive director of the Open Lands Project in Chicago, warned, "This is only the beginning."

Student protests and violence will increase and they'll be demonstrating against pollution, according to Peterson.

PEP was commended by several members of the audience for the "stimulating and informative" session.

Current projects of the suburban anti-pollution group including a beautification project in Palatine, an environmental hotline, an aluminum drive and testifying at public hearings against pollution were listed and more volunteers recruited.

'Pajama Game' This Weekend

"Pajama Game" will come to Wheeling High School this weekend and next weekend. The WHS student production of the Broadway musical comedy will be presented at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and again May 22 and 23 in the Little Theater.

The show concerns the antics that result when employees in a pajama factory go on strike for wage increases. Marilyn Raedel of Prospect Heights, Illinois' Junior Miss, did the choreography for the show.

ERIC LIDH, FACULTY director of the play, has promised that the show "won't be conventional, but will provide a lot of fun and spontaneity."

A special runway has been constructed down the middle of the theater, and many of the scenes will be played on it, rather than on the stage.

"This will enable the cast to talk to the audience and get them involved in what's going on," he explained. "I've worked with many high school casts, but I can honestly say that this is the best one I've ever directed," he added.

The show's script and music have been specially arranged for the WHS production. Tickets for the play will be on sale at the door the evenings of the performances.

A Fire Call Too Late?

by JUDY BRANDES

"My first thought was 'They didn't call us soon enough.'"

The speaker was Bruce Winter, a full-time fireman in the Rolling Meadows fire department.

He and 14 other full-time and volunteers who led the battle to stop the fire in a Three Fountains apartment building 10 days ago were discussing what happened from the moment they got the call to their return to the fire station several hours later.

"When we pulled out of the station on Meadow Drive, I could see the smoke already and knew we were in trouble," Charlie Sellards, the first officer to arrive at the fire said. Sellards radioed Arlington Heights for mutual assistance while en route to Three Fountains.

"Flames were already coming out the patio doors and that first floor apartment was burned out when we got there," Sellards said.

HE AND THE MEN on the first engine to arrive went after the apartment where the fire began. "We thought we had it out until we went around the south end and saw it going up the stairwell. We couldn't get in. The heat was too much." On the way into Three Fountains, the firemen's hearts were pumping madly, they agree. "I had Thumper with me all the way," Bill Schmidt, engineer on the first engine to arrive, said.

The men knew 5201 Carriage Way Drive was a building built before the life safety code was adopted by the city. They were expecting the fire to be bad, but didn't realize until later what type of fire it was.

"It was a hidden fire," Fire Chief Thomas Fogarty explained. Fogarty and four firemen were attending class at Harper Junior College when they heard about Three Fountains. "No matter what wall we took off, we always found fire. Once the fire got into the hallway, I knew it would move to other areas."

BEFORE FOGARTY arrived, Sellards was the officer in charge. "You call for all this equipment and it comes in. They're asking where you want them to go. I had to make a lot of decisions in a few seconds."

The first three engines to arrive, Rolling Meadows two, and the aerial ladder from Arlington Heights, didn't get slowed down with traffic. The others, including the "mount prospect snorkel, had trouble getting through the traffic which materialized as more people came to watch the fire.

Engineer Schmidt was responsible for laying the lines and hooking up to the fire hydrant. "I went past the first hydrant because people were standing there and I didn't see it," Schmidt said.

With a large fire, the department hooks up "hard sections" of hose to get enough water. "I was afraid we weren't going to get the hard section on the hydrant."

SCHMIDT and FIREMAN Jack Fahn found the hydrant caps too low to the ground and when they finally got the top cap off, they had to clean the mud off before the hoses could be attached.

People trapped on the balconies were helped off by Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights men who arrived early on the scene.

"We got the police chief and two others off the back balcony and then went up to the roof," Assistant Fire Chief Don Marshall, a volunteer, said. From the front, fire watchers couldn't see the men on the roof, who were working in the trough on the "M-shaped" roof.

"We stayed up there knocking holes in the roof to ventilate the fire until the tar started to bubble and the chief ordered us off," Marshall continued.

Red hot railings, intense black smoke and searing heat prevented teams of men from penetrating into the hallways.

Kathy Koegel Is Guest of Bell

Kathy Koegel, 1002 Pendleton, Mount Prospect, was a guest recently of Illinois Bell Telephone Co. At the 12th annual Junior Achievement Executive Conference in Chicago.

A junior achievement executive of Centern Enterprises in Des Plaines, sponsored by Illinois Bell, Miss Koegel was named Chicago metropolitan Achiever of the Year.

"We crawled in on our bellies from the balcony on the second floor with fire above and around us," Ed Retzer, a volunteer, explained. "It's a scary feeling when you turn to crawl back out in a dark room and run into a wall every way you turn."

RESCUE AND SEARCH teams couldn't get into the building.

"We couldn't get in. The smoke was so black and thick," Sellards said.

The places the fire burned into were scattered. "You have to remember, a fireman is only in one place. We couldn't see all the places the fire was breaking out," Bruce Winter said.

"The men got mad at me when I ordered them out of the building," Chief Fogarty chuckled. "They couldn't see what was going on, of course, but I could see it was dangerous."

No fireman can recall what he did when. "The only reason I knew it was 2:30 in the morning was that I had scratched myself when I climbed into the attic and realized later it hurt. The watch was on my arm when I looked at the scratch," Marshall said.

"IT WAS A TERRIFIC stop on the fire," Fogarty said. "Fire chiefs from other areas complimented us on how much we were able to save."

Dick Blane, who singed his ears working on the second and third floors, told how the only empty apartment in the building wasn't damaged too much. "If those tenants had only used common sense in closing doors, the fire probably wouldn't have gone as far as it did. When we went back the next day, there were some places, like closets, which had smoke damage, but no water and things weren't burned. We pulled three mink coats unharmed out of one closet."

Chief Fogarty attributes the spread of the fire to the fact that the door to the apartment where it started was left open.

"We didn't realize how fast it was going and didn't know it had gotten to the other end when we arrived," Winter said. "When I saw those flames, though, I knew that fire had a good start before we got there. My first thought was 'They didn't call us soon enough.'"

Building Dedication Set

The Mount Prospect Public Works Building, 11 S. Pine St., will be dedicated to the memory of Howard Wilson by Mayor Robert Teichert May 17 at 2 p.m.

Wilson served as a village trustee from 1953 to the time of his death in 1959. A bronze plaque, inscribed in his memory, will be placed on the front of the building adjacent to the main entrance.

Mayor Teichert said no formal dedication of the building has been held, although it was completed in 1965 and an open house was held at the time of its completion. "The formal dedication has not occurred until this time, pending the creation of a suitable plaque," he explained.

"I think the dedication is just as meaningful regardless of when it's held, and I hope everyone will attend and honor Mrs. Howard Wilson in the dedication," Teichert said.

All members of the administration and residents of Mount Prospect are invited to attend and participate in the ceremony. The Public Works Building will be open for inspection, and coffee will be served following the ceremony.

Dist. 59 Musical Festival Friday

The School Dist. 59 band and orchestra will present its first musical festival at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Grove Junior High School, 777 Elk Grove Blvd., Elk Grove Village.

Approximately 50 band and orchestra members from each of the four junior high schools in the district have been selected to perform in the program.

The performance will be conducted by Dr. H. E. Nutt, president of Vandercook College of Music, Chicago.

Tickets are $1 for adults. Students through junior high school age will be admitted free.

The schools involved in addition to Grove are Dempster and Holmes junior high schools in Mount Prospect, and Lively Junior High School in Elk Grove Village.

Joint Vacation Church School To Be Offered

A joint vacation church-school will be offered this summer by St. Joseph the Worker Catholic Church in Wheeling, and the Lutheran Church of the Good Shepherd in Prospect Heights.

The church school will be held July 27 through Aug. 7 in St. Joseph Church.

Children from preschool through junior high school age from both congregations may participate.

SPANISH-SPEAKING children from the area have also been invited to participate. The two churches are working with the Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows and NORWESCO to enroll these children.

These children will attend the church school in the morning and then participate in a day camp program in the afternoon. The day camp program is being sponsored by the youth in the two congregations.

Registration information may be obtained from either St. Joseph or Good Shepherd Church.

by MARY REIFSCHEIDER

"The Sports World," a recreation complex including a domed stadium with a seating capacity for 110,000, is being proposed for Schaumburg on 97 acres across from the WGN towers on Rte. 53.

The enclosed arena, with underground parking, could be home to major Chicago sports clubs now seeking new quarters, but it would also be available for local and amateur teams, its developer Lee Romano told the Herald Wednesday.

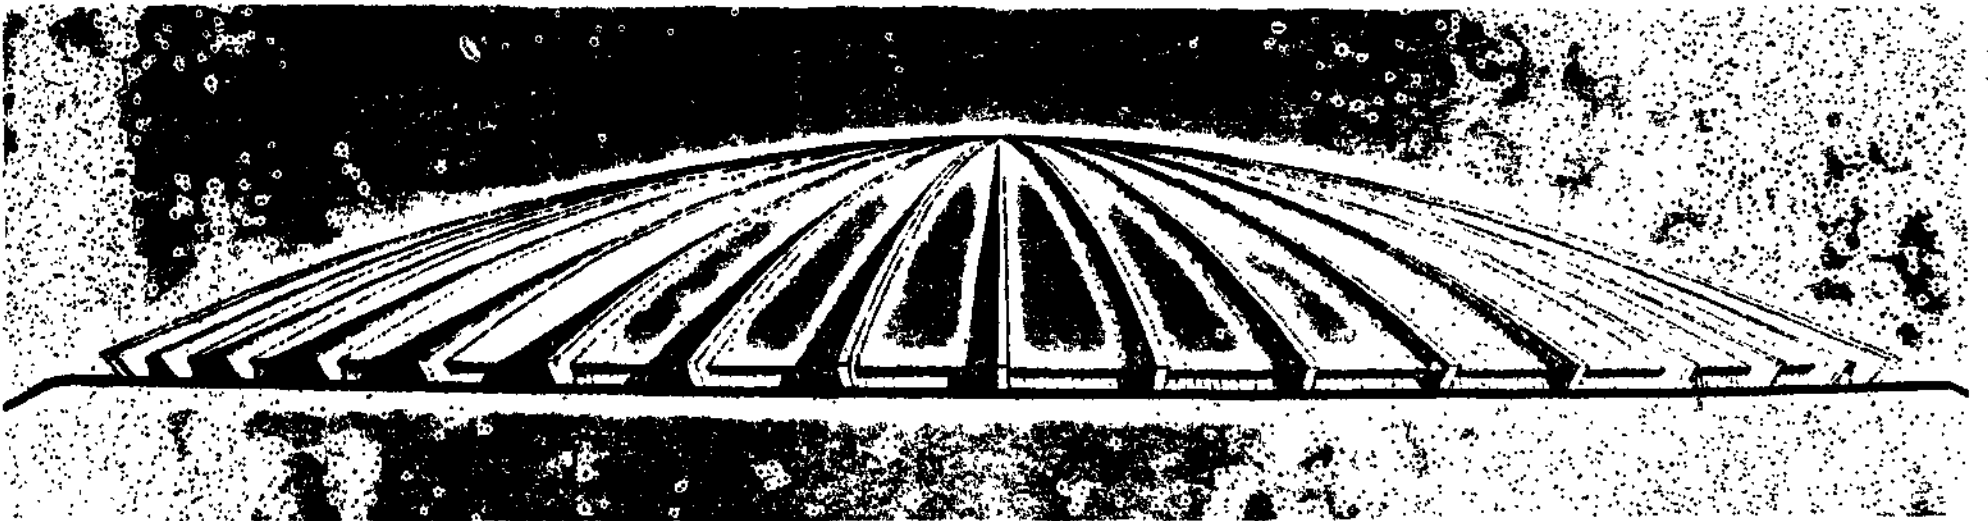

The 97 acres, fronting on Rte. 53 near the Interstate-90 breakoff, are not annexed to Schaumburg now. Romano has options on adjacent parcels that would make the land contiguous to the village. Mayor Robert O. Atcher told the Herald the land could be annexed by referendum.

Romano said he expects to bring the proposal before the Zoning Board of Appeals in the next several weeks.

"I HAVE BEEN approached by major sports groups seeking new locations that could occupy The Sports World," Romano said. He did not specify which teams are interested.

Atcher said a domed stadium is feasible for the Northwest area, especially since several of the major league Chicago teams are looking for new homes. The professional baseball and football leagues are encouraging Chicago teams to find larger quarters that will increase attendance and revenues.

A domed sports stadium was once discussed for Arlington Park, but plans never got off the ground and apparently were scuttled when the race track was purchased by Gulf-Western.

Sports World: Will it be home to the Chicago Cubs, the Chicago Bears or Black Hawks one day?

The Sports World, with a dome that opens and closes, would have twice the seating capacity as the Houston Astro-dome, now the only completed enclosed stadium, which holds 44,500 spectators.

In addition to Sports World, the complex would include "The Adventure," a center with restaurants, lounges, a roller skating and ice skating rinks, caves and other activities, Romano said.

ROMANO, WHO IS THE developer of the Planet Project in Schaumburg, noted for the proposed 113-story building, has other parcels to be developed in Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights.

The developer noted that the sports complex, which would cost upwards of $100 million, would not disturb any community or its residents. It is surrounded on three sides by the Cook County Forest Preserve.

Romano said that Sports World will centrally serve any area of Northwest Cook and North DuPage Counties that already has a population of over one million and will grow to many times that in the next 10 years.

He has not announced a timetable for building the stadium complex yet.

Romano expects to run into trouble from the Cook County Forest Preserve over the site. He has heard rumors that the forest preserve wants to add the 97 acres to its 3,500 acre holdings in the Schaumburg-Elk Grove vicinity.

"THE FOREST PRESERVE has ample land without this 97 acres. I intend to fight with everything I have for this," he said.

The site is now a tree nursery.

Film Premieres About School For Blind

A premiere showing of a new film about Hadley School for the Blind will be shown at the Mount Prospect VFW Hall on Main Street May 28 at 8 p.m.

The showing is being sponsored by the Mount Prospect Lions, who help support the school. Hadley School for the Blind is located in Winnetka.

Boy, 2, In Need of Blood

Blood donors for a 2-year-old boy with hemophilia are being sought by the Lutheran Church of the Holy Spirit, 666 Elk

Grove Blvd., Elk Grove Village.

The church is holding a blood drive for the boy next Tuesday from 5 to 6:30 p.m. A Michael Reese Hospital blood unit will be available on the church grounds to draw the blood, according to Mrs. Jeanne Hoppe from the church.

"We need at least 25 more donors," Mrs. Hoppe said. She explained that the unit officially did not want to come unless there were 75 donors. She said the church only has 50.

She added that donors are asked to make an appointment before Tuesday with Mrs. A. Iene Stotser at 439-4509.

The boy receiving the blood is Jonathan Allan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Allan of Libertyville.

"He needs 300 pints of blood a year to keep alive," Mrs. Hoppe explained.

Theft Count Lodged

A 38-year-old Arlington Heights woman was charged with theft by Mount Prospect police Tuesday, after she was apprehended by a security agent for Carson Pirie Scott and Co. at Randhurst Shopping Center.

Rosemary Kalaway, of 103 W. Emerson Street, was charged with the theft of merchandise valued at about $7. She was released on $1,000 bail and is scheduled to appear in Mount Prospect court May 29.

Pfc. Collins Wounded

Pfc. Thomas R. Collins of Mount Prospect is hospitalized in Phu Bye, Vietnam, where he is recovering from injuries he suffered when a rocket exploded while he was on duty in a combat zone in South Vietnam.

Collins, whose wife, Audrey, lives at 919 Ironwood Drive, is a graduate of Wheeling High School. Collins, who is assigned to the 101st Airborne Division, has been stationed in Vietnam since February, 1970.

He is the son of Mrs. Vernie Collins, of 110 N. Fairview Avenue, Mount Prospect.

Set to Register 2nd Opportunity

Parents of pre-school children in Prospect Heights have a second opportunity next week to register their children for kindergarten classes in School Dist. 23.

Registration was held earlier this month, but some of the district schools reported a lower than usual turn out.

An orientation program will be held in each school for the parents who have already registered and for the parents who missed the first registration.

Supt. Edward Grodsky, school nurse Mrs. Joan Myer and the principal of each school will speak to the parents at the "kindergarten tea." Kindergarten candidates will be given a tour of the school and a chance to see classes in operation.

The teas will be held from 1 to 2 p.m. on May 19 at the Betsy Ross School and on May 20 at John Muir and Eisenhower Schools.

Post Office Building Ahead of Schedule

Work is ahead of schedule on the new post office building being built in Wheeling, and the new facilities may be ready for use sooner than expected, Wheeling Postmaster Edward Swan said Monday.

Swan said outside work is almost completed on the new building on the north side of Dundee Road across from the Wheeling municipal building.

He said he is hopeful the move to the new building could be made in July instead of in August as originally planned.

THE $494,800 building will have five service windows for Wheeling and Buffalo Grove area residents to use instead of the three in the current post office's rented quarters in the Wheeling Shopping Center.

Major additions will also include offices, lunchroom facilities for employees, and larger work area, Swan said.

It's Not Piece for Junkpile

by DAVE PALERMO

It used to be only a hunk of junk.

But today it's a lovely engine block and like most engine blocks, it was somewhat void of any aesthetic value.

This particular engine block gathered mud and other forms of winter filth on the lawn at Holmes Junior High School in Mount Prospect for about a month last January. How it got there nobody knows.

Principal Richard Jenness felt that the engine block was an ugly pain. He was figuring how much it would cost the school to have the 100-pound monstrosity hauled away.

Then a few students came up with the idea to use the auto part for a final art project for a tri-semester course. So three of them, assisted by art instructor Marty Friedrich, went out and lugged it into the school.

THE FIRST THING the class did was clean it up. This part of the project took a couple of months.

"That was quite a job," said Friedrich. "They used toothbrushes, forks, knives and spoons."

"Cleaning it took the longest part of the job," said Kurt Schmitt, who, according to Friedrich, did most of the work.

"You should've seen the tons of paper towels and rags we used. It was full of grease."

After a mammoth cleanup job was completed, Schmitt decided to paint stars and stripes on it to represent the American flag.

"We got the idea from the movie Easy Rider. They had stars and stripes on the motorcycles in the movie," said Schmitt, who said the project was not intended to be an anti-pollution display.

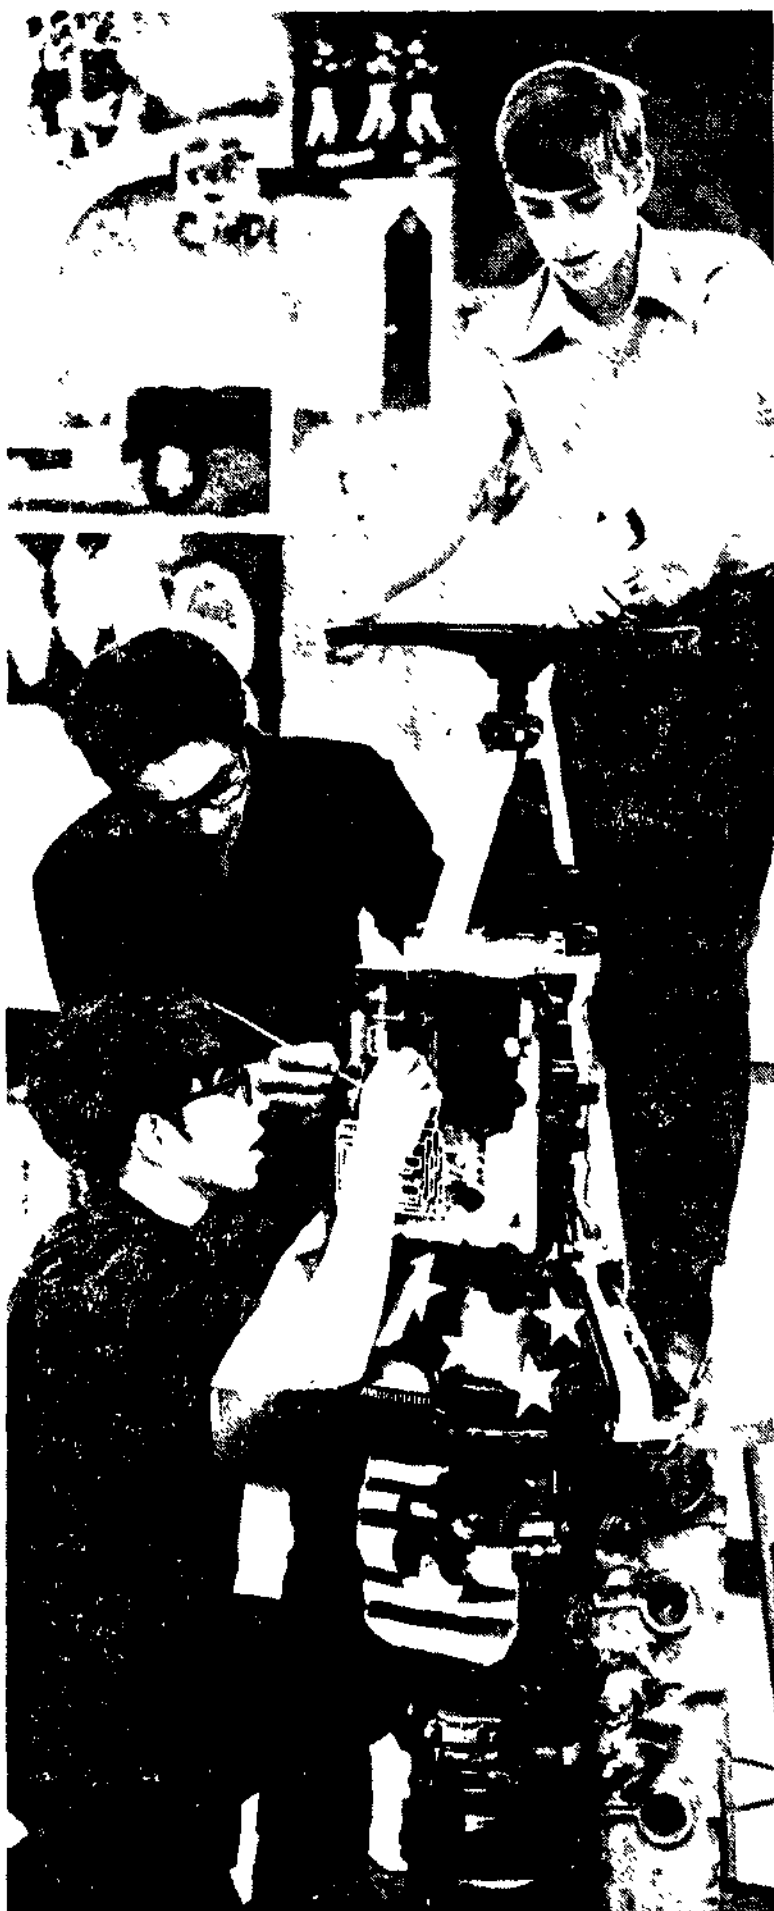

THE NOW lovely engine block is going to be part of a school art display to be held Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m. All that's left for them to do is weld a steering wheel onto the transmission housing.

Altogether, the project has taken almost four months of work during study hall, lunch hours and sometimes after school.

It was lying out there on the school grounds for about a month," said Friedrich. "I think it was left here as part of a prank of some kind."

"It was kind of a twist. It was supposed to be detrimental to leave an engine block at the school, but the kids turned it into a useful project."

Schmitt is planning a career as a veterinarian and not going into art because, he admits, "I'm not much of a drawer."

FOUR MONTHS of hard work turned a discarded engine block left on the lawn at Holmes Junior High School in Mount Prospect into a valuable work of art. Three students who worked on the project are, from top, Kurt Schmitt, Mike Ventura and Jan Marcotte.

No Housing Ruling Yet

The Viatorian Order is not expected to reach a decision on the disposition of their land in Arlington Heights at the order's meeting on June 19.

The order also intends to set up a special Viatorian committee to explore the request that their land be used for low and moderate income housing.

More than 200 members of the newly formed Arlington Estates Homeowners Association learned these facts from Tom Hanlon, head of their legal committee last night. Hanlon related a discussion he had recently with the Rev. Patrick Cahill, assistant Viatorian provincial.

Hanlon told the large crowd at the American Legion Hall that Rev. Cahill felt no decision would be reached by the target date of June 19. He added that Rev. Cahill and the Viatorians were deeply concerned with the moral commitment they had to themselves, to the neighborhood, to the community and to the public at large.

"I feel it is important that you know that these questions are being studied by men who have no ax to grind," Hanlon said.

On April 29, the resident's group had their first meeting to organize themselves against any rezoning of the land surrounding St. Viator High School at Dryden and Euclid.

Last night, Howard Kagay, who has been the group's spokesman said, "Our main endeavor is to unify our effort to oppose any change that will be detrimental to our area."

"We want to prevent any rezoning of the Viatorian property for apartments or townhouses."

Hanlon also explained that the Viatorians want to gather the opinions of people in the community about any proposed housing development on their land.

Hanlon, who lives in the area, added, "I do not oppose the concept of low income housing."

"But I don't believe it would be proper zoning to construct a multiple family project on the Viatorian property."

"Years ago, a basic principle was set by the plan commission and approved by the village board. That principle states that multiple family zoning should be used as a buffer between single family homes and commercial or industrial zoning."

Hanlon pointed out that even if the Viatorians did allow the use of the land for a housing project, the developer would have to comply with the village building department, the plan commission recommendations and the village board.

After Hanlon spoke, the homeowners elected officers to serve until May 13, 1971.

Elect president of the association is Howard Kagay, 824 N. Drury Lane. Vice President is Phil Nelson, 1021 N. Wilshire, treasurer is Chuck Veselitis, 1010 N. Drury Lane and secretary is Joan Spiel, 1002 N. Drury Lane.

The association also elected four street directors for the coming year: George Fischer on Gibbons Street, Muriel Currier on Stratford Street, Ray Piotowski on Wilshire Street and Al Gates on Drury Lane.

Nixon 'Right' On Cambodia: Crane

by ED MURNANE

U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-13th, a former history professor at two Midwestern universities, accused antiwar demonstrators of following their emotions, rather than an understanding of history, in opposing President Nixon's decision to use American troops in Cambodia.

Crane, who taught history at Bradley and Indiana universities before running for Congress last year, told the Northwestern Bar Association last night that the decision to enter Cambodia "is very similar to a decision made by the United States in World War II to bomb oil fields used by the Germans, thereby bringing a faster end to the war."

He defended President Nixon's decision as a "wise one" and said he has been telling college students "that the decision was made to make it possible for you not to have to fight in Southeast Asia."

CRANE SAID HIS Washington office has "been deluged by a vast number of students" and that he has initiated a series of daily seminars to discuss the Cambodia situation with the students.

"Many of them are telling me that they plan to work within the system and retire me from Congress in November," Crane said.

"I think that shows there might be a silver lining to the protest we are witnessing," he said. "If it causes people to become involved in the normal ways and in the normal system, rather than burning down libraries and ROTC buildings, then there may be some good to it."

But Crane said he also has asked the students to respect his position even if they don't agree with it.

"I'VE TRIED TO TELL them that there's no reason to doubt the integrity of President Nixon and his decision to enter Cambodia," Crane said. "He has led us in a steady withdrawal from Vietnam, with 115,000 troops already home and a pledge that 150,000 more would be withdrawn by the end of the year."

Crane said the President may have been wrong in his decision, "but the students better hope and pray that he's right, because his objective is to end the war quicker and prevent young people from going over there."

He said young people do not fully understand the involvement of the Soviet Union in Southeast Asia or in other areas of the world and he quoted extensive figures and testimony of Defense Sec. Melvin Laird showing a massive Russian arms buildup has declined the United States military might has declined.

"Looking at the momentum of the Soviet Union in the arms race and then at our own decrease, we have to feel that a possible consequence is that the Soviet Union will call our bluff if there is a situation of direct confrontation," Crane said.

"We'd like to think that we're entering into an era of negotiations and I hope the strategic arms limitations talks pay off," he said. "But if they don't, and we don't do anything to improve our own situation, we could be in very big trouble by the middle of this decade."

CRANE DREW A MAP on the back of an envelope to show strategic areas of Cambodia and Vietnam and said the decision to enter Cambodia was calculated to achieve three objectives: To reduce American casualties, to shorten the war and to speed up President Nixon's Vietnamization program.

"Our objective is not to boast of a massive kill-factor," he said. "Instead, we want to go in, destroy the capacity of the enemy to use Cambodia as a staging area for Vietnam attacks, and then get out."

"And we wanted to do it now, before the monsoon season sets in," he said. "There is no reason to doubt that our troops will be out of Cambodia by July 1, the date the President has estimated."

Phoenix Girl Junior Miss

Karen Stenwall of Phoenix, Ariz., was named America's Junior miss for 1970 last night in the pageant's finals held in Mobile, Ala.

With the title goes a $10,000 scholarship.

First runner up was Carol Buckland of Farmington, Conn. who received a $6,000 scholarship. Lara Boyette of Jackson, Miss., second runner-up, won a $4,000 scholarship.

Taking part in the competition that honors high school senior girls was Marilyn Raedel, recently of Prospect Heights and now of Barrington, a senior at Wheeling High School.

Pollution Project Termed Success

by GERRY DeZONNA

There's a lot of talk about pollution these days, but the students at Central Junior High School in Mount Prospect did more than just talk about pollution.

The student council, in an effort to encourage more interest in environmental problems, sponsored a contest for the best essay, poster and project on pollution. The three winners, one in each category, were awarded $25 U.S. savings bonds.

"And I think the contest turned out well. It was a slightly different approach to the problem, and it created quite a bit of student interest in environmental problems," Bruce Metge, president of student council, explained.

About 40 students participated in the contest, which ended April 22, and the winners were announced and awarded savings bonds at a student assembly.

JOHN BUDRIS won first place in the mitted the winning essay. Both are students in the eighth grade. Melodie Van Dyke, a seventh-grade student, earned first place honors in the project competition.

Metge said the student council voted to sponsor the contest and award cash prizes as its own contribution to "bringing environmental problems to the attention of students and parents. We didn't plan the contest in conjunction with Earth Day, but it just happened that way. Both happened in April."

"We purchased the savings bonds with money saved by student council, and we thought the students would appreciate money rather than a different award, especially since the student council treasury is the students' money," he added.

METGE SAID THE student council earned the money for the contest by sponsoring dances and other school projects and competition and Steve Gibson submitted the winning poster.

"And we still have some money left in the treasury, even after buying the bonds," he noted.

Although the cash prizes might have been the incentive to enter the contest, none of the three winners has spent his award yet. "I haven't seen my savings bond since the day I brought it home," Gibson said.

Mike Jedel, the faculty sponsor for student council, said the entries were very good and the judges, teachers at Central School, had a difficult time in choosing the winners. "The students put a lot of thought into these projects, and they all raised interesting points and questions about environmental problems," he said.

Budris, who submitted the winning poster on "Pollution Perils," used black charcoal and white paper to get his point across in the contest. A tree, fish, bird and human skull were the only images on the poster with the caption, "avoid the dead end," written at the bottom of the poster.

MELODIE SUBMITTED a three-dimensional project on "Pollution: The Past, Present and Future." The city Melodie used to illustrate her point was Chicago. "The past (a wildlife scene) shows what it was like before man intruded, cluttered up Chicago and destroyed the wildlife and plants," Melodie explained.

The present was an urban scene in which all the buildings were black and corroded, and the future was an empty scene. A black poster, representing nothing, and a lone billboard with the words, "The Future: Or will it be too late?"

Each of the three students expressed the eventual doom of mankind unless something is done now to stop pollution.

Gibson, who submitted the winning essay, seemed to sum up the situation when he wrote: "In the year 2070 A.D., one hundred years from now, a blazing sun beats down upon an endless desert."

"As far as the eye can see, there is nothing but sun-bleached sand, no sign of life or anything else. The result of an atomic bomb? No. It happened because man didn't care what he put into his lakes and rivers."

"... SUCH A HORRIBLE end will happen if you sit at home and just quietly watch the skies become blacker and your water turn green... Pollution is so bad now the children of today may well be the parents of the last generation on earth," Gibson wrote.

"If you do not care about your fellow man, then be selfish. Care about yourself. Stop pollution while you can. You may never have another chance."

GEARING UP — Mount Prospect Lions Jerry Schutt, Walt Dryjanski and Clayton Meyer are already making preparations for the annual village fair to be held in Mount Prospect July 4. A new feature of the fair

this year, sponsored by the Lions, will be a public auction. Some of the items that will go on the auction block are shown here. Lions are now asking merchants and residents for antique donations for the auction.

Mint Is Nature's Insect Repellent

More than 100 suburban residents "attuned their ears to nature" and glued their eyes to the movie screen Tuesday night.

It was PEP's (Pollution and Environmental Problems) Eco-Catastrophe Film Festival which ironically was hit by a weather "catastrophe" as the fog rolled in and sirens sounded outside Forest View High School's Little Theater in Arlington Heights.

In the beginning the audience heard what individuals can do to fight pollution by using low phosphate detergents, eliminating dangerous pesticides from household use and gardening the organic way.

"There are several small plants which can be used in place of insecticides," explained Mrs. R. C. Good, PEP program chairman.

"For example, mint can be planted near cabbage or garlic plants near rose bushes to assist in bug control," she said.

MRS. GOOD ALSO explained how phosphates in detergents should stay below 25 units per washload. Enzyme pre-soaks are especially high ranging from 20 to 35 units of phosphate, she said.

A list of phosphate content of detergents prepared by Northwestern Students was distributed to the group. Only 12 detergent products of 41 are above the hazardous phosphate level.

When the lights dimmed, it was time for visual proof of what pollution is doing to the environment.

An award-winner, "Urbanissimo," showed nature's destruction from city planning and aimless construction.

"Nature's Half Acre," the longer movie, dwelled on the struggle for survival among the non-human population and the children in the audience with quiet screams showed they were getting the point of the film as a duckling fled from the overbearing shovel of a bulldozer.

CHARLES YAGER, author and conservationist from Prospect Heights put his thoughts into poetry at Tuesday night's film festival.

"What is man? It's the only thing on earth which kills its own kind."

"What you kill or destroy is gone beyond your ever bringing it back."

"You are destroying yourself."

Then, Gunnar Peterson, executive director of the Open Lands Project in Chicago, warned, "This is only the beginning."

Student protests and violence will increase and they'll be demonstrating against pollution, according to Peterson.

PEP was commended by several members of the audience for the "stimulating and informative" session.

Current projects of the suburban anti-pollution group including a beautification project in Palatine, an environmental hot-line, an aluminum drive and testifying at public hearings against pollution were listed and more volunteers recruited.

'Pajama Game' This Weekend

"Pajama Game" will come to Wheeling High School this weekend and next weekend. The WHS student production of the Broadway musical comedy will be presented at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and again May 22 and 23 in the Little Theater.

The show concerns the antics that result when employees in a pajama factory go on strike for wage increases. Marilyn Raedel of Prospect Heights, Illinois' Junior Miss, did the choreography for the show.

ERIC LIDH, FACULTY director of the play, has promised that the show "won't be conventional, but will provide a lot of fun and spontaneity."

A special runway has been constructed down the middle of the theater, and many of the scenes will be played on it, rather than on the stage.

"This will enable the cast to talk to the audience and get them involved in what's going on," he explained. "I've worked with many high school casts, but I can honestly say that this is the best one I've ever directed," he added.

The show's script and music have been specially arranged for the WHS production. Tickets for the play will be on sale at the door the evenings of the performances.

A Fire Call Too Late?

by JUDY BRANDES

"My first thought was 'They didn't call us soon enough.'"

The speaker was Bruce Winter, a full-time fireman in the Rolling Meadows fire department.

He and 14 other full-time and volunteers who led the battle to stop the fire in a Three Fountains apartment building 10 days ago were discussing what happened from the moment they got the call to their return to the fire station several hours later.

"When we pulled out of the station on Meadow Drive, I could see the smoke already and knew we were in trouble," Charlie Sellards, the first officer to arrive at the fire said. Sellards radioed Arlington Heights for mutual assistance while en route to Three Fountains.

"Flames were already coming out the patio doors and that first floor apartment was burned out when we got there," Sellards said.

HE AND THE MEN on the first engine to arrive went after the apartment where the fire began. "We thought we had it until we went around the south end and saw it going up the stairwell. We couldn't get in. The heat was too much."

On the way into Three Fountains, the firemen's hearts were pumping madly, they agree. "I had Thumper with me all the way," Bill Schmidt, engineer on the first engine to arrive, said.

The men knew 5201 Carriage Way Drive was a building built before the life safety code was adopted by the city. They were expecting the fire to be bad, but didn't realize until later what type of fire it was.

"It was a hidden fire," Fire Chief Thomas Fogarty explained. Fogarty and four firemen were attending class at Harper Junior College when they heard about Three Fountains. "No matter what wall we took off, we always found fire. Once the fire got into the hallway, I knew it would move to other areas."

BEFORE FOGARTY arrived, Sellards was the officer in charge. "You call for all this equipment and it comes in. They're asking where you want them to go. I had to make a lot of decisions in a few seconds."

The first three engines to arrive, Rolling Meadows two and the aerial ladder from Arlington Heights, didn't get slowed down with traffic. The others, including the "fount prospect snorkel, had trouble getting through the traffic which materialized as more people came to watch the fire.

Engineer Schmidt was responsible for laying the lines and hooking up to the fire hydrant. "I went past the first hydrant because people were standing there and I didn't see it," Schmidt said.

With a large fire, the department hooks up "hard sections" of hose to get enough water. "I was afraid we weren't going to get the hard section on the hydrant."

SCHMIDT AND FIREMAN Jack Fahn found the hydrant caps too low to the ground and when they finally got the top cap off, they had to clean the mud off before the hoses could be attached.

People trapped on the balconies were helped off by Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights men who arrived early on the scene.

"We got the police chief and two others off the back balcony and then went on up to the roof," Assistant Fire Chief Don Marshall, a volunteer, said. From the front, fire watchers couldn't see the men on the roof, who were working in the trough on the "M-shaped" roof.

"We stayed up there knocking holes in the roof to ventilate the fire until the tar started to bubble and the chief ordered us off," Marshall continued.

Red hot railings, intense black smoke and searing heat prevented teams of men from penetrating into the hallways.

Kathy Koegel Is Guest of Bell

Kathy Koegel, 1002 Pendleton, Mount Prospect, was a guest recently of Illinois Bell Telephone Co. At the 12th annual Junior Achievement Executive Conference in Chicago.

A junior achievement executive of Centern Enterprises in Des Plaines, sponsored by Illinois Bell, Miss Koegel was named Chicago metropolitan Achiever of the Year.

"We crawled in on our bellies from the balcony on the second floor with fire above and around us," Ed Retzer, a volunteer, explained. "It's a scary feeling when you turn to crawl back out in a dark room and run into a wall every way you turn."

RESCUE AND SEARCH teams couldn't get into the building.

"We couldn't get in the smoke was so black and thick," Sellards said.

The places the fire burned into were scattered. "You have to remember, a fireman is only in one place. We couldn't see all the places the fire was breaking out," Bruce Winter said.

"The men got mad at me when I ordered them out of the building," Chief Fogarty chuckled. "They couldn't see what was going on, of course, but I could see it was dangerous."

No fireman can recall what he did when. "The only reason I knew it was 2:30 in the morning was that I had scratched myself when I climbed into the attic and realized later it hurt. The watch was on my arm when I looked at the scratch," Marshall said.

"IT WAS A TERRIFIC stop on the fire," Fogarty said. "Fire chiefs from other areas complimented us on how much we were able to save."

Dick Blane, who singed his ears working on the second and third floors, told how the only empty apartment in the building wasn't damaged too much. "If those tenants had only used common sense in closing doors, the fire probably wouldn't have gone as far as it did. When we went back the next day, there were some places, like closets, which had smoke damage, but no water and things weren't burned. We pulled three mink coats unharmed out of one closet."

Chief Fogarty attributes the spread of the fire to the fact that the door to the apartment where it started was left open.

"We didn't realize how fast it was going and didn't know it had gotten to the other end when we arrived," Winter said. "When I saw those flames, though, I knew that fire had a good start before we got there. My first thought was 'They didn't call us soon enough.'"

Building Dedication Set

The Mount Prospect Public Works Building, 11 S. Pine St., will be dedicated to the memory of Howard Wilson by Mayor Robert Teichert May 17 at 2 p.m.

Wilson served as a village trustee from 1933 to the time of his death in 1959. A bronze plaque, inscribed in his memory, will be placed on the front of the building adjacent to the main entrance.

Mayor Teichert said no formal dedication of the building has been held, although it was completed in 1965 and an open house was held at the time of its completion. "The formal dedication has not occurred until this time, pending the creation of a suitable plaque," he explained.

"I think the dedication is just as meaningful regardless of when it's held, and I hope everyone will attend and honor Mrs. Howard Wilson in the dedication," Teichert said.

All members of the administration and residents of Mount Prospect are invited to attend and participate in the ceremony. The Public Works Building will be open for inspection, and coffee will be served following the ceremony.

Dist. 59 Musical Festival Friday

The School Dist. 59 band and orchestra will present its first musical festival at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Grove Junior High School, 777 Elk Grove Blvd., Elk Grove Village.

Approximately 50 band and orchestra members from each of the four junior high schools in the district have been selected to perform in the program.

The performance will be conducted by Dr. H. E. Nutt, president of Vandercook College of Music, Chicago.

Tickets are $1 for adults. Students through junior high school age will be admitted free.

The schools involved in addition to Grove are Dempster and Holmes junior high schools in Mount Prospect, and Lively Junior High School in Elk Grove Village.

Joint Vacation Church School To Be Offered

A joint vacation church-school will be offered this summer by St. Joseph the Worker Catholic Church in Wheeling, and the Lutheran Church of the Good Shepherd in Prospect Heights.

The church school will be held July 27 through Aug. 7 in St. Joseph Church.

Children from preschool through junior high school age from both congregations may participate.

SPANISH-SPEAKING children from the area have also been invited to participate. The two churches are working with the Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows and NORWESCO to enroll these children.

These children will attend the church school in the morning and then participate in a day camp program in the afternoon. The day camp program is being sponsored by the youth in the two congregations.

Registration information may be obtained from either St. Joseph or Good Shepherd Church.

Burroughs Elected Research Unit Chief

A Mount Prospect resident, James E. Burroughs, has been elected president of the Borg-Warner Chapter of the Research Society of America (RESA).

Burroughs, who lives with his wife Dorothy and four daughters at 707 N. Prospect Manor Ave., has been active in the RESA for a number of years and served in all official positions.

A resident of Mount Prospect since 1959, Burroughs was formerly the secretary of the Drainage and Clean Streams Commission and in his free time serves as scientific adviser to the Camp Fire Girls of Mount Prospect.

It used to be only a hunk of junk. But today it's a lovely engine block and like most engine blocks, it was somewhat void of any aesthetic value.

This particular engine block gathered mud and other forms of winter filth on the lawn at Holmes Junior High School in Mount Prospect for about a month last January. Now it got there nobody knows.

Principal Richard Jenness felt that the engine block was an ugly pain. He was figuring how much it would cost the school to have the 400-pound monstrosity hauled away.

Then a few students came up with the idea to use the auto part for a final art project for a tri-semester course. So three of them, assisted by art instructor Marty Fredrich, went out and lugged it into the school.

THE FIRST THING the class did was clean it up. This part of the project took a couple of months.

"That was quite a job," said Fredrich. "They used toothbrushes, forks, knives and spoons."

"Cleaning it took the longest part of the job," said Kurt Schmitt, who, according to Fredrich, did most of the work.

"You should've seen the tons of paper towels and rags we used. It was full of grease."

After a mammoth cleanup job was completed, Schmitt decided to paint stars and stripes on it to represent the American flag.

"We got the idea from the movie Easy Rider. They had stars and stripes on the motorcycles in the movie," said Schmitt, who said the project was not intended to be an anti-pollution display.

THE NOW lovely engine block is going to be part of a school art display to be held Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m. All that's left for them to do is weld a steering wheel onto the transmission housing.

Altogether, the project has taken almost four months of work during study hall, lunch hours and sometimes after school.

"It was laying out there on the school grounds for about a month," said Fredrich. "I think it was left here as part of a prank of some kind."

"It was kind of a twist. It was supposed to be detrimental to leave an engine block at the school, but the kids turned it into a useful project."

Schmitt is planning a career as a veterinarian and not going into art because, he admits, "I'm not much of a drawer."

FOUR MONTHS of hard work turned a discarded engine block left on the lawn at Holmes Junior High School in Mount Prospect into a valuable work of art. Three students who worked on the project are, from top, Kurt Schmitt, Mike Ventura and Jon Marcotte.

No Housing Ruling Yet

The Viatorian Order is not expected to reach a decision on the disposition of their land in Arlington Heights at the order's meeting on June 19.

The order also intends to set up a special Viatorian committee to explore the request that their land be used for low and moderate income housing.

More than 200 members of the newly formed Arlington Estates Homeowners Association learned these facts from Tom Hanlon, head of their legal committee last night. Hanlon related a discussion he had recently with the Rev. Patrick Cahill, assistant Viatorian provincial.

Hanlon told the large crowd at the American Legion Hall that Rev. Cahill felt no decision would be reached by the target date of June 19. He added that Rev. Cahill and the Viatorians were deeply concerned with the moral commitment they had to themselves, to the neighborhood, to the community and to the public at large.

"I feel it is important that you know that these questions are being studied by men who have no ax to grind," Hanlon said.

On April 29, the resident's group had their first meeting to organize themselves against any rezoning of the land surrounding St. Viator High School at Dryden and Euclid.

Last night, Howard Kagay, who has been the group's spokesman said, "Our main endeavor is to unify our effort to oppose any change that will be detrimental to our area."

"We want to prevent any rezoning of the Viatorian property for apartments or townhouses."

Hanlon also explained that the Viatorians want to gather the opinions of people in the community about any proposed housing development on their land.

Hanlon, who lives in the area, added, "I do not oppose the concept of low income housing."

"But I don't believe it would be proper zoning to construct a multiple family project on the Viatorian property."

"Years ago, a basic principle was set by the plan commission and approved by the village board. That principle states that multiple family zoning should be used as a buffer between single family homes and commercial or industrial zoning."

Hanlon pointed out that even if the Viatorians did allow the use of the land for a housing project, the developer would have to comply with the village building department, the plan commission recommendations and the village board.

After Hanlon spoke, the homeowners elected officers to serve until May 13, 1971.

Elected president of the association is Howard Kagay, 824 N. Drury Lane. Vice President is Phil Nelson, 1021 N. Wilshire, treasurer is Chuck Veselitis, 1010 N. Drury Lane and secretary is Joan Spiel, 1002 N. Drury Lane.

The association also elected four street directors for the coming year: George Fischer on Gibbons Street, Muriel Currier on Stratford Street, Ray Platowski on Wilshire Street and Al Gates on Drury Lane.

Nixon 'Right' On Cambodia: Crane

by ED MURNANE

U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-13th, a former history professor at two Midwestern universities, accused antiwar demonstrators of following their emotions, rather than an understanding of history, in opposing President Nixon's decision to use American troops in Cambodia.

Crane, who taught history at Bradley and Indiana universities before running for Congress last year, told the Northwest Suburban Bar Association last night that the decision to enter Cambodia "is very similar to a decision made by the United States in World War II to bomb oil fields used by the Germans, thereby bringing a faster end to the war."

He defended President Nixon's decision as a "wise one" and said he has been telling college students "that the decision was made to make it possible for you not to have to fight in Southeast Asia."

CRANE SAID HIS Washington office has "been deluged by a vast number of students" and that he has initiated a series of daily seminars to discuss the Cambodia situation with the students.

"Many of them are telling me that they plan to work within the system and retire me from Congress in November," Crane said.

"I think that shows there might be a silver lining to the protest we are witnessing," he said. "If it causes people to become involved in the normal ways and in the normal system, rather than burning down libraries and ROTC buildings, then there may be some good to it."

But Crane said he also has asked the students to respect his position even if they don't agree with it.

"I'VE TRIED TO TELL them that there's no reason to doubt the integrity of President Nixon and his decision to enter Cambodia," Crane said. "He has led us in a steady withdrawal from Vietnam, with 115,000 troops already home and a pledge that 150,000 more would be withdrawn by the end of the year."

Crane said the President may have been wrong in his decision, "but the students better hope and pray that he's right, because his objective is to end the war quicker and prevent young people from going over there."

He said young people do not fully understand the involvement of the Soviet Union in Southeast Asia or in other areas of the world and he quoted extensive figures and testimony of Defense Sec. Melvin Laird showing a massive Russian arms buildup while the United States military might has declined.

"Looking at the momentum of the Soviet Union in the arms race and then at our own decrease, we have to feel that a possible consequence is that the Soviet Union will call our bluff if there is a situation of direct confrontation," Crane said.

"We'd like to think that we're entering into an era of negotiations and I hope the strategic arms limitations talks pay off," he said. "But if they don't, and we don't do anything to improve our own situation, we could be in very big trouble by the middle of this decade."

CRANE DREW A MAP on the back of an envelope to show strategic areas of Cambodia and Vietnam and said the decision to enter Cambodia was calculated to achieve three objectives: To reduce American casualties, to shorten the war and to speed up President Nixon's Vietnamization program.

"Our objective is not to boast of a massive kill-factor," he said. "Instead, we want to go in, destroy the capacity of the enemy to use Cambodia as a staging area for Vietnam attacks, and then get out."

"And we wanted to do it now, before the monsoon season sets in," he said. "There is no reason to doubt that our troops will be out of Cambodia by July 1, the date the President has estimated."

Phoenix Girl Junior Miss

Karen Stenwall of Phoenix, Ariz. was named America's Junior Miss for 1970 last night in the pageant's finals held in Mobile, Ala.

With the title goes a $10,000 scholarship.

First runner up was Carol Buckland of Farmington, Conn. who received a $6,000 scholarship. Lara Boyette of Jackson, Miss., second runner-up, won a $4,000 scholarship.

Taking part in the competition that honors high school senior girls was Marilyn Raedel, recently of Prospect Heights and now of Barrington, a senior at Wheeling High School.

across in the contest. A tree, fish, bird and human skull were the only images on the poster with the caption, "avoid the dead end," written at the bottom of the poster.

MELODIE SUBMITTED a three-dimensional project on "Pollution: The Past, Present and Future." The city Melodie used to illustrate her point was Chicago. "The past (a wildlife scene) shows what it was like before man intruded, cluttered up Chicago and destroyed the wildlife and plants," Melodie explained.

The present was an urban scene in which all the buildings were black and corroded, and the future was an empty scene. A black poster, representing nothing, and a lone billboard with the words, "The Future: Or will it be too late?"

Each of the three students expressed the eventual doom of mankind unless something is done now to stop pollution.

Gibson, who submitted the winning essay, seemed to sum up the situation when he wrote: "In the year 2070 A.D., one hundred years from now, a blazing sun beats down upon an endless desert."

"As far as the eye can see, there is nothing but sun-bleached sand, no sign of life or anything else. The result of an atomic bomb? No. It happened because man didn't care what he put into his lakes and rivers."

"... SUCH A HORRIBLE end will happen if you sit at home and just quietly watch the skies become blacker and your water turn green... Pollution is so bad now the children of today may well be the parents of the last generation on earth," Gibson wrote.

"If you do not care about your fellow man, then be selfish. Care about yourself. Stop pollution while you can. You may never have another chance."

Pollution Project Termed Success

by GERRY DeZONNA

There's a lot of talk about pollution these days, but the students at Central Junior High School in Mount Prospect did more than just talk about pollution.

The student council, in an effort to encourage more interest in environmental problems, sponsored a contest for the best essay, poster and project on pollution. The three winners, one in each category, were awarded $25 U.S. savings bonds.

"And I think the contest turned out well. It was a slightly different approach to the problem, and it created quite a bit of student interest in environmental problems," Bruce Metge, president of student council, explained.

About 40 students participated in the contest, which ended April 22, and the winners were announced and awarded savings bonds at a student assembly.

JOHN BUDRIS won first place in the mitted the winning essay. Both are students in the eighth grade. Melodie Van Dyke, a seventh-grade student, earned first place honors in the project competition.

Metge said the student council voted to sponsor the contest and award cash prizes as its own contribution to "bringing environmental problems to the attention of students and parents. We didn't plan the contest in conjunction with Earth Day, but it just happened that way. Both happened in April."

"We purchased the savings bonds with money saved by student council, and we thought the students would appreciate money rather than a different award, especially since the student council treasury is the students' money," he added.

METGE SAID THE student council earned the money for the contest by sponsoring dances and other school projects and competition and Steve Gibson subjects. "And we still have some money left in the treasury, even after buying the bonds," he noted.

Although the cash prizes might have been the incentive to enter the contest, none of the three winners has spent his award yet. "I haven't seen my savings bond since the day I brought it home," Gibson said.

Mike Jetel, the faculty sponsor for student council, said the entries were very good and the judges, teachers at Central School, had a difficult time in choosing the winners. "The students put a lot of thought into these projects, and they all raised interesting points and questions about environmental problems," he said.

Budris, who submitted the winning poster on "Pollution Perils," used black charcoal and white paper to get his point

GEARING UP — Mount Prospect Lions Jerry Schutt, Walt Dryjanski and Clayton Meyer are already making preparations for the annual village fair to be held in Mount Prospect July 4. A new feature of the fair

this year, sponsored by the Lions, will be a public auction. Some of the items that will go on the auction block are shown here. Lions are now asking merchants and residents for antique donations for the auction.

Mint Is Nature's Insect Repellent

More than 100 suburban residents "attuned their ears to nature" and glued their eyes to the movie screen Tuesday night.

It was PEP's (Pollution and Environmental Problems) Eco-Catastrophe Film Festival which ironically was hit by a weather "catastrophe" as the fog rolled in and sirens sounded outside Forest View High School's Little Theater in Arlington Heights.

In the beginning the audience heard what individuals can do to fight pollution by using low phosphate detergents, eliminating dangerous pesticides from household use and gardening the organic way.

"There are several small plants which can be used in place of insecticides," explained Mrs. R. C. Good, PEP program chairman.

"For example, mint can be planted near cabbage or garlic plants near rose bushes to assist in bug control," she said.

MRS. GOOD ALSO explained how phosphates in detergents should stay below 25 units per washload. Enzyme presoaks are especially high ranging from 30 to 55 units of phosphate, she said.

A list of phosphate content of detergents prepared by Northwestern Students for a Better Environment was distributed to the group. Only 12 detergent products of 43 are above the hazardous phosphate level.

When the lights dimmed, it was time for visual proof of what pollution is doing to the environment.

An award-winner, "Urbanissimo," showed nature's destruction from city planning and aimless construction.

"Nature's Half Acre," the longer movie, dwelled on the struggle for survival among the non-human population and the children in the audience with quiet screams showed they were getting the point of the film as a duckling fled from the overbearing shovel of a bulldozer.

CHARLES YAGER, author and conservationist from Prospect Heights put his thoughts into poetry at Tuesday night's film festival.

"What is man? It's the only thing on earth which kills its own kind."

"What you kill or destroy is gone beyond your ever bringing it back."

"You are destroying yourself."

Then, Gunnar Peterson, executive director of the Open Lands Project in Chicago, warned, "This is only the beginning."

Student protests and violence will increase and they'll be demonstrating against pollution, according to Peterson.

PEP was commended by several members of the audience for the "stimulating and informative" session.

Current projects of the suburban anti-pollution group including a beautification project in Palatine, an environmental hot-line, an aluminum drive and testifying at public hearings against pollution were listed and more volunteers recruited.

fun and spontaneity."

A special runway has been constructed down the middle of the theater, and many of the scenes will be played on it, rather than on the stage.

"This will enable the cast to talk to the audience and get them involved in what's going on," he explained. "I've worked with many high school casts, but I can honestly say that this is the best one I've ever directed," he added.

The show's script and music have been specially arranged for the WHS production. Tickets for the play will be on sale at the door the evenings of the performances.

'Pajama Game' This Weekend

"Pajama Game" will come to Wheeling High School this weekend and next weekend. The WHS student production of the Broadway musical comedy will be presented at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and again May 22 and 23 in the Little Theater.

The show concerns the antics that result when employees in a pajama factory go on strike for wage increases. Marilyn Raedel of Prospect Heights, Illinois' Junior Miss, did the choreography for the show.

ERIC LIDM, FACULTY director of the play, has promised that the show "won't be conventional, but will provide a lot of

by JUDY BRANDES

"My first thought was 'They didn't call us soon enough.'"

The speaker was Bruce Winter, a full-time fireman in the Rolling Meadows fire department.

He and 14 other full-time and volunteers who led the battle to stop the fire in a Three Fountains apartment building 10 days ago were discussing what happened from the moment they got the call to their return to the fire station several hours later.

"When we pulled out of the station on Meadow Drive, I could see the smoke already and knew we were in trouble," Charlie Sellards, the first officer to arrive at the fire said. Sellards radioed Arlington Heights for mutual assistance while en route to Three Fountains.

"Flames were already coming out the patio doors and that first floor apartment was burned out when we got there," Sellards said.

HE AND THE MEN on the first engine to arrive went after the apartment where the fire began. "We thought we had it out until we went around the south end and saw it going up the stairwell. We couldn't get in. The heat was too much."

On the way into Three Fountains, the firemen's hearts were pumping madly, they agree. "I had Thumper with me all the way," Bill Schmidt, engineer on the first engine to arrive, said.

The men knew 5201 Carriage Way Drive was a building built before the life safety code was adopted by the city. They were expecting the fire to be bad, but didn't realize until later what type of fire it was.

"It was a hidden fire," Fire Chief Thomas Fogerty explained. Fogerty and four firemen were attending class at Harper Junior College when they heard about Three Fountains. "No matter what wall we took off, we always found fire. Once the fire got into the hallway, I knew it would move to other areas."

BEFORE FOGERTY arrived, Sellards was the officer in charge. "You call for all this equipment and it comes in. They're asking where you want them to go. I had to make a lot of decisions in a few seconds."

The first three engines to arrive, Rolling Meadows two and the aerial ladder from Arlington Heights, didn't get slowed down with traffic. The others, including the "out Prospect snorkel, had trouble getting through the traffic which materialized as more people came to watch the fire.

Engineer Schmidt was responsible for laying the lines and hooking up to the fire hydrant. "I went past the first hydrant because people were standing there and I didn't see it," Schmidt said.

With a large fire, the department hooks up "hard sections" of hose to get enough water. "I was afraid we weren't going to get the hard section on the hydrant."

SCHMIDT AND FIREMAN Jack Fahn found the hydrant caps too low to the ground and when they finally got the top cap off, they had to clean the mud off before the hoses could be attached.

People trapped on the balconies were helped off by Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights men who arrived early on the scene.

"We got the police chief and two others off the back balcony and then went on up to the roof," Assistant Fire Chief Don Marshall, a volunteer, said. From the front, fire watchers couldn't see the men on the roof, who were working in the trough on the "M-shaped" roof.

"We stayed up there knocking holes in the roof to ventilate the fire until the tar started to bubble and the chief ordered us off," Marshall continued.

Red hot railings, intense black smoke and searing heat prevented teams of men from penetrating into the hallways.

Kathy Koegel Is Guest of Bell

Kathy Koegel, 1002 Pendleton, Mount Prospect, was a guest recently of Illinois Bell Telephone Co. At the 12th annual Junior Achievement Executive Conference in Chicago.

A junior achievement executive of Centern Enterprises in Des Plaines, sponsored by Illinois Bell, Miss Koegel was named Chicago metropolitan Achiever of the Year.

"We crawled in on our bellies from the balcony on the second floor with fire above and around us," Ed Retzer, a volunteer, explained. "It's a scary feeling when you turn to crawl back out in a dark room and run into a wall every way you turn."

RESCUE AND SEARCH teams couldn't get into the building.

"We couldn't get in. The smoke was so black and thick," Sellards said.

The places the fire burned into were scattered. "You have to remember, a fireman is only in one place. We couldn't see all the places the fire was breaking out," Bruce Winter said.

"The men got mad at me when I ordered them out of the building," Chief Fogerty chuckled. "They couldn't see what was going on, of course, but I could see it was dangerous."

No fireman can recall what he did when. "The only reason I knew it was 2:30 in the morning was that I had scratched myself when I climbed into the attic and realized later it hurt. The watch was on my arm when I looked at the scratch," Marshall said.

"IT WAS A TERRIFIC stop on the fire," Fogerty said. "Fire chiefs from other areas complimented us on how much we were able to save."

Dick Blane, who singed his ears working on the second and third floors, told how the only empty apartment in the building wasn't damaged too much. "If those tenants had only used common sense in closing doors, the fire probably wouldn't have gone as far as it did. When we went back the next day, there were some places, like closets, which had smoke damage, but no water and things weren't burned. We pulled three mink coats unharmed out of one closet."

Chief Fogerty attributes the spread of the fire to the fact that the door to the apartment where it started was left open.

"We didn't realize how fast it was going and didn't know it had gotten to the other end when we arrived," Winter said. "When I saw those flames, though I knew that fire had a good start before we got there. My first thought was 'They didn't call us soon enough.'"

Building Dedication Set

The Mount Prospect Public Works Building, 11 S. Pine St., will be dedicated to the memory of Howard Wilson by Mayor Robert Teichert May 17 at 2 p.m.

Wilson served as a village trustee from 1953 to the time of his death in 1959. A bronze plaque, inscribed in his memory, will be placed on the front of the building adjacent to the main entrance.

Mayor Teichert said no formal dedication of the building has been held, although it was completed in 1965 and an open house was held at the time of its completion. "The formal dedication has not occurred until this time, pending the creation of a suitable plaque," he explained.

"I think the dedication is just as meaningful regardless of when it's held, and I hope everyone will attend and honor Mrs. Howard Wilson in the dedication," Teichert said.

All members of the administration and residents of Mount Prospect are invited to attend and participate in the ceremony. The Public Works Building will be open for inspection, and coffee will be served following the ceremony.

Dist. 59 Musical Festival Friday

The School Dist. 59 band and orchestra will present its first musical festival at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Grove Junior High School, 777 Elk Grove Blvd., Elk Grove Village.

Approximately 50 band and orchestra members from each of the four junior high schools in the district have been selected to perform in the program.

The performance will be conducted by Dr. H. E. Nutt, president of Vandercook College of Music, Chicago.

Tickets are $1 for adults. Students through junior high school age will be admitted free.

The schools involved in addition to Grove are Dempster and Holmes junior high schools in Mount Prospect, and Lively Junior High School in Elk Grove Village.

Joint Vacation Church School To Be Offered

A joint vacation church-school will be offered this summer by St. Joseph the Worker Catholic Church in Wheeling, and the Lutheran Church of the Good Shepherd in Prospect Heights.

The church school will be held July 27 through Aug. 7 in St. Joseph Church.

Children from preschool through junior high school age from both congregations may participate.

SPANISH-SPEAKING children from the area have also been invited to participate. The two churches are working with the Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows and NORWESCO to enroll these children.

These children will attend the church school in the morning and then participate in a day camp program in the afternoon. The day camp program is being sponsored by the youth in the two congregations.

Registration information may be obtained from either St. Joseph or Good Shepherd Church.

Burroughs Elected Research Unit Chief

A Mount Prospect resident, James E. Burroughs, has been elected president of the Borg-Warner Chapter of the Research Society of America (RESA).

Burroughs, who lives with his wife Dorothy and four daughters at 707 N. Prospect Manor Ave., has been active in the RESA for a number of years and served in all official positions.

A resident of Mount Prospect since 1959, Burroughs was formerly the secretary of the Drainage and Clean Streams Commission and in his free time serves as scientific adviser to the Camp Fire Girls of Mount Prospect.

What Is Library Afraid Of?

by MURRAY DUBIN

Free speech and the right of peaceful public assembly came before the Arlington Heights Library Board this week and both issues were defeated in a remarkable tie vote which split the board in half.

A proposal to liberalize the rules now governing the use of the library's Dunton Room made by board member Richard Frisbie was defeated by strong opposition from one board member George Beacham.

Board president Mrs. Robert Wallace George Beacham and Mrs. Clarence Hendrickson voted against liberalizing rules concerning the Dunton Room. Robert Scanlon and Charles Edward voted for the proposal.

The motion was defeated and with it a move to make a portion of the Arlington Heights Library open to the community.

FRISBIE TOLD THE Herald that during the first four months of 1970 only 27 events were scheduled in the Dunton Room. "I want to gain greater utilization of a room paid for by taxpayers," he said.

The current Dunton Room rules state the Arlington Heights Memorial Library offers the use of the Dunton Room to any group of citizens within this Library District to gather for cultural, educational or civic purposes. (Merely social, religious or partisan meetings do not ordinarily fall within these categories.)

Frisbie's proposal would have altered those lines to read: "encourages the use of the Dunton Room by citizens of Arlington Heights for educational and cultural meetings and other socially useful activities. Social and religious or partisan gatherings ordinarily meet this definition. However, when the main purpose of a meeting is the discussion of public issues and the meeting is publicized as open to all, the room is available to any group in the community."

I THINK THE library board has a responsibility for a policy like this," Frisbie said. "I feel disgraced to sit on a library board that doesn't have a policy on free speech."

The Dunton room isn't being used. We have an obligation in this time of polarization to allow the room to be used for discussion of public issues.

Beacham, who was one of the prime movers in the establishment of the new library, strongly objected to Frisbie's proposed change.

"I'm opposed to a public body subsidizing a partisan meeting," Beacham said.

When asked what group wasn't partisan, Beacham said that any group that was espousing its own views and trying to recruit members should not be allowed to use the Dunton Room even if their meetings are open to the public and discussion of public issues ensues.

HE ADDED THAT the sole purpose of such a meeting should be public and that Frisbie's words "main purpose" were not restrictive enough. He insisted that political, religious and partisan meetings should not be held in the library.

Beacham admitted that actual enforcement of any rule restricting what could be discussed in the Dunton Room was unenforceable anyway.

Given the hypothetical example of a request from the Arlington Heights chapter of the Women's Liberation Front to use the Dunton Room for a public meeting to espouse their views and discuss the role of women in society, Beacham said he would refuse such a request because the group was political and would attempt to recruit members.

Beacham admitted that most groups are partisan and the distinction he was trying to make may be unclear. But he wanted it made perfectly clear that he wasn't against free speech.

During the discussion on the issue and after the vote, Frisbie said frustratingly, "What are you people afraid of?"

No Housing Ruling Yet

"SAIL ON SILVER BIRD . . ." With the songs of Simon and Garfunkel echoing behind them in the halls, the girls at Arlington high practice free choreography under the direction of Miss Judy Whitney. Miss Whitney teaches other dancing and physical education courses and has taught school for six years.

The Viatorian Order is not expected to reach a decision on the disposition of their land in Arlington Heights at the order's meeting on June 19.

The order also intends to set up a special Viatorian committee to explore the request that their land be used for low and moderate income housing.

More than 200 members of the newly formed Arlington Estates Homeowners Association learned these facts from Tom Hanlon, head of their legal committee last night. Hanlon related a discussion he had recently with the Rev. Patrick Cahill, assistant Viatorian provincial.

Hanlon told the large crowd at the American Legion Hall that Rev. Cahill felt no decision would be reached by the target date of June 19. He added that Rev. Cahill and the Viatorians were deeply concerned with the moral commitment they had to themselves, to the neighborhood to the community and to the public at large.

"I feel it is important that you know that these questions are being studied by men who have no axe to grind," Hanlon said.

On April 29 the resident's group had their first meeting to organize themselves against any rezoning of the land surrounding St. Viator High School at Dryden and Euclid.

Last night Howard Kagay, who has been the group's spokesman said, "Our main endeavor is to unify our effort to oppose any change that will be detrimental to our area."

"We want to prevent any rezoning of the Viatorian property for apartments or townhouses."

Hanlon also explained that the Viatorians want to gather the opinions of people in the community about any proposed housing development on their land.

Hanlon, who lives in the area, added, "I do not oppose the concept of low income housing."

"But I don't believe it would be proper zoning to construct a multiple family project on the Viatorian property."

Years ago a basic principle was set by the plan commission and approved by the village board. That principle states that multiple family zoning should be used as a buffer between single family homes and commercial or industrial zoning.

After Hanlon spoke the homeowners elected officers to serve until May 13, 1971.

Elected president of the association is Howard Kagay, 824 N. Duane Lane. Vice President is Phil Nelson, 1021 N. W. shine. Treasurer is Chuck Veseli, 1010 N. Drury Lane and secretary is Joan Spiel, 1002 N. Duane Lane.

Orchesis Glides To Perfection

by JOAN KLUSSMAN

Like a bridge over troubled water, I will ease your mind.

The Simon and Garfunkel melody echoes through the halls of Arlington High School as students switch classrooms for the last period of the day.

Little supple girls glide gracefully into the gymnasium. Clad in brilliantly colored leotards, they perform modern dances with disciplined movements, the kind of movements which carry a message and exploit human needs.

The 33 girls make up the Arlington High School Orchesis, an advanced dance group primarily devoted to modern presentations. Inspired and directed by teacher Judy Whitney, the students choose their own themes and do their own choreography.

Poppy Sale Slated

Flowers of red and green will decorate lawns on Friday and Saturday as the Arlington Post 981, Veterans of Foreign Wars conducts its annual Poppy Day sale.

The VFW annually sponsors the poppy sale to raise money for needy and disabled veterans. This is the post's way of honoring the dead by helping the living.

Students: Keep Flag Up

Hersey High School students voted by more than a 3-1 margin yesterday not to lower the school's flag in memory of the four dead students at Kent State.

Retracing the events that led to yesterday's vote, Principal Roland Goins told the Herald that a group of students asked him on Monday morning to lower the flag to half staff in memory of the students who were killed at Kent.

Goins told them that he didn't have the authority to make such a move and suggested that they draw up a petition and present it to the School Dist. 214 board meeting that night. The students gathered 500 signatures but the school board decided to defer action and let a committee discuss the entire question of lowering flags at a future date.

Goins informed the students involved of the board's decision on Tuesday and suggested they discuss their feelings with board members.

Yesterday morning, Goins said, about 40 to 50 students gathered around the flagpole and said they were going to lower the American flag.

"We told them they couldn't lower the flag and they agreed to come inside and talk about it," Goins said.

After refusing their suggestion of putting up another flagpole and lowering an American flag, Goins said they could lower the Hersey flag from the flagpole. The group agreed, but the student body voted 1,722-502 against such a move.

Suddenly, Gates Shut

Normally this Saturday would be Armed Forces Day.

Normally there would be a few parades and each military post in the country would swing wide its gates for an open house.

Normally the 45th Artillery Brigade Headquarters on Central Road in Arlington Heights would welcome the people of the community to a little informal gathering.

Normally the soldiers would shine their boots and the commanding officer would shake hands with visitors and a tour would be given of what everyone in town knows as "the Nike site."

BUT THIS YEAR May 16 will come and go and no soldier will heed its passing. The gates at the 45th Artillery Brigade will not be opened as a gesture to the community.

Just two days ago preparations were under way there for the annual open house.

It got as far as the distribution of a news release which gave the hours and events of the Armed Forces Day open house in Arlington Heights.

But suddenly the open house was cancelled. The Army gave no reason, just asked that the story about the open house be withdrawn.

And as of this morning, there will be no open house at Brigade headquarters this year. Pressed for an explanation, Army spokesmen would not reply.

BUT IT DOES not take a genius to figure out that with all the disturbances, all the upheaval about the war in Cambodia, all the demonstrations that have occurred, maybe the Army thought that an open house in Arlington Heights and other places would just be welcoming trouble.

You can't blame the Army for the cancellation, really. They don't need unnecessary grief. They don't need another demonstration at their expense. They don't need confrontation at their doorstep and they don't need to bring dissent to Arlington Heights which, after all, is their home.

So, for those of you who would have gone to the Nike site this weekend but can't, I'll describe it to you.

It looks like every Army post you have ever heard of.

It is filled with people who happen at the moment to be soldiers. It is commanded by Colonel Harris Woods who turns out to be an awfully nice guy.

WOODS WEARS A uniform and is therefore part of the military-industrial complex. But he doesn't strike you that way at all. He smokes a pipe and he seems to look back on more than 20 years in the Army with nostalgia and affection.

The men on the post are like you and me. The enlisted men drink beer in their club and complain about living in the suburbs on a sergeant's pay.

The officers drink beer 50 feet away in their club and complain about the same things.

Both of them think of their next tour of duty or the number of days until their discharge.

Nothing complicated, really. Nothing ominous, nothing evil. Just soldiers who are in Arlington Heights instead of Cambodia because this is where the Army sent them.

IN A WAY, the men at the 45th Artillery Brigade are the lucky ones. The civilians won't be coming to visit this weekend and I bet the men won't have to sweat an inspection the next before.

But for not having met them this year, it's you and I who have suffered the loss.

A Fire Call Too Late?

by JUDY BRANDES

"My first thought was 'They didn't call us soon enough.'"

The speaker was Bruce Winter, a full-time fireman in the Rolling Meadows fire department.

He and 14 other full-time and volunteers who led the battle to stop the fire in a Three Fountains apartment building 10 days ago were discussing what happened from the moment they got the call to their return to the fire station several hours later.

"When we pulled out of the station on Meadow Drive, I could see the smoke already and knew we were in trouble,"

Charlie Sellards, the first officer to arrive at the fire said. Sellards radioed Arlington Heights for mutual assistance while en route to Three Fountains.

"Flames were already coming out the patio doors and that first floor apartment was burned out when we got there," Sellards said.

HE AND THE MEN on the first engine to arrive went after the apartment where the fire began. "We thought we had it out until we went around the south end and saw it going up the stairwell. We couldn't get in. The heat was too much."

On the way into Three Fountains, the firemen's hearts were pumping madly, they agreed. "I had Thumper with me all the way," Bill Schmidt, engineer on the first engine to arrive, said.

The men knew 5201 Carriage Way Drive was a building built before the life safety code was adopted by the city. They were expecting the fire to be bad, but didn't realize until later what type of fire it was.

"It was a hidden fire," Fire Chief Thomas Fogarty explained. Fogarty and four firemen were attending class at Harper Junior College when they heard about Three Fountains. "No matter what wall we took off, we always found fire. Once the fire got into the hallway, I knew it would move to other areas."

BEFORE FOGARTY arrived, Sellards was the officer in charge. "You call for all this equipment and it comes in. They're asking where you want them to go. I had to make a lot of decisions in a few seconds."

The first three engines to arrive, Rolling Meadows two and the aerial ladder from Arlington Heights, didn't get slowed down with traffic. The others, including the "mount prospect" snorkel, had trouble getting through the traffic which materialized as more people came to watch the fire.

Engineer Schmidt was responsible for laying the lines and hooking up to the fire hydrant. "I went past the first hydrant because people were standing there and I didn't see it," Schmidt said.

With a large fire, the department hooks up "hard sections" of hose to get enough water. "I was afraid we weren't going to get the hard section on the hydrant."

SCHMIDT AND FIREMAN Jack Fahn found the hydrant caps too low to the ground and when they finally got the top cap off, they had to clean the mud off before the hoses could be attached.

People trapped on the balconies were helped off by Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights men who arrived early on the scene.

"We got the police chief and two others off the back balcony and then went on up to the roof," Assistant Fire Chief Don Marshall, a volunteer, said. From the front, fire watchers couldn't see the men on the roof, who were working in the trough on the "M-shaped" roof.

"We stayed up there knocking holes in the roof to ventilate the fire until the tar started to bubble and the chief ordered

Red hot railings, intense black smoke and searing heat prevented teams of men from penetrating into the hallways. "We crawled in on our bellies from the balcony on the second floor with fire above and around us," Ed Retzer, a volunteer, explained. "It's a scary feeling when you turn to crawl back out in a dark room and run into a wall every way you turn."

RESCUE AND SEARCH teams couldn't get into the building. "We couldn't get in. The smoke was so black and thick," Sellards said.

The places the fire burned into were scattered. "You have to remember, a fireman is only in one place. We couldn't see all the places the fire was breaking out," Bruce Winter said.

"The men got mad at me when I ordered them out of the building," Chief Fogarty chuckled. "They couldn't see what was going on, of course, but I could see it was dangerous."

No fireman can recall what he did when. "The only reason I knew it was 2:30 in the morning was that I had scratched myself when I climbed into the attic and realized later it hurt. The watch was on my arm when I looked at the scratch," Marshall said.

"IT WAS A TERRIFIC stop on the fire," Fogarty said. "Fire chiefs from other areas complimented us on how much we were able to save."

Dick Blane, who singed his ears working on the second and third floors, told how the only empty apartment in the building wasn't damaged too much. "If those tenants had only used common sense in closing doors, the fire probably wouldn't have gone as far as it did. When we went back the next day, there were some places, like closets, which had smoke damage, but no water and things weren't burned. We pulled three milk coats unharmed out of one closet."

Chief Fogarty attributes the spread of the fire to the fact that the door to the apartment where it started was left open.

"We didn't realize how fast it was going and didn't know it had gotten to the other end when we arrived," Winter said. "When I saw those flames, though, I knew that fire had a good start before we got there. My first thought was 'They didn't call us soon enough.'"

Nixon 'Right' On Cambodia: Crane

by ED MURNANE

U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-13th, a former history professor at two Midwestern universities, accused antiwar demonstrators of following their emotions, rather than an understanding of history, in opposing President Nixon's decision to use American troops in Cambodia.

Crane, who taught history at Bradley and Indiana universities before running for Congress last year, told the Northwest Suburban Bar Association last night that the decision to enter Cambodia "is very similar to a decision made by the United States in World War II to bomb oil fields used by the Germans, thereby bringing a faster end to the war."

He defended President Nixon's decision as a "wise one" and said he has been telling college students "that the decision was made to make it possible for you not to have to fight in Southeast Asia."

CRANE SAID HIS Washington office has "been deluged by a vast number of students" and that he has initiated a series of daily seminars to discuss the Cambodia situation with the students.

"Many of them are telling me that they plan to work within the system and retire me from Congress in November," Crane said.

"I think that shows there might be a silver lining to the protest we are witnessing," he said. "If it causes people to become involved in the normal ways and in the normal system, rather than burning down libraries and ROTC buildings, then there may be some good to it."

But Crane said he also has asked the students to respect his position, even if they don't agree with it.

"I'VE TRIED TO TELL them that there's no reason to doubt the integrity of President Nixon and his decision to enter Cambodia," Crane said. "He has led us in a steady withdrawal from Vietnam, with 115,000 troops already home and a pledge that 150,000 more would be withdrawn by the end of the year."

Crane said the President may have been wrong in his decision, "but the students better hope and pray that he's right, because his objective is to end the war quicker and prevent young people from going over there."

He said young people do not fully understand the involvement of the Soviet Union in Southeast Asia or in other areas of the world and he quoted extensive figures and testimony of Defense Sec. Melvin Laird showing a massive Russian arms buildup while the United States military might has declined.

"Looking at the momentum of the Soviet Union in the arms race and then at our own decrease, we have to feel that a possible consequence is that the Soviet Union will call our bluff if there is a situation."

90 Signed for Art Festival

More than 90 artists have registered for the June 7 art festival, according to a report made at last night's Cultural Commission meeting.

The deadline for entries is Friday and the number is expected to swell to more than 100.

The commission called the special meeting to discuss the progress on plans for the festival which it is sponsoring and Countryside Art Center is managing.

LORRAINE SCHEIBEL, of Countryside reported that the center will hold a public preview of the festival. This preview, which will be open to the public, will be held May 27.

Plans for the event include activities from 1:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. including representative works; continuous demonstrations in graphics, sculpture and painting; a talk by gallery artists and teachers to explain theories, techniques and other topics; and a special discussion featuring artists invited to enter the technological exhibit planned for the art festival.

The names of the judges who will award the $1,000 in prize money were announced. William Struve, director of the Allan Frumkin Gallery in Chicago, and Mrs. Dennis Adrian, assistant curator of the print and drawing department of the Art Institute of Chicago, will serve as the jury for the show.

An Impassioned Plea for Funds Succeeds

Representatives of the Over 50 Club, civic associations and a church appealed to the Arlington Heights Park Board funds Tuesday night.

Most of the requests were answered with "we'll work on it." However, an impassioned plea from Mabel Hinneberg, president of the Over 50 Club, won the sympathy of the park board and the audience of about 20 citizens who attended the meeting.

Mrs. Hinneberg presented her case to the board, saving her request for $1,300 until the end. She pointed out that the club was originally under the wing of the park district and became separate so it could qualify for funds from Wheeling Township.

Since the supreme court ruling against townships distributing excess funds, the Over 50 Club has to turn somewhere else for money.

TALKING ABOUT HER club. Mrs. Hinneberg said, "When some people tell us of what good the club has done for them, they have tears in their eyes."

The amount requested would be used to pay for the salaries of the club's directors who plan activities, trips and special events.

Describing some of their trips, the Over 50 president said the group had gone to Hawaii and "last fall, four bus loads of us went to the bunny club."

Mrs. Hinneberg rested her case and Park Board president Charles Cronin said, "We think you're wonderful and we'd love to have you back."

Cronin said the money for the club will be worked into the budget which will be voted on by the board at its May 25 meeting.

TRAFFIC PROBLEMS at two new park swimming pools which will open June 13 were pointed out by representatives of the Berkeley Square and Hasbrook areas.

Ronald Riba, a resident of Berkeley Square, pointed out that about 800 families live in the subdivision. For children to get to Camelot Park's swimming pool, they have to cross Arlington Heights Road.

"We have a very serious problem in that area with kids," he said.

The limit along that portion of Arlington Heights Road is 45 m.p.h. and there are no traffic signals to break the flow of traffic from Rand Road up to Dundee Road.

PARK BOARD members said they plan to meet within a week with the village to get a definite commitment on whether the village will provide a crossing guard for Palatine Road near Frontier Park. During this meeting, the park board will also see about arrangements for children who will be going to Camelot Park.

Cronin stated that there may be problems with getting a guard because "it looks like he might have to be there 12 hours a day. We are looking to you people for some suggestions on this."

The answers given to Riba essentially answered the safety problems raised by Robert Schaefer, 701 W. Maude St.

Schaefer said the Hasbrook Civic Association supported the 1968 park referendum which provided the funds for building Frontier Park, because it felt it had a definite commitment from the park board that a crossing guard would be provided when the pool opened.

CHILDREN IN THE Hasbrook area will have to cross the four-lane Palatine Road to get to the park located at Palatine Road and Kennicott Drive. He said residents in the area would like to see a pedestrian overpass but "we'll settle for a guard."

Board members said the residents do have a commitment from the board for a crossing guard, and the board will meet with the village to work on getting a guard.

A special request for "exclusive" use of a swimming pool was turned down by the board. However, the board generally agreed to allow use of the pool by 100 children involved in a day camp program sponsored by the First Presbyterian Church of Arlington Heights.

MAX RIGGS, A representative for the church, said the program is being planned in conjunction with the Firman House, a settlement house in Chicago. The day camp will bring children to Arlington Heights from July 6 through Aug.

6. He requested exclusive use of a swimming pool from noon to one p.m. when the pools are closed to the public for two days of each week of the program.

Thomas Thornton, director of parks and recreation, pointed out that all of the district's pools are used constantly from early morning through the evening. However, he said that an additional 100 children added to any of the district's pools during public swimming hours "wouldn't overcrowd any of our pools."

The board told Riggs to work with park administrators to set up specific times for the children to swim.

No Non-Public Aid Plan Yet

State Rep. Eugene F. Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, revealed this week that the state's elementary and secondary nonpublic schools study commission will make no recommendations on the need for state aid to nonpublic schools during the current session of the legislature.

Schlickman, chairman of the commission, said members of the commission voted unanimously to delay any report until the commission's study is completed. He said that although the commission has held hearings throughout the state, the research is not yet complete.

"THE COMMISSION does not believe that testimony at the public hearings, standing alone, provide a sufficient basis by which to intelligently respond to its statutory charges," Schlickman said.

The preliminary report released Tuesday includes an explanation of the educational research planned by Dr. Donald A. Erickson, University of Chicago Professor, and Research Coordinator of the commission. Advising the commission on the Constitutional question are a panel of legal experts including Prof. Philip B. Kurland, University of Chicago Law School; Prof. John C. Hayes, Loyola University School of Law; Prof. Benjamin DuVal, University of Illinois School of Law, and Byron S. Miller, attorney-at-law who is associated with the Civil Liberties Union. Each lawyer will give the commission his independent opinion.

The study reports are expected to be completed before January 1971.

SCHLICKMAN SAID commission members who are legislators have particularly had impressed upon them the urgency of reaching a decision on the nonpublic school aid question. The commission has responded by issuing a preliminary report which details the various questions which commission members believe must be more fully considered before a recommendation can be made.

He added that "some members, informally, have suggested that any legislative proposal is passed and approved this session it should be considered only temporary or stopgap in nature."

"We believe the state legislature should not make any permanent commitment regarding any further State nonpublic school aid until the commission completes its reports," Schlickman said.

By law, the commission is charged with considering the role and needs of nonpublic schools in Illinois: how nonpublic schools can be appropriately related to the public schools, without impairment of their freedom; and the constitutional means by which the state can aid the nonpublic elementary and secondary schools in the fulfillment of their task.

Schlickman added, "The commission accepts its statutory charges, but it views the basic issue to be whether or not state aid should be given to nonpublic elementary and secondary schools."

No Decision On Library Sunday Hours

The Arlington Heights Library Board has not decided if the library should remain open on Sundays during the summer months.

The board earned Tuesday night that nearly 7,000 residents used the library on Sundays during February, March and April.

"I'm amazed at the response we've gotten on Sundays," said George Beacham, board member.

"No one can debate that the library is being used," he said. "The only debate is whether the use will continue during the summer. Let's put this off until the July board meeting when we'll have had three Sundays with the schools out to check on."

BOARD MEMBER Richard Frisbie said the circulation per hour is higher on Sundays than on other days and Harold Ard, executive librarian, added that the library is one of the few that offer full service on Sundays.

Mrs. Clarence Hendrickson disagreed with her fellow board members.

"I'm against Sunday hours in July and August," she began. "It's vacation time then and our staff deserves a respite. I'm talking now from a taxpayers viewpoint."

"Remember, we were open more hours than any other library in the state before Sunday hours."

The board agreed to review the matter at their June session.

In other action, the members agreed to spend $1,325 for a piece of sculpture for the library's basement. The sculpture will be done by Harold Kerr of Palatine.

Dist. 25 Board To Study Enrollment

The School Dist. 25 board of education will examine enrollment projections at tonight's board meeting at Dwyer School.

Administrators will present charts showing the number of classrooms in use in each school, together with estimates of enrollments and classrooms needed for the next two school years. District enrollments have been hovering around the 10,000 mark this year.

Board members are also expected to act on a recommendation that $850,000 in bonds be sold May 1. Increased assessed valuation in the district also increases bonding power and Dist. 25 may now sell more building bonds at an earlier date than originally scheduled.

ADMINISTRATORS EXPECT that the bonds may be sold without increasing individual taxes, but it is difficult to determine precise figures as income from personal property taxes will diminish if the current law is changed.

II. Todd Fouty, director of special services, will also speak to the board, summarizing this year's special education programs and giving plans for next year's classes.

'Listening Post' Slated for Youth

A "listening post" for young people, the second of the year, has been scheduled for next Sunday by State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights.

Mrs. Chapman conducts the "listening posts" in her home at 16 S. Princeton Ct., Arlington Heights periodically during the year. Sunday's program is scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

"HIGH SCHOOL and college students expressed real interest in and knowledge of current problems at the first meeting last month," Mrs. Chapman said. "Following discussion on education, pollution, aid to nonpublic schools, freedom of expression for students and other issues, there was still much to say."

Mrs. Chapman has held several similar sessions for adults but is limiting Sunday's program to people under 30. No reservations are needed.

Futurities

THE ARLINGTON Heights Board of Local Improvements will meet in a special meeting at 8 p.m. in the village hall.

HARPER JUNIOR College board of education will meet at 8 p.m. in the Harper administration building, Algonquin and Roselle roads, Palatine.

THE DIST. 25 board of education will meet at 7:30 p.m. at Dwyer school, 500 S. Dwyer.

THE DIST. 21 board of education will meet in regular session in the administration building, 999 W. Dundee Road.

Strike Impact Yet To Come

By M. GREENE

Palatine residents may soon feel the full impact of the Chicago area trucking strike if it continues much longer, local merchants and businessmen said yesterday.

Although most retail stores still have stocked shelves, a few items have disappeared and at least two local industries are considering laying off workers.

The trucking snafu stems from a request by the Chicago Teamsters union which is seeking a three-year contract providing $1.65 an hour wage hikes over three years. The national agreement, now being voted on by drivers in other parts of the country, provides for higher wages by $1.10 an hour over 30 months.

MORE THAN 160,000 persons have been idled in Chicago by the trucking lockouts, strikes or layoffs.

A spokesman for one of Palatine's largest industries, H. B. Fuller Co. at 315 S. Hicks Road, which employs 150 people, said that if the strikes and lockouts continue, the company would be forced to start laying off employees.

The company, the spokesman said, has given its employees their vacations early and has curtailed hiring.

Business, the spokesman said, "is an per cent of what I'd like to see." The adhesive manufacturer, he said, has six to eight openings that would normally be filled if its receiving and shipping were normal.

A spokesman for A. C. Davenport and Son at 306 E. Hellen, a chalk and directory board manufacturer, said that operation "is virtually tied up."

There is no danger of laying off people, he said, but the firm is unable to ship its larger orders. The firm is managing to keep supplied, he said, because most of their materials come from a private supplier.

A spokesman for Sellstrom Manufacturing Co. on Rte. 53 said "we're scrapping to make work." The strike, he said, "has slowed us down quite a bit."

THE FIRM, which employs 100 people, manufactures eye and face protective equipment. Asked if the company was planning layoffs, the spokesman said, "there's always that danger. We could be forced into it unless the strike ends soon, very soon."

"It's not our intention," he said, "to lay off people, however."

Russell Dutko, the assistant manager of Zayre's Department Store at 1300 Northwest Highway, said business has been off between $5,000 and $10,000 a week.

Advertising circulars, he said, were printed weeks in advance and the advertised merchandise has not been received.

"We have to kind of sit tight" until the strike is over, he said.

A spokesman for the Jewel store at 45 S. Plum Grove Road said there were a few household items, such as some washing suds that could not be obtained.

MOST OF THE other merchandise the store carries, he said, is shipped directly to the food chain's Melrose Park distribution center and brought to stores by the company's trucks.

Roy Wente, owner of the Sanitary Grocery and Market at 49 W. Slade, said that "99 per cent of the goods" is coming into his store. A few items, such as household cleaners and soaps and some soups, cannot be obtained, he said.

A spokesman for Palatine Drugs, at Palatine Road and Brockway said that magazine deliveries have been curtailed from twice a week to once a week.

"For a while," the spokesman said, drug orders were being delivered by salesman but then the "drug houses" settled and normal deliveries resumed.

CONRAD HANSEN, the manager of Hansen V and S Hardware at 105 W. Palatine Road, said the store has been operating by selling its inventory.

"We're not out of stock," he said about a certain lawn product "but when that pile goes we know we're not replacing it."

The store, he said, buys goods from a Chicago warehouse but that warehouse has also stopped receiving goods.

SPECIFICALLY, he said, the store is out of several "nitty gritty plumbing items," basketball backboards and paint rollers.

"Any good merchant," he said, "could see it coming" and should have stocked up.

If the lockouts and strikes continue, Hansen predicted, "the customer will have to do without."

Enrollment Ends Monday

Parents of children in Palatine-Rolling Meadows School Dist. 15 have until next Monday to enroll their children in summer school remedial classes.

Classes are being offered in reading to students presently in second through eighth grades. Students promoted to third grade for the 1970-71 school year are also eligible.

Children presently in third through eighth grades can enroll in mathematics classes. Those promoted to fourth grade for the next school year are eligible.

THE CLASSES are designed to give individualized instruction to those students who are not achieving grade level goals but have the ability to do so.

Classes begin June 15 and run through July 17. They are held for one hour each morning. There will be five students in each remedial class and tuition is $32.50 for each class enrolled in.

Summer school classes in speech correction will be held to help children with more severe speech problems to give them further reinforcement. First priority in registration, which also closes Monday, will be given to students recommended by the speech correctionist and the principal.

Tuition for the 30-minute classes is $38.50.

Dist. 15 will also hold an enrichment program this summer. Students presently in grades two to four can enroll in a creative art program which will meet every day for one and a half hours. The class will provide opportunities for the elementary child to explore and develop his interest in art through experimentation with various art media. The fee is $22.50 which includes materials.

STUDENTS NOW in fifth through eighth grades can also enroll in a creative art class which will meet daily for one and a half hours. Instruction will be provided in ceramics, water colors, sketching, and other art media.

Fifth through eighth grade students can participate in creative science, dramatics, and mathematics. Each of these courses will cost $22.50 and will meet daily for an hour and a half. Enrollment is limited to 15 students per class.

In addition to the above creative classes, students in grades five through eight may take a class in personal typing. The class will meet one hour each day and will teach beginning skills necessary for typing letters and themes. They may also take class instruction in piano for beginning students for one hour each day.

A class in creative language arts will be held for second through fourth grade students. They will learn to develop their abilities to express ideas. They will meet Monday through Friday for one and a half hour sessions.

Registration for enrichment classes closes June 1.

BOTH REMEDIAL and enrichment summer school classes will be held in Winston Park, Hunting Ridge and Carl Sandburg schools. Registration is to be made in the office of the school the student is now attending.

A $10 deposit is required at the time of registration and the balance is due on the first day of summer school.

School principals can be contacted for further information.

Mint Is Nature's Insect Repellent

More than 100 suburban residents "attuned their ears to nature" and glued their eyes to the movie screen Tuesday night.

It was PEP's (Pollution and Environmental Problems) Eco-Catastrophe Film Festival which ironically was hit by a weather "catastrophe" as the fog rolled in and sirens sounded outside Forest View High School's Little Theater in Arlington Heights.

In the beginning the audience heard what individuals can do to fight pollution by using low phosphate detergents, eliminating dangerous pesticides from household use and gardening the organic way.

"There are several small plants which can be used in place of insecticides," explained Mrs. R. C. Good, PEP program chairman.

"For example, mint can be planted near cabbage or garlic plants near rose bushes to assist in bug control," she said.

MRS. GOOD ALSO explained how phosphates in detergents should stay below 25 units per washload. Enzyme presoaks are especially high ranging from 30 to 55 units of phosphate, she said.

A list of phosphate content of detergents prepared by Northwestern Students for a Better Environment was distributed to the group. Only 12 detergent products of 43 are above the hazardous phosphate level.

When the lights dimmed, it was time for visual proof of what pollution is doing to the environment.

An award-winner, "Urbanissimo," showed nature's destruction from city planning and aimless construction.

"Nature's Half Acre," the longer movie, dwelled on the struggle for survival among the non-human population and the children in the audience with quiet screams showed they were getting the point of the film as a duckling fled from the overbearing shovel of a bulldozer.

CHARLES YAGER, author and conservationist from Prospect Heights put his thoughts into poetry at Tuesday night's film festival.

"What is man? It's the only thing on earth which kills its own kind."

"What you kill or destroy is gone beyond your ever bringing it back."

Charles Yager of Prospect Heights, who told the group, Eco-Catastrophe Film Festival Tuesday night was a 40-foot long display portraying effects of pollution. Author

"Attune your ears to nature," views the exhibit.

Warnings Up, But 'Storms' Were Averted

As some 15 residents of the Hunting Ridge subdivision in Palatine walked into a public hearing Tuesday night to discuss a proposed nursing center near their homes, the village's siren atop the Village Hall sounded a three-minute tornado warning.

The warning wasn't needed, however, as Palatine escaped the tornado and the plan commission missed the storm.

Both the plan commission and the residents were going through the Four Seasons Nursing Centers of America, Inc. proposal in a public hearing for the second time.

THE COMPANY NEEDS a special use permit from the village to begin building its proposed $14 million, 200-bed facility on a 4½-acre site north of the Illinois Avenue and Quentin Road intersection.

During the past 16 months the residents, the proponents of the nursing center and their attorneys have debated the issue in court, in front of the village board and the plan commission.

The residents object to the two story facility because they feel it is not in keeping with the residential character of the area.

Tuesday night's hearing was a continuation of a hearing held April 21.

At that hearing, Richard A. Mugalian, a local attorney who is representing the homeowners, charged the nursing center failed to present testimony showing the "necessity" for such a home. A special use permit, he told the plan commission, can be granted only when the need for a facility has been demonstrated.

Not only is a nursing home not needed in the area, Mugalian said Tuesday night, "but it is undesirable." What is being proposed, he claimed "is a commercial use for a single family area."

ALLUDING TO recent disclosures of the company's financial woes, Mugalian contended, there is "a risk of failure" of the nursing home and it could be possible that the proposed building would be turned into a motel.

"I'm not suggesting Four Seasons would build and go out of business," he added, "I just don't know."

Mrs. Jeannette R. Kramer, the operator of the Plum Grove Nursing Home said there was no need for another nursing home in the area. Her 69-bed facility had only 75 per cent occupancy and with new construction, she testified, there will soon be almost 900 excess nursing home beds in the area.

Mrs. Kramer also maintained a new facility would drain the local professional personnel sources in the community.

William J. Moore, an attorney representing Four Seasons, said there is "no indication of financial difficulty" in the company and charged that local nursing homes were afraid of competition.

After Erika Karceviskis, the administrator of the Americana Nursing Center of Arlington Heights, testified that her nursing facility had been built when there was also a surplus of beds, Plan Commission Chairman Thomas Moody commented, "It sounds to me like there are a lot of incompetent people spending their money for nursing homes."

MOORE THEN SAID that the State Legislature had enacted new criteria for nursing homes effective Jan. 1, 1970, and that the surplus bed projections which were based on 1968 figures were not valid because most of the nursing home beds were "rendered not qualified" by the Legislature.

Dr. Frank Powles who related he owned the 6½ acres north of the proposed site, objected to the nursing home because, he said, it would depreciate his property values.

The commission previously recommended that the special use not be granted because the nursing home would be a commercial development in a residential area.

Village Trustee Terry L. Leighty, who has voted for the nursing home in the past, after the hearing commented, "I didn't hear anything new."

Earlier this year, Circuit Court Judge Edward F. Healy ruled that the village's annexation of the property was valid but the special use granted was not, Moore has claimed.

Mom: 'No One Ever Cried'

by BETSY BROOKER

Sixteen months ago, Mrs. Rosemary Bornhofen was lying in a hospital bed, completely paralyzed on her left side.

This Mother's Day, Rosemary was awarded a medallion and named "Handicapped Mother of the Year" by the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago.

The 28-year-old Prospect Heights resident walked up to the stand, completely unaided, to receive her award. A slight limp was the only trace left of the stroke she suffered a year and a half ago, after a blood clot blocked a main artery in her brain.

The tragedy was threefold for Rosemary because she had just returned from the hospital the day before after the birth of her first child, Gina Marie. And her father had died of cancer while she was in the hospital delivering Gina.

TODAY, ROSEMARY can sit in her kitchen and casually joke about her misfortune over a cup of coffee. Her sense of humor has carried her through the past year.

She is an attractive young woman with a windswept pixie hair cut and an open smile. While she is dark, her young daughter is very fair with soft blond hair.

Gina has probably fared the best since her mother's stroke because she has benefited from the love of at least four mother figures: Rosemary, two grandmothers and an aunt.

The stroke was a severe blow for the whole family, but they all pitched in and lent support, said Rosemary.

"I was asleep when it happened. It was early Sunday morning, a day after I got home from the hospital. My husband thought I was having a nightmare and woke me up. I had a terrible headache.

He tried to help me walk to the bathroom so I could take an aspirin but I kept falling down. I couldn't stand up."

"HE CALLED MY brother and sister-in-law then, and they came over and watched my baby while my husband drove me to the hospital."

Rosemary stayed in the hospital until February, when she was transferred to the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago. "While I was in the hospital, everything was done for me, including bed baths. As soon as I got to the institute they put me into a plastic wheel chair and took me into the shower room. I never realized what a luxury a shower is before."

Everything was different at the institute, said Rosemary. "They encouraged you to help yourself. I didn't get breakfast in bed anymore, but had to wheel myself down to the cafeteria."

When Rosemary first arrived at the institute, she couldn't move any part of the left side of her body. It was a trying time because there was no way for the doctors to know if the brain cells had been permanently damaged.

"They put me on an extensive therapy program so my muscles would be limber in case my damaged brain cells revived. Some people never recover from a stroke."

ROSEMARY WAS also taught how to work with one arm. "They brought my baby down, and the head nurse in the pediatrics department at Wesley Memorial Hospital came over to teach me how to hold, feed and diaper Gina with only my right arm."

"I had a special curved knife so I could cut my meat with one hand, by rocking it. I've still got it, but don't use it anymore."

"I also had a board with all sorts of hooks, locks and gadgets to practice on. One day I was having trouble with one of the hooks, and a man next to me with an artificial arm offered to help me."

"There are so many people worse off than you at the institute, you can't feel sorry for yourself."

ROSEMARY'S MOTHER agreed saying, "I thought I would be depressed by the patients when I visited Rosemary, but they are so friendly and cheerful, they make you feel good."

"The first day I arrived at the institute my roommate asked me if I wanted to go to the movies with her. I didn't know what she was talking about, but later learned that the patients are taken on a trip once a week."

"And there was a Negro patient there we called 'the general.' He had been shot five times during a hold-up. I asked him one day if they had caught the robbers, and he said he knew who they were. So I told him he was lucky they were friends, or he would have gotten it worse."

"No one ever cries at the institute," added Rosemary.

In March, Rosemary was able to go home and visit the institute on an outpatient basis. By this time the muscles in her left leg had begun to move and she could walk with the aid of a brace and a cane.

BY THE MIDDLE OF the summer, she was able to move her left arm and throw away her sling. Two months later, she could walk without the brace.

Rosemary's mother stayed with her during her first few months at home, but now Rosemary is doing most of the housework herself and even driving.

"I feel more appreciative of simple things now," said Rosemary, "like just moving around."

"You never realize how lucky you are until something like this happens to you."

AFTER A stroke 16 months ago, which paralyzed her left side, Rosemary Bornhofen, of Prospect Heights, is now able to assist her 16-month-old daughter Gina, in flower arranging, drive a car and play golf. She was recently named "Handicapped Mother of the Year" by the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago, where she received physical therapy for seven months.

'Sports World' Complex Offered

by MARY REIFSCHEIDER

"The Sports World," a recreation complex including a domed stadium with a seating capacity for 110,000, is being proposed for Schaumburg on 97 acres across from the WGN towers on Rte. 53.

The enclosed arena, with underground parking, could be home to major Chicago sports clubs now seeking new quarters, but it would also be available for local and amateur teams, its developer Lee Romano told the Herald Wednesday.

The 97 acres, fronting on Rte. 53 near the Interstate-90 breakoff, are not annexed to Schaumburg now. Romano has options on adjacent parcels that would make the land contiguous to the village. Mayor Robert O. Atcher told the Herald the land could be annexed by referendum.

Romano said he expects to bring the proposal before the Zoning Board of Appeals in the next several weeks.

"I HAVE BEEN approached by major sports groups seeking new locations that could occupy The Sports World," Romano said. He did not specify which teams are interested.

Atcher said a domed stadium is feasible for the Northwest area, especially since several of the major league Chicago teams are looking for new homes. The professional baseball and football leagues are encouraging Chicago teams to find larger quarters that will increase attendance and revenues.

A domed sports stadium was once discussed for Arlington Park, but plans never got off the ground and apparently were scuttled when the race track was purchased by Gulf-Western.

The Sports World, with a dome that opens and closes, would have twice the seating capacity as the Houston Astrodome, now the only completed enclosed stadium, which holds 44,500 spectators.

In addition to Sports World, the complex would include "The Adventure," a center with restaurants, lounges, a roller skating and ice skating rinks, caves and other activities, Romano said.

ROMANO, WHO IS THE developer of the Planet Project in Schaumburg, noted for the proposed 113-story building, has other parcels to be developed in Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights.

The developer noted that the sports complex, which would cost upwards of $100 million, would not disturb any community or its residents. It is surrounded on three sides by the Cook County Forest Preserve.

Romano said that Sports World will centrally serve any area of Northwest Cook and North DuPage Counties that already has a population of over one million and will grow to many times that in the next 10 years.

He has not announced a timetable for building the stadium complex yet.

Romano expects to run into trouble from the Cook County Forest Preserve over the site. He has heard rumors that the forest preserve wants to add the 97 acres to its 3,500 acre holdings in the Schaumburg-Elk Grove vicinity.

"THE FOREST PRESERVE has ample land without this 97 acres. I intend to fight with everything I have for this," he said.

The site is now a tree nursery.

'Pig' to Woods Is Pride

by CYNTHIA TIVERS

Sheriff Joe Woods is a law and order man who says he practices justice.

He thinks the use of Mace is humane and he dislikes Mayor Daley's politics. He also says he would have walked along with those construction workers last week in New York. Those construction workers marched along Wall Street abusing students and demanding that flags lowered, in memory of the four slain Kent students, be raised.

The tall gray-haired Woods spoke to the Palatine Kiwanis Club about Law Enforcement in Cook County. He told his audience he doesn't mind it when he or his riot-control trained men are called "pigs" by protestors. "Pig to me" he said, "stands for pride, integrity and guts. It's abuse of my men that takes control. This abuse comes in the form of rock-throwing and being spit at in the face."

WOODS CONTINUED to get nods or grunts of approval from his audience as he spoke. They enjoyed his frequent attacks on student demonstrators and the media. He seemed to be voicing their thoughts. But he was appealing to their fright about the conditions in society. He seemed to be telling them, "Don't worry. Sheriff Joe won't let those kids destroy your property. But we'll only spray them with Mace. It won't hurt them. They'll just want to go home."

He also told them, "Sure some student violators are Communist inspired," and, "I do not like some TV people. They are instigators of some of our problems in Cook County and in the rest of the country."

He thinks they (television) agitated demonstrators at the Democratic Convention but that the press wouldn't normally instigate a riot. "Newspapers hardly create problems," he remarked. "It's when people see themselves on the 'boob tube' they start to misbehave."

About the Contract Buyers League evictions, Woods said he knows he was put in the middle by Mayor Daley to arouse public sentiment against him (Woods). But he said he's been put in the middle for a long time and that he's used to it.

COOK COUNTY Sheriff Joe Woods and Palatine Kiwanis President Bob Boles discuss the Sheriff's speech.

4 Plan Commission Members Reappointed

Four members of the Palatine Plan Commission were reappointed to the commission Monday night by Village Pres. John L. Moodie.

Charles Silverblatt and Ronald Kennedy were appointed to terms which expire May 1, 1972.

Conrad Hansen and Plan Commission Pres. Thomas A. Moody were appointed to terms which expire May 1, 1973. Moody was again designated president.

Demonstrators Offer Nothing, Says Cop

The week May 10 - 16 has been set aside by presidential proclamation to honor policemen throughout the nation.

The policeman, along with the fireman, the nurse and the mailman, are still revered in most grade school classrooms. And the citizens voting for law and order candidates still view the policeman as an instrument of one of America's highest ideals.

But there is a segment in our country, a little older than the grade school student and younger than the electorate, that refutes the policeman's integrity. They call him "pig."

The reaction from the law enforcers has ranged from anger to quiet indignity, but they all agree the attack is unjust.

"We are just like everyone else, but we wear uniforms and carry guns," objected Patrolman Roger Holt, administrative aide to the commander at the Cook County Sheriff's north suburban station in Niles.

"IT IS WRONG to classify us as one group," added Holt. "We are all individuals."

"The newspapers and TV always show everything the policeman does wrong. But we have files of letters from citizens commemorating the work of the policemen in our department. And that never gets in the headlines."

On the suburban beat, the 80 men at the Niles station rarely come into direct contact with the element that derides them. However, they were on standby all last week during the demonstrations by students in Evanston. And they have been called into the city many times to evict residents who have not fulfilled contract buyers agreements.

"Demonstrators, in my opinion, are stupid," said Holt. "They don't like the form of government they have, but they don't offer a solution."

"ANYONE CAN GO out and burn buildings and throw rocks. It doesn't take much intelligence. But it does take intelligence to find a solution to society's problems."

Holt said he didn't believe a division exists between the police and all youth. "A lot of our officers have friends in college. But these students have parents who taught them right from wrong."

While demonstrations don't rate high on the Niles station's list of problems, a shortage in manpower does. The 80 man force is responsible for all of the unincorporated areas in Cook County, north of the Eisenhower Expressway, and west of Elgin.

SIX CARS PATROL during each shift, backed up by six to 10 policemen. For Prospect Heights, the largest unincorporated area in Cook County, this means only one car is patrolling the community along with other areas.

"Our situation isn't that critical, but we could always use more men," said

5 Play Monopoly Through Turmoil

While campus unrest has dominated the scene at Southern Illinois University for the past few days, five students including a Palatine boy were engaged in a quieter activity.

While the school was closed because of protests and demonstrations, the five students finished 75 hours of nonstop playing of the game Monopoly.

Among the students was 19-year-old Kurt Johnson of Palatine.

The group broke the old record of 68½ hours of building empires with play money, according to Parker Brothers, manufacturers of the game.

THE STUDENTS began playing before National Guardsmen came to the campus and city officials imposed curfews for three nights. Though it all, the game went on without the participants apparently being fully aware of the events outside their dormitory.

Other students in the game with Johnson were Doug McKirahan of Barrington, Randy Parker of Cambria, Ill., Tom Campbell, Champaign, Ill., and Dan

Holt. "I'd like to see us go into a county-wide crime laboratory and detective agency. But the county is too old to have a centralized police force. They had it all along in England. But here, there are too many jealousies between towns."

None of the local politicians and police chiefs will want to give up the position they already have," added Holt.

Holt objected to the current investigation of the Northwest Suburban Council of Associations (NSCA), a group of nine Prospect Heights organizations, into the opinions of the community towards hiring a private patrol service.

has to be registered in the state of Illinois. It is a heck of a thing to turn a force loose on the citizens that isn't trained and properly equipped. They have plenty of protection with the county. We are more than happy to come out."

Contract policing, on the other hand, is "great" according to Holt. "We don't have a structure for it yet, but a committee is working on it." State legislation permits townships to contract with the county or a municipality for additional police patrol in unincorporated areas.

Looking even further into the future, Holt commented, "eventually I may be out of a job, because I don't think unincorporated areas will always exist."

Petersen Benefit Is May 22

The friends of Tom Petersen have reached about 30 per cent of their goal of selling 1,000 tickets for the Tom Petersen Benefit May 22.

Petersen, a 20-year resident of Palatine, died recently of leukemia, leaving his wife, Katie, and their eight children. The money is to be used to aid the children.

Mustard Oil May Just Work After All

It was reported yesterday in the Herald that a Palatine Health Department spokesman said cats are attracted instead of repelled to a spray the department has recommended.

However, Richard Dawson, the health inspector, said yesterday that the mustard oil spray is effective in keeping cats away from garbage bags.

Donald J. Hunter, 458 Monterey, who is spearheading the drive, said about 300 of the tickets have been sold. There are 4,000 tickets in circulation, he said, and if 1,000 of them could be sold it would raise $5,000 for the children.

THE BENEFIT is slated May 22 in St. James Social Center, Arlington Heights, and will feature entertainment by 75 Up With People singers starting at 9 p.m.

Tickets, $5 each, are available at the Palatine Savings and Loan association, the First Bank and Trust Co. in Palatine, and at the door.

For those unable to attend but would like to contribute to the family, donations can be sent to the Tom Petersen Children's Benefit Account, care of the Palatine Savings and Loan Association.

Students Urge Smoking Lounge

A recommendation to establish a smoking lounge in Palatine High School is expected to be presented to the Dist. 211 board of education tonight.

Either a representative of the Palatine High student council or school Prin. Leonard Newendorp, in the capacity of an official representative of the school, will present the student's request.

The gist of the request entails an area or room designated for student smoking in order to separate the non-smokers from the smokers. Richard Kolze, superintendent-elect, said.

Kolze said the students have made their request not in an effort to condone student smoking, but to present a realistic solution to the fact that students do smoke, and to eliminate the tendency of smokers to use school washrooms and street corners as a smoking area.

Dist. 211 board members were presented written copies of the request at a special meeting May 9 and will discuss, and possibly decide the issue tonight.

A Fire Call Too Late?

by JUDY BRANDES

"My first thought was 'They didn't call us soon enough.'"

The speaker was Bruce Winter, a full-time fireman in the Rolling Meadows fire department.

He and 14 other full-time and volunteers who led the battle to stop the fire in a Three Fountains apartment building 10 days ago were discussing what happened from the moment they got the call to their return to the fire station several hours later.

"When we pulled out of the station on Meadow Drive, I could see the smoke already and knew we were in trouble," Charlie Sellards, the first officer to arrive at the fire said. Sellards radioed Arlington Heights for mutual assistance while en route to Three Fountains.

"Flames were already coming out the patio doors and that first floor apartment was burned out when we got there," Sellards said.

HE AND THE MEN on the first engine to arrive went after the apartment where the fire began. "We thought we had it out until we went around the south end and saw it going up the stairwell. We couldn't get in. The heat was too much."

On the way into Three Fountains, the firemen's hearts were pumping madly, they agree. "I had Thumper with me all the way," Bill Schmidt, engineer on the first engine to arrive, said.

The men knew 5201 Carriage Way Drive was a building built before the life safety code was adopted by the city. They were expecting the fire to be bad, but didn't realize until later what type of fire it was.

"It was a hidden fire," Fire Chief Thomas Fogerty explained. Fogerty and four firemen were attending class at Harper Junior College when they heard about Three Fountains. "No matter what wall we took off, we always found fire. Once the fire got into the hallway, I knew it would move to other areas."

BEFORE FOGERTY arrived, Sellards was the officer in charge. "You call for all this equipment and it comes in. They're asking where you want them to go. I had to make a lot of decisions in a few seconds."

The first three engines to arrive, Rolling Meadows two and the aerial ladder from Arlington Heights, didn't get slowed down with traffic. The others, including the Mount Prospect snorkel, had trouble getting through the traffic which materialized as more people came to watch the fire.

Engineer Schmidt was responsible for laying the lines and hooking up to the fire hydrant. "I went past the first hydrant because people were standing there and I didn't see it," Schmidt said.

With a large fire, the department hooks up "hard sections" of hose to get enough water. "I was afraid we weren't going to get the hard section on the hydrant."

SCHMIDT AND FIREMAN Jack Fahn

found the hydrant caps too low to the ground and when they finally got the top cap off, they had to clean the mud off before the hoses could be attached.

People trapped on the balconies were helped off by Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights men who arrived early on the scene.

"We got the police chief and two others off the back balcony and then went on up to the roof," Assistant Fire Chief Don Marshall, a volunteer, said. From the front, fire watchers couldn't see the men on the roof, who were working in the trough on the "M-shaped" roof.

"We stayed up there knocking holes in the roof to ventilate the fire until the tar started to bubble and the chief ordered us off," Marshall continued.

Red hot railings, intense black smoke and searing heat prevented teams of men from penetrating into the hallways. "We crawled in on our bellies from the balcony on the second floor with fire above and around us," Ed Retzer, a volunteer, explained. "It's a scary feeling when you turn to crawl back out in a dark room and run into a wall every way you turn."

RESCUE AND SEARCH teams couldn't get into the building.

"We couldn't get in, the smoke was so black and thick," Sellards said.

The places the fire burned into were scattered. "You have to remember, a fireman is only in one place. We couldn't see all the places the fire was breaking out," Bruce Winter said.

"The men got mad at me when I ordered them out of the building," Chief Fogerty chuckled. "They couldn't see what was going on, of course, but I could see it was dangerous."

No fireman can recall what he did when. "The only reason I knew it was 2:30 in the morning was that I had scratched myself when I climbed into the attic and realized later it hurt. The watch was on my arm when I looked at the scratch," Marshall said.

"IT WAS A TERRIFIC stop on the fire," Fogerty said. "Fire chiefs from other areas complimented us on how much we were able to save."

Dick Blane, who singed his ears working on the second and third floors, told how the only empty apartment in the building wasn't damaged too much. "If those tenants had only used common sense in closing doors, the fire probably wouldn't have gone as far as it did. When we went back the next day, there were some places, like closets, which had smoke damage, but no water and things weren't burned. We pulled three mink coats unharmed out of one closet."

Chief Fogerty attributes the spread of the fire to the fact that the door to the apartment where it started was left open.

"We didn't realize how fast it was going and didn't know it had gotten to the other end when we arrived," Winter said. "When I saw those flames, though, I knew that fire had a good start before we got there. My first thought was 'They didn't call us soon enough.'"

Firemen Say 'Thank You'

Rolling Meadows Fire Chief Thomas Fogerty and the men and officers in the Rolling Meadows Fire Protection District have issued a statement thanking the persons who assisted the department in fighting the fire at Three Fountains Apartments on Algonquin Road last week.

In the statement issued yesterday, Fogerty and his men said they would like to express "their sincere appreciation to all individuals, in particular the young people, for their unselfish efforts in assisting the firemen on Monday, May 4, 1970, at the Three Fountains fire."

"Their tireless perseverance," the statement continued, "served as encouragement for the firemen and certainly contradicted some of the rather adverse publicity that young people have been receiving here of late."

"The Rolling Meadows Fire Department cannot possibly say enough to thank all who were involved, but we hope this letter will, in some way, serve to publicly commend those individuals who assisted us that night," the statement finished.

"SIDEWALK CHIEFS don't realize that as they are running out of a fire, the poor firemen have to be running into it," Lt. Ted Loesch, Rolling Meadows fire department, said of those who criticized his department about the Three Fountains apartment fire. Loesch and the department explain what they thought of while they fought the fire May 4.

Schools Prepare For Disasters

When disasters, particularly those concerning the weather, occur, telephone lines are often down and communication depends on radio contact.

Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 officials are experimenting with an alert monitor system which will enable the Rolling Meadows police department to keep them advised of disaster conditions when they occur.

"We have disaster and emergency procedures already set up," Joseph Kiszka, assistant superintendent, said. "This alert monitor system will let us know from a reliable source what is happening."

So many times, Kiszka pointed out, different people have different ways of describing what is happening.

"FOR EXAMPLE, tornado watch, tornado warning and tornado alert mean different things to different groups. By using one source and defining what means what, we will know what is going on," Kiszka said.

Dist. 15 has purchased 2 receivers, called decoders, to experiment with. An encoder, which switches on the decoder so the school district can receive information over the police radio, is located in the Rolling Meadows police department.

Once the encoder is turned on by the police, a siren-like sound will be emitted from the decoder in a superintendent or principal's office. After the siren stops, a person listening to the decoder can pick up special messages from the Rolling Meadows police radio.

"We are willing to contact the schools when severe weather conditions and other disasters occur and also when there is an all-clear," Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis Case, said.

DURING THE TRIAL period, one of the decoders will travel to every school in Dist. 15 to be tested. To purchase the rest of the decoders for all the schools, the City of Rolling Meadows has requested federal funds for the project. One decoder will remain in the Dist. 15 administration building.

"Right now all we can use to let principals know of a severe weather condition is the telephone," Kiszka said. "With something like the alert monitor system, all of them can be contacted by the Rolling Meadows police."

The system does not allow anyone with a decoder to transmit and communicate with other units. Decoders are only used to receive messages from the frequency they are pre-set for.

In Dist. 15 the decoders will be tuned to the Rolling Meadows local government channel.

"We've been working on this proposal and looking at systems for several months now," Kiszka said. "The board of education has studied the proposals and decided to purchase the first two to find out how they work."

BLACK BOXES which emit siren-like sounds to attract attention will be located in principal's offices in Dist. 15 so they can receive emergency disaster information direct from the Rolling Meadows police department. Assistant Supt. Joseph Kiszka said the system is still being experimented with by the district.

Mom: 'No One Ever Cried'

by BETSY BROOKER

Sixteen months ago, Mrs. Rosemary Bornhofen was lying in a hospital bed, completely paralyzed on her left side.

This Mother's Day, Rosemary was awarded a medallion and named "Handicapped Mother of the Year" by the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago.

The 28-year-old Prospect Heights resident walked up to the stand, completely unaided, to receive her award. A slight limp was the only trace left of the stroke she suffered a year and a half ago, after a blood clot blocked a main artery in her brain.

The tragedy was threefold for Rosemary because she had just returned from the hospital the day before after the birth of her first child, Gina Marie. And her father had died of cancer while she was in the hospital delivering Gina.

TODAY, ROSEMARY can sit in her kitchen and casually joke about her misfortune over a cup of coffee. Her sense of humor has carried her through the past year.

She is an attractive young woman with a windswept pixie hair cut and an open smile. While she is dark, her young daughter is very fair with soft blond hair.

Gina has probably fared the best since her mother's stroke because she has benefited from the love of at least four mother figures: Rosemary, two grandmothers and an aunt.

The stroke was a severe blow for the whole family, but they all pitched in and lent support, said Rosemary.

"I was asleep when it happened. It was early Sunday morning, a day after I got home from the hospital. My husband thought I was having a nightmare and woke me up. I had a terrible headache.

He tried to help me walk to the bathroom so I could take an aspirin but I kept falling down. I couldn't stand up."

"HE CALLED MY brother and sister-in-law then, and they came over and watched my baby while my husband drove me to the hospital."

Rosemary stayed in the hospital until February, when she was transferred to the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago. "While I was in the hospital, everything was done for me, including bed baths. As soon as I got to the institute they put me into a plastic wheel chair and took me into the shower room. I never realized what a luxury a shower is before."

Everything was different at the institute, said Rosemary. "They encouraged you to help yourself. I didn't get breakfast in bed anymore, but had to wheel myself down to the cafeteria."

When Rosemary first arrived at the institute, she couldn't move any part of the left side of her body. It was a trying time because there was no way for the doctors to know if the brain cells had been permanently damaged.

"They put me on an extensive therapy program so my muscles would be limber in case my damaged brain cells revived. Some people never recover from a stroke."

ROSEMARY WAS also taught how to work with one arm. "They brought my baby down, and the head nurse in the pediatrics department at Wesley Memorial Hospital came over to teach me how to hold, feed and diaper Gina with only my right arm."

"I had a special curved knife so I could cut my meat with one hand, by rocking it. I've still got it, but don't use it anymore."

"I also had a board with all sorts of hooks, locks and gadgets to practice on. One day I was having trouble with one of the hooks, and a man next to me with an artificial arm offered to help me."

"There are so many people worse off than you at the institute, you can't feel sorry for yourself."

ROSEMARY'S MOTHER agreed saying, "I thought I would be depressed by the patients when I visited Rosemary, but they are so friendly and cheerful, they make you feel good."

"The first day I arrived at the institute my roommate asked me if I wanted to go to the movies with her. I didn't know what she was talking about, but later learned that the patients are taken on a trip once a week."

"And there was a Negro patient there we called 'the general.' He had been shot five times during a hold-up. I asked him one day if they had caught the robbers, and he said he knew who they were. So I told him he was lucky they were friends, or he would have gotten it worse."

"No one ever cries at the institute," added Rosemary.

In March, Rosemary was able to go home and visit the institute on an outpatient basis. By this time the muscles in her left leg had begun to move and she could walk with the aid of a brace and a cane.

BY THE MIDDLE OF the summer, she was able to move her left arm and throw away her sling. Two months later, she could walk without the brace.

Rosemary's mother stayed with her during her first few months at home, but now Rosemary is doing most of the housework herself and even driving.

"I feel more appreciative of simple things now," said Rosemary. "Like just moving around."

"You never realize how lucky you are until something like this happens to you."

AFTER A stroke 16 months ago, which paralyzed her left side, Rosemary Bornhofen, of Prospect Heights, is now able to assist her 16-month-old daughter Gina, in flower arranging, drive a car and play golf. She was recently named "Handicapped Mother of the Year" by the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago, where she received physical therapy for seven months.

'Sports World' Complex Offered

by MARY REIFSCHEIDER

"The Sports World," a recreation complex including a domed stadium with a seating capacity for 110,000, is being proposed for Schaumburg on 97 acres across from the WGN towers on Rte. 55.

The enclosed arena, with underground parking, could be home to major Chicago sports clubs now seeking new quarters, but it would also be available for local and amateur teams, its developer Lee Romano told the Herald Wednesday.

The 97 acres, fronting on Rte. 53 near the Interstate-90 breakoff, are not annexed to Schaumburg now. Romano has options on adjacent parcels that would make the land contiguous to the village. Mayor Robert O. Atcher told the Herald the land could be annexed by referendum.

Romano said he expects to bring the proposal before the Zoning Board of Appeals in the next several weeks.

"I HAVE BEEN approached by major sports groups seeking new locations that could occupy The Sports World," Romano said. He did not specify which teams are interested.

Atcher said a domed stadium is feasible for the Northwest area, especially since several of the major league Chicago teams are looking for new homes. The professional baseball and football leagues are encouraging Chicago teams to find larger quarters that will increase attendance and revenues.

A domed sports stadium was once discussed for Arlington Park, but plans never got off the ground and apparently were scuttled when the race track was purchased by Gulf-Western.

The Sports World, with a dome that opens and closes, would have twice the seating capacity as the Houston Astro-dome, now the only completed enclosed stadium, which holds 44,500 spectators.

In addition to Sports World, the complex would include "The Adventure," a center with restaurants, lounges, a roller skating and ice skating rinks, caves and other activities, Romano said.

ROMANO, WHO IS THE developer of the Planet Project in Schaumburg, noted for the proposed 113-story building, has other parcels to be developed in Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights.

The developer noted that the sports complex, which would cost upwards of $100 million, would not disturb any community or its residents. It is surrounded on three sides by the Cook County Forest Preserve.

Romano said that Sports World will centrally serve any area of Northwest Cook and North DuPage Counties that already has a population of over one million and will grow to many times that in the next 10 years.

He has not announced a timetable for building the stadium complex yet.

Romano expects to run into trouble from the Cook County Forest Preserve over the site. He has heard rumors that the forest preserve wants to add the 97 acres to its 3,500 acre holdings in the Schaumburg-Elk Grove vicinity.

"THE FOREST PRESERVE has ample land without this 97 acres. I intend to fight with everything I have for this," he said.

The site is now a tree nursery.

'Pig' to Woods Is Pride

by CYNTHIA TIVERS

Sheriff Joe Woods is a law and order man who says he practices justice.

He thinks the use of Mace is humane and he dislikes Mayor Daley's politics. He also says he would have walked along with those construction workers last week in New York. Those construction workers marched along Wall Street abusing students and demanding that flags lowered, in memory of the four slain Kent students, be raised.

The tall gray-haired Woods spoke to the Palatine Kiwanis Club about Law Enforcement in Cook County. He told his audience he doesn't mind it when he or his riot-control trained men are called "pigs" by protestors. "Pig to me" he said, "stands for pride, integrity and guts. It's abuse of my men that takes control. This abuse comes in the form of rock-throwing and being spit at in the face."

WOODS CONTINUED to get nods or grunts of approval from his audience as he spoke. They enjoyed his frequent attacks on student demonstrators and the media. He seemed to be voicing their thoughts. But he was appealing to their fright about the conditions in society. He seemed to be telling them, "Don't worry. Sheriff Joe won't let those kids destroy your property. But we'll only spray them with Mace. It won't hurt them. They'll just want to go home."

He also told them, "Sure some student violators are Communist inspired," and, "I do not like some TV people. They are instigators of some of our problems in Cook County and in the rest of the country."

He thinks they (television) agitated demonstrators at the Democratic Convention but that the press wouldn't normally instigate a riot. "Newspapers hardly create problems," he remarked. "It's when people see themselves on the 'boob tube' they start to misbehave."

About the Contract Buyers League evictions, Woods said he knows he was put in the middle by Mayor Daley to arouse public sentiment against him (Woods). But he said he's been put in the middle for a long time and that he's used to it.

COOK COUNTY Sheriff Joe Woods and Palatine Kiwanis President Bob Boles discuss the Sheriff's speech.
